J. D. A. Morrow, General Director of Distribution of the Federal Fuel Administration, said the coal production for the coal year starting April 1 must reach 735,000,000 tons in order to meet the country's war needs, and that under the present rate of consumption and output the production of bituminous would fall short 71,000,000.

Other speakers today included W. K. Fields of Pittsburgh, Penn., President of the association, and former Ambassador to Italy William Potter, who is Federal Fuel Administrator for Pennsylvania. Mr. Field said the coal operators of the country are doing their best to co-operate with the Government and produce a record output of coal.

SCHOOL IS 100 YEARS OLD.

Institution Named for B. D. L. Southerland Observes Its Centenary.

Public School 3, better known as the B. D. L. Southerland School, at Hudson and Grove Streets, celebrated its hundredth anniversary yesterday afternoon. Everett P. Wheeler, ex-Congressman and member of the class of 1853, in a speech, reviewed the history of the school, and urged the children to do all they could to help win the war.

Charles W. Lawe, Park Ridge, N. J., showed a "good ticket" which he had won in 1852 for being "punctual, regular, and obedient" for one month. A playlet presented by girls from the middle grades depicted the changes that had taken place in the school since its first teacher, Shepherd Johnson, opened its doors. Mrs. H. Croswell Tuttle, a former student, announced that she would award a gold medal every year for the best paper on some topic of American history. Other speakers were James R. McFee, a graduate and founder of the B. D. L. Southerland Association, and Robert L. Harrison, formerly a member of the Board of Education. The school is named for the late B. D. L. Southerland, who was Principal from 1862 to 1902.

THE NOVEL THAT WOULDN'T WAIT!

THE IDEA first came to her several months ago. She brushed it aside because, like most authors, Kathleen Norris was engrossed in the war. And this was an idea for a novel which had nothing to do with the war.

But presently it returned, with greater intensity. Again she thrust it back and it was overshadowed by the struggle overseas.

The third time it came with even greater force. Here was a theme which would not be denied. It would not wait!

And so she wrote it—this story of a girl who tangled up the lives of those about her, of the great unselfish love of sisterhood—this story that she gave the name of "Sisters."

She sent it to GOOD HOUSEKEEPING—the very magazine which, above all others, has been devoting itself to the war service of American women. At first we wondered. But that was before we read it. Then we saw why Kathleen Norris could not wait to write this story. Then there was no choice. It wouldn't wait!

To you we feel that "Sisters" will be a welcome interlude. Not to distract your mind from what your duty is today. But rather to show you with new vividness how great the love of womankind can be, how eager in its sacrifice, in the life of every day.

And as you watch this book unfold its story in our pages, we think that you will turn again to all your burdens of today, refreshed and heartened by the glory of its message. Begin it, now, tonight!

EMERSON DIDN'T MOVE FORD

Reduction of Car Price, Witness Says, Was Not Due to Threat.

One of the witnesses yesterday in the trial of the Emerson Motors Company, its officers, and its selling agents on a charge of using the mails to defraud, now going on before Federal Judge Manton, was Frank L. Kleinschmidt, Vice President of the Ford Motors Company. One of the statements made by the defendants was that they had done a good thing in compelling the Ford Company to reduce the price of its cars. Several of the employes of the Ford Company had been employed by the Emerson Company.

The witness said that the fact that the Emerson Company intended to make a car for $250 had no effect on the Ford Company and in no way influenced the Ford Company to reduce its price from $450 to $350.

Fred L. Hunt, who had charge of the Emerson plant in Long Island City, testified that it was the custom of the Emerson concern to get parts of other cars and to use them in completing its own machines.

The trial will be continued today.

YOU ASK ME how we have done it in the Navy? A great many people are asking, and we can give them all a straight American answer . . . . . Every man in the Navy is a student. Every man is a fighter. Every man is on tiptoe to put the big game through for Democracy, Patriotism, and Victory!!

Josephus Daniels

For that straight American answer, turn to page 418 of Hearst's Magazine for June. There you will find Secretary Daniels' signed statement on our New Navy.

YOU owe it to yourself to read this article. You owe it to yourself to know the glorious facts about the United States Navy. You owe it to yourself to know that our Navy—your Navy—is already second, and well on its way to being the greatest Navy in the world. You owe it to yourself to line up squarely with Hearst's Magazine. Hearst's stands solidly behind the President. Hearst's knows how able are the men he has gathered about him. And Hearst's Magazine—unlike some of the feebler magazines—realizes that these men are doing things that will make you, and every red-blooded American proud—whenever you are told the real facts!

HEARST'S is going to give you the real facts. It's your war just as much as Secretary Daniels' war or Secretary Baker's war. Why, then, shouldn't you know exactly what Secretary Daniels and Secretary Baker are doing? Hearst's Magazine will tell you. You can find on any newsstand today Daniels' signed statement about the Navy. And next month, Hearst's will give you Secretary Baker's own statement on the Army. Aren't you more than ready for a patriotic constructive policy like Hearst's? Aren't you about tired of reading attacks on our ablest executives written, oftentimes, by men you would hesitate to put in complete charge of a corner grocery store?

TO Daniels, Baker, and the others who are making our Nation the chief figure in the world's most magnificent enterprise—Hearst's offers the chance to fling the Truth in the face of the puny pessimists, petty politicians and professional faultfinders.

To an audience of readers of Hearst's Magazine—a half million real Americans—patriotic, sincere, lovers of fair play—Secretary Daniels addresses himself. Are you one of them? Do you dare to face the facts? Are you willing to learn how good America really is?

If you don't want to think well of your Government, you won't want Hearst's. But—if you are open minded and really prefer to be patriotic, you won't fail to start the series with Secretary Daniels in the June

HOME RUN EPIDEMIC IS FATAL TO YANKS

Joe Wood Again Breaks Out with Circuit Fever and Beats New York, 3 to 2.

O'NEILL ALSO IS STRICKEN

Cleveland Catcher Pounds Ball Out of Park and Helps Dethrone Russell.

A violent epidemic of home runs broke out among the Cleveland Indians at the Polo Grounds yesterday, and the Yanks finished on the sad end of a 3 to 2 score. Joe Wood, who has taken up the home run fad seriously, slapped the ball into the right field stand in the seventh while Roth was on the bases and tied the score. A few moments later Steve O'Neill larruped a homer into the bleachers and won the game right then and there.

Outside of that ferocious seventh, the Clevelands were blind before Allan Russell's pitching. Up to that time they got only one hit, Roth making a single in the fourth. Before Wood exposed the blow which tied the game, Al Walters and Russell met in the middle of the diamond and held a hurried conversation. No one knows whether they were talking about baseball or the price of fur coats in the Desert of Sahara.

The very next ball that Russell pitched after the chest-to-chest talk was a wild one on the outside. Wood went out after it and punched it into the right field stand. This was rather unusual for Joseph, because he usually laces them into the left field bleachers.

The Yanks didn't lose because opportunities to win were lacking, for golden chances bobbed up in the seventh and eighth, when it seemed possible to score half a dozen runs. After Walters had gone out at first in the seventh, Russell walked. Gilhooley hit a grounder to Ed Miller, who made a wild throw to second trying to force Russell, thus mussing up a chance for a possible double play. Peckinpaugh singled to centre and jammed the bases.

O'Loughlin Gets Out of the Way.

One would naturally assume that this layout was most encouraging with Home Run Baker at the bat. Umpire Silk O'Loughlin was posing in the diamond back of second base, and Baker requested Silk to camp somewhere else, as his noble figure was just in line with his batting eye as he glued it on the ball. Silk obligingly moved out of the line of Baker's vision, for the umpire is obliging anyway about almost anything except changing a decision.

Baker was too all-fired anxious to slam the ball out of the lot, and when Jim Bagby sent over a slow floater Baker swung with all his might and executed no damage whatever except to roll an easy bounder down to Ed Miller, who promptly tossed the ball home and forced Russell at the plate. Thus did Baker's impatience play havoc with a good chance to win. Derrill Pratt tried to make up for Baker's shortcomings, and he almost did it, for he hammered a terrific liner to centre field, but one might as well hit the ball right into a bushel basket as in the garden where Tris Speaker is on watch. Tris raced back and made a good catch.

Again in the eighth, the Yanks had everything set to start a big blowup on Bagby, but again the fuse was damp. After Pipp flied to centre, Bodie singled to left, and Miller hoisted a fly to Tuck Turner. Walters singled to centre, putting Ping on second. Ray Caldwell was rushed in as a pinch hitter for Russell, and what do you think he did? Shame on him, he whiffed!

The Yanks got a run in the first. With one gone, Peck walked and went to third on Baker's single to left. He scored on Pratt's sacrifice fly to Wood.

Pratt Hits Timely.

Gilhooley opened the third with a nice single to left and went to second on Peck's sacrifice. Baker's long drive was gathered in by Bobby Roth over near the right field wall, and Gilhooley went to third after the catch. Pratt very properly pickled a two-bagger to left and sent Gilhooley over the platter.

With the score 2 to 0 and Russell behaving himself, it looked like another occasion of joy for Huggins's lads. Roth got the only hit made off Russell up to the seventh, and Roth again got busy in the seventh. He cudgeled a two-bagger over against the left field stockade, and Wambsganss rolled an easy grounder to Peck. The Yank shortstop surprised everybody by failing to make an easy play on Roth at third, making a difficult throw to first instead and retiring Wamby.

Joe Wood then parked the ball into the grand stand and sent Roth home ahead of him, tying the score. Turner lifted a foul to Walters and Steve O'Neill walloped the ball into the bleachers, and that's about all there was to it.

Before the game, Pat Kyne presented Peckinpaugh with a gold watch for playing such a fine game Monday, and Wambsganss was presented with a diamond stickpin by Pat for stealing home in the same game. The Yanks received no presents for what they did yesterday.

BRAVES MAKE CLEAN SWEEP

Boston Takes Third Successive Game from Pirates.

PITTSBURGH, May 28.—The Boston Braves made a clean sweep of the three-game series with the Pittsburgh Pirates, winning again today, 6 to 2.

Sanders was hit hard by the visitors and he gave way to Jacobs in the fifth inning. The latter held Boston scoreless for the remainder of the game.

Manager Bezdek of the Pirates was ordered from the coaching lines by Umpire O'Day, and Third Baseman McKechnie was ordered out of the game at the same time when they protested too vigorously against decisions at the plate.

NORSE GIRL GAINS SEMI-FINAL ROUND

Plays Sterling Tennis in Winning Her Way Through Three Matches at Pelham.

The brilliant play of Miss Molla Bjurstedt, holder of the women's national singles championship, was the outstanding feature of the opening rounds of the annual women's invitation tennis tournament on the courts of the Pelham Country Club yesterday. With the lustre of her game in nowise dimmed by the meagre practice which the season has thus far afforded, the famous Norse girl forced her way through to the semi-final round of the event by winning three keenly waged matches.

In the first round she defeated Miss Helene Pollak at 6—0, 6—1, in the second round disposed of Miss Edith Handy at 6—1, 6—4, and in the third round earned the verdict over Mrs. Homer S. Green at 6—2, 6—3. It was this last match which gave the title holder her sharpest battle of the tournament, a contest in which the score hardly indicates the calibre of play.

There were eighteen players entered, and among them the best that the metropolitan district could call to the courts. Although it may be said that the matches ran true to form in the great majority of instances, there were several notable players who fell by the wayside. Among them was Miss Clare Cassel, who is playing in her first tournament since the United States National Lawn Tennis Association reconsidered its action in barring her from amateur tournaments more than a year ago. Miss Cassel won her second-round match against Mrs. Ernest Eberhardt at 6—2, 6—0, but could not withstand the spirited play of Mrs. Edward Raymond, former metropolitan champion, in the third round, and was beaten at 6—1, 7—5.

Another player, who caused something of a sensation in tennis circles during the Winter, Mrs. Johan Rogge, also was among the early victims. She was beaten in two love sets by Mrs. Homer S. Green. Doubtless the nearest approach to an upset was the defeat of Mrs. H. F. Morse, née Marion Vanderhoef, who was runner-up to Miss Bjurstedt in the national patriotic tournament at Philadelphia last Summer, by Miss Marie Wagner in the third round. The score was 6—1, 6—2.

The four players who attained the semi-final round brackets were Miss Wagner, Miss Molla Bjurstedt, Mrs. Edward Raymond, and Mrs. Rawson L. Wood. Mrs. Wood played some clever tennis in making her advance. In the second round she vanquished Mrs. Benjamin F. Briggs at 6—2, 6—4, and then won a sharply played three-set encounter from Mrs. E. V. Lynch at 4—6, 7—5, 6—0.

The play of Miss Bjurstedt was watched with especial interest, as the indoor season of last Winter seemed to indicate that the Norse queen was in as good, if not better, stroke than at any time since her tennis début in this country. In playing against Mrs. Green, Miss Bjurstedt was opposed by a contestant of remarkable resourcefulness and one who has the ability to make astonishing gets. The score of 6—2, 6—3 in favor of Miss Bjurstedt shows nothing of many keen rallies that were played.

Miss Bjurstedt found Mrs. Green equally good off both forehand and backhand, and she had to play carefully to make the openings for her famous passing shots down the lines or cross court. Mrs. Green's driving was deep, and as a result Miss Bjurstedt did not often essay the net attack which she employed with pronounced success during the latter part of last season. Her driving from the base line, or from behind it, often was hard and remarkably free from errors, but with Mrs. Green covering court by astonishing fleetness of foot the Norse girl had a stern contest on her hands before pulling out the victory.

From the way of the contest now it may be that the tournament of two years ago will be repeated as far as the final round is concerned. At that time Mrs. Raymond and Miss Bjurstedt were the rivals, and it appears that they will once again be the finalists. Miss Bjurstedt could hardly be expected to have much difficulty in disposing of Miss Wagner in the upper half semi-final. In the lower half there will doubtless be a merry contest between Mrs. Raymond and Mrs. Wood, and with a rather more severe game than her rival, Mrs. Raymond may force her way through to the final bracket.

The summaries:

First Round.—Miss Molla Bjurstedt defeated Miss Helene Pollak, 6—0, 6—1; Miss Carona Winn defeated Mrs. R. S. Leachman, 6—2, 2—6, 6—2.

Second Round.—Miss Marie Wagner defeated Mrs. L. G. Morris, 6—1, 6—2; Mrs. H. F. Morse defeated Miss Elizabeth Holden, 6—4, 5—7, 6—4; Mrs. Homer S. Green defeated Mrs. Johan Rogge, 6—0, 6—0; Miss Molla Bjurstedt defeated Miss Edith Handy, 6—1, 6—4; Mrs. Edward Raymond defeated Miss Carona Winn, 6—2, 6—3; Miss Clare Cassel defeated Mrs. Ernest Eberhardt, 6—2, 6—0; Mrs. Rawson L. Wood defeated Mrs. B. F. Briggs, 6—2, 6—4; Mrs. E. V. Lynch defeated Mrs. W. H. Pritchard, 6—2, 6—4.

Third Round.—Miss Marie Wagner defeated Mrs. H. F. Morse, 6—1, 6—2; Miss Molla Bjurstedt defeated Mrs. Homer S. Green, 6—2, 6—3; Mrs. Edward Raymond defeated Miss Clare Cassel, 6—1, 7—5; Mrs. Rawson L. Wood defeated Mrs. E. V. Lynch, 4—6, 7—5, 6—0.

BIG OFFER FOR CHEVROLET.

Veteran Driver Has Added Incentive to Win Handicap Race.

Louis Chevrolet, speedway champion of 1917, has an added incentive to win the Harkness Handicap at Sheepshead Bay Speedway tomorrow afternoon. Chevrolet last night received an offer of $5,000 to compete in the Chicago Auto Derby on June 22, provided he finishes first in the big 100-mile race at the seaside course Memorial Day. The offer was made by Charles H. Porter, who is managing the Chicago event.

Chevrolet will be the only driver who will start from scratch, and he will have to break all existing records for 100 miles in order to flash across the finish line ahead of such pilots as Ralph De Palma, Dario Resta, Barney Oldfield, Ralph Mulford, Ira Vail, Eddie Hearn, Dan Hickey, Tommy Milton, and a dozen others.

All the drivers who will start in the Harkness event will hold a meeting today with Fred J. Wagner, starter and handicapper, and receive their handicaps for the Futurity Handicap, which will be run in two heats and a final at ten miles. De Palma and Resta will start from scratch in the two heats.

Mrs. L. C. Stockton of Raritan Valley led a field of twenty women golfers who participated in the one-day tournament of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association on the links of the Fairview Country Club yesterday. Mrs. Stockton went over the course for a 95, earning the day's low gross prize. Miss Beatrice Lounsberry of the Bedford Country Club accounted for the low net prize with a card of 98, 2—96. In an approaching and putting competition Mrs. Henry Blumenthal was successful, while Mrs. S. F. Dribben was the runner-up.

PAWLING WINS ON LINKS.

The golf team of Pawling School won its second consecutive victory this season when it triumphed over Lawrenceville in a match yesterday on the Pawling links, at Pawling, N. Y., by the score of 7 to 5. The points were distributed under the Nassau system. In three of the four matches Pawling victories were scored. Stacey Robeson led the successful team in its triumph with a three-point victory over Battin of Lawrenceville, who was defeated 9 and 7.

NEWS OF THE LINKS.

Entries close tonight for the tournament scheduled to start on the Bayside links tomorrow. It does not appear to be generally understood that the open event, which will be held under the auspices of the Matanwok Golf Club, will continue on Friday and Saturday. There will be a medal play test in the morning, followed by the first match round after luncheon. Dr. A. T. Haight, winner of the Bayside open last Fall, expects to play again.

Other attractions also are carded. They include a ball sweepstakes and a flag contest. There will be an entrance fee of $1, the idea being to turn over the entire proceeds to the Commission on Training Camp Activities.

In a tournament extending over a period of several weeks J. M. Clark won the title "champion of automobile row" on the links of the Dunwoodie Country Club yesterday. In the semi-final round J. Skelly beat E. H. Larson 2 up and Clark won from Percy Barton by default. In the final, handicap conditions, Clark, although asked to concede his opponent an initial advantage of 8 up, defeated Skelly by a 2 and 1 margin. Other prize winners were as follows: First beaten division, A. Van Alstyne; second beaten division, W. C. Poertner; third beaten division, George McCutcheon.

The course of the Shawnee Country Club will be opened for the season today, and the program calls for four tournaments, the same as last year. As usual, the women will be the first to gather, June 19 to 22 being set aside for their benefit. July 18 to 20 will see the amateurs playing for the Buckwood trophy, while on Aug. 7 and 8 the professionals will hold forth. The Fall invitation dates are Oct. 10 to 12.

CAPABLANCA HELD TO DRAW

Chajes Provides Struggle Against Cuban Chess Expert.

For the third time since his return to New York José R. Capablanca, the Cuban chess champion, took part yesterday in a rapid transit tournament at the Manhattan Chess Club and for the third time he captured the first prize without the loss of a game, but for the first time he failed to make a clean score. His final total was 4½—½. To Oscar Chajes, State champion, fell the distinction of making a draw with the Cuban expert, but the latter had to be content with second prize on account of a loss to Janowski of Paris, whom he defeated recently in a set match.

ROWING REGATTA ARRANGED

Annual Races on Harlem River to Have New Features.

One of the most interesting features of the annual regatta of the New York Rowing Association, which will be held over the Harlem River course tomorrow will be the races for crews from the naval training stations. The embryo sailors are entered in a twelve-oared cutter race. So many crews entered the Pelham Bay station that elimination races had to be held to reduce the entry to two crews. Crews will also be entered from the training ship Granite State, and possibly from several of the battleships.

One schoolboy race is on the program, in which New Rochelle and Stuyvesant will compete, and in another, a double-gig event, Morris and Stuyvesant are the entrants.

The other events are the usual ones of the annual regatta. Entries have been received from the Nonpareil, the Metropolitan, the Bohemian, the Active, and the Woodcliff Clubs. More than 25 per cent. of the membership in the various boat clubs is now in the service, and for this reason there will be no effort to have races for seniors and juniors. The men will be grouped together as the case may demand.

TANK CORPS PLANS GAMES.

Athletic Contests Being Arranged at Camp Colt for Tomorrow.

CAMP COLT, Gettysburg, Penn., May 28.—A military athletic meet has been arranged by the Tank Corps, U. S. A., to be held at Nixon Field, home of Pennsylvania College in Gettysburg, on Memorial Day, in which a number of the best boxers and wrestlers in the United States Army will be seen in action. Contests in the ring and on the mat will be the features, and in addition there will be a number of track and field events and a baseball contest, which will bring together the crack nine of Camp Colt and another first-class team.

Among the events on the program, in addition to the boxing, wrestling, and baseball contests, are 100-yard dash, 220-yard hurdle race, one-mile relay race, one-mile run and a pole vault. That the competition will be keen is evidenced by the spirit with which the various companies have entered into their preliminary training. The relay race will draw a team from every battalion in the camp. When the trial races were held several of the company teams registered scores that came close to rivaling the figures recorded by the competing teams in the last University of Pennsylvania relay carnival. As a matter of fact many of the teams will be composed of former university men who represented their Alma Maters on the cinderpath.

Special trains will be run into Gettysburg on Memorial Day for the annual exercises there. The meet will not start until 2:30, just after the termination of the exercises.

JOCKEY IS CHEERED FOR SKILLFUL RIDE

Racegoers at Belmont Park yesterday paid a tribute to Johnny Loftus that is seldom earned by jockeys these days when he brought A. K. Macomber's Stargazer home first in the Garden City Handicap after the horse had been practically left at the post. When he returned to the scales to weigh out the rider was the recipient of hearty cheers from the crowd that had liberally supported the Macomber four-year-old. That the applause was meant for the jockey and not for the horse was made evident when the cheers were renewed as Loftus came out of the stand after making his weight.

Loftus has long been regarded as the premier jockey, and the fact that he had the mount on Stargazer in the feature race had much to do with the colt being backed from 7 to 5 to an odds-on favorite. A storm broke just before the race and the horses went to the six and a half furlong post for the start in a heavy rain.

Stargazer had the inside position in the field of seven good handicap performers, but his supporters received a shock when he reared as the barrier went up, and before he got in motion his competitors were hustling to the bend, with the leaders fifteen or twenty lengths in advance of the favorite.

There were some shifty sprinters in front of him, with Rhine Maiden and Tea Caddy showing the way, so that Loftus would have been justified if he had retired from the chase, especially as the event was a handicap, with the weights supposedly adjusted to a nicety. Instead of giving up the fight, however, Loftus sat down to ride with all the skill and finish at his command.

Gradually he worked his way through the field until at the stretch turn he saw an opening and shot his mount through to emerge in third place, but still far behind Tea Caddy and Rhine Maiden, which had the race to themselves many lengths in front. The task of Loftus and Stargazer looked hopeless, but it was evident that the jockey was making a bold bid to overcome his early disadvantage and land the Macomber colors in front. The crowd cheered his gallant effort, and, gaining on the leaders at every stride, Loftus redoubled his efforts in the last sixteenth and Stargazer closed with a rush that landed him a neck in front of Tea Caddy, which beat Rhine Maiden a nose for the place.

Before the rain made the track slow the Brighton Stable's Flags showed great speed when he galloped home in the second race for two-year-olds, in which he was a prohibitive favorite. Flags stepped the five and a half furlongs in 1:04 2-5, which is three-fifths of a second slower than the track record.

Large fields went to the post for both the two-year-old races, but in the first the public had the satisfaction of selecting the winner in Mrs. R. L. Bressler's Sherman A., a son of Von Tromp, that easily defeated G. D. Widener's Osgood.

John E. Madden caused an upset in the other race for two-year-olds, which was confined to fillies and had many supposed good things. The Master of Hamburg Place sent Ambassador III., an imported daughter of Sweeper, to the post, and in a tight finish she won from Major Belmont's Duchess Lace, with C. E. Mickelwait's Zuleika third.

GOVERNMENT GETS HORSES.

A. K. Macomber Presents More Sires for Remount Purposes.

A. K. Macomber Monday donated the colt War Victory to the breeding bureau of the Jockey Club, and yesterday, in view of the demand for thoroughbred sires to get cavalry remounts, he decided to make a further gift. Included in the list of half a dozen well bred horses is Paicines, a half-brother to Mr. Macomber's Preakness winner, War Cloud. The Federal authorities will be notified that any and all of these horses are at their disposal. The new lot are quartered in Kentucky, but War Victory is at Belmont Park and will be inspected by an agent of the Government on Saturday. The horses given by Mr. Macomber and their breeding follow:

Included in the purchase was a filly foaled by Ballot and a yearling by The Manager, out of Miss Crittenden. The mare has been bred back to Ballot and is believed to be in foal.

J. E. Widener and Thomas Welsh were not the only turfmen interested in Trompe La Mort's victory in the Metropolitan. John Sanford owns Kilconan, by Ladas, the dam of Verwood, sire of the Metropolitan winner, while A. H. Diaz of Cuba, who also saw the race, owns Orestes, a half-brother to Verwood.

SAILOR ATHLETES HOLD TRACK MEET

Engine Company Squad of Granite State Proves Superior in N. Y. A. C. Games.

Sailor duties were forgotten yesterday on the training ship U. S. S. Granite State, moored at the foot of West Ninety-sixth Street, as the bluejackets frolicked in a track and field meet provided by the New York Athletic Club. In a program of six events, concluding with a rowing race in which two cutters and a whaleboat were propelled by strong sailor arms through the Hudson, 100 of the men competed.

Representatives of the Gas Engine Company predominated. They won three events and were placed third in two others. In the 100-yard dash A. G. Dix registered the first Gas Engine Company victory, and the second came in the three-legged race, when J. Farrell and F. H. Haines hobbled to an easy triumph. The third victory was scored in the medicine ball team race, when Team No. 1 was successful.

The sailors got plenty of amusement out of the three-legged event, which was held after the storm. The field was dotted with several miniature lakes, and several of the teams toppled into them.

The biggest thrill came in the boat race over a mile stretch of the Hudson, downsteam. The Second Division crew, Barney Malone coxswain, scored convincingly in this, leading the Third Division in a spirited sprint by about one length of open water.

Several boxing exhibitions were held, in which Joe Welling, Chicago lightweight, now of the U. S. S. Granite State, opposed Tommy Murphy; Joe Bonds, former Tacoma (Wash.) heavyweight, also of the Granite State, boxed Frank Sprague, and Billy Grupp vs. Frank Sprague.

The summaries:

100-Yard Dash.—Won by A. G. Dix, Gas Engine Company; Paul Delaney, Gas Engine Company, second; C. B. Bond, First Division, third. Time—0:12 2-5.

Three-Legged Race.—Won by J. Farrell and F. H. Haines, Gas Engine Company; A. F. Cutler, First Division, and W. A. Gibbons, Third Division, second; L. A. Van Vorst and F. L. Brown, Third Division, third. Time—0:15 1-5.

12-Pound Shot Put.—Won by George Berger, Second Division, 36 feet 9 inches; Joe Bonds, Commissary Department, 36 feet 4 inches, second; E. E. Lowe, Gas Engine Company, 35 feet 8 inches, third.

SEEKERS OF LOANS EMBARRASS BOARD

Accommodation Must Be Obtained Through Banks, War Finance Directors Explain.

DIRECT LOANS TO BE RARE

Misconception of Corporation's Functions, Especially by Public Utility Concerns, Pointed Out.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The War Finance Corporation, organized last week, finds the heaviest end of its business to be the consideration of applications for loans from the large capitalization placed by Congress in the control of the corporation.

The primary purpose served in creating the corporation was to finance certain phases of war preparedness—to make advances to war industries. The corporation also possesses power to finance war industries by credit through the banks, good war paper being made the basis, not only of loans, but also of issues of Federal Reserve notes. But the business now coming to the new corporation seems mainly to be applications for direct loans from the capital placed in the hands of the Directors of the corporation as a trust and a basis for the larger financial operations which it must carry through to win the war.

The Directors have found the pressure for direct loans so great that it is necessary to remove an erroneous impression as to the functions of the War Finance Corporations. The Directors today issued a statement in which they say:

"The resources of the War Finance Corporation are not intended to be loaned directly to war industries, unless in an exceptional case, but only indirectly through the banks. As the Secretary of the Treasury stated before the committees of Congress when the bill was under consideration, 'The provision of the bill permitting direct loans by the corporation, in exceptional cases, is intended to provide for those rare instances where it may be made to appear to the corporation that a meritorious borrower is being unwisely discriminated against by the banks.'

"The corporation was organized to provide an instrumentality to which the banks of the country could resort to obtain accommodation on advances made by them to war industries upon a character of security not available for rediscount at a Federal Reserve Bank. It is hoped that as need arises the banks of the country will avail themselves of the facilities thus afforded, so that they may be amply able to extend credit to those industries of the country which are necessary or contributory to the prosecution of the war.

"From the applications received by the War Finance Corporation there seems to be an impression in certain quarters that the corporation was specially designed to provide funds for meeting maturing obligations, particularly those of public utility companies. The law expressly provides that the corporation shall not make direct advances to provide funds to meet such maturing obligations, except possibly in some rare case which could clearly be brought within the 'exceptional cases clause.' Of course, the corporation will stand ready to lend its assistance to banks and bankers in proper cases where they have themselves made advances to war industries, whether for the purpose of meeting maturing obligations or otherwise, and direct advances in deserving cases that come clearly within the provisions of the law.

Public Utility Demands.

"Holders of maturing obligations, whether of public utilities or of other concerns which may find themselves unable, because of temporary conditions, to meet their commitments punctually should consider whether, in the public interest, as well as their own, they should not co-operate by consenting to reasonable renewals. Public utility companies particularly, in co-operation with the communities in which they operate, ing themselves to the changed conditions brought about by the war.

"No machinery has been specially provided for direct purchases of obligations of the public utilities, whether to meet maturities or otherwise, either through the War Finance Corporation or through any other Governmental agency. The situation of these public utility companies is, therefore, quite different from that of the railroads, where Congress has made specific provision for the purchase of their securities by the Government in certain exigencies, yet even the railroads are expected, wherever possible, to meet their own maturities and to pay what the money is worth to accomplish that end.

"It must be remembered that the railroads are under Federal operation, and that their rates are subject to Federal control, and that the Government therefore is in a position to see to it that their charges shall be sufficient to meet the cost of the service rendered. In the case of the public utilities, however, neither their operation nor their rates are subject to Federal control. Wherever the charges do not amount to adequate compensation for the services rendered, relief can be had only through the appropriate local authorities, and time is essential to enable the companies and the communities in which they operate to reach a satisfactory solution of this important problem. It is not a problem which can be disposed of by having the Federal Government through the War Finance Corporation assume the burden of financing the operations of these local companies, except in exceptional circumstances which may make it a matter of national importance that advances should be made.

"The local authorities will no doubt respond as promptly as possible, in cases where relief is needed because of changed conditions, as it is clear that the soundness and efficiency of public utilities are intimately connected with a vigorous and successful prosecution of the war."

The financial condition of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit System was laid before the War Finance Corporation Directors today in support of an application for a loan. President Williams and the general counsel of the road discussed the question for nearly two hours. The Directors gave no intimation of what their course would be. The hearing was behind closed doors.

KLAW REGRETS ACTORS' APPEAL TO PRESIDENT

Head of Managers' Association Says Contract Itself Provides for Course in Event of Violation.

The appeal made by the Actors' Equity Association to President Wilson regarding the alleged failure of theatrical managers to live up to their agreements with the actors yesterday brought from several managers denials that they have been violating any of the clauses of the standard contract. Marc Klaw, President of the United Managers' Protective Association, issued a statement in which he declared that the contract itself provides for the course to be pursued in the event of violation, and that he could see no ground for the appeal to the President.

"Its tone is uncalled for," Mr. Klaw said, "and I regret that the President of the United States should be burdened with complaints of this character. No member of the Actors' Equity Association, I am sure, will accuse me of being inimical to its interest, as I presided at all conferences which led to the adoption of the equity contract, and was distinctly favorable to it in its present shape. The managers' association could not bind its individual members to the adoption of that contract, but, inasmuch as they asked all to adopt it and the contract itself provides for the course to be pursued in the event of any violation of it, I cannot see any ground for this appeal to the President of the United States.

"The whole tone of Francis Wilson's letter is a surprise to me. The question of patriotism should not be lugged into it at all. Managers of the United States, as well as actors, have shown themselves ready and willing. Personally, I don't think they are entitled to a pat on the back for that."

SEES ROOM FOR FEW IN PALESTINE COLONY

Viscount Bryce Finds Country Able to Support Not More Than 300,000 Additional Souls.

MIGHT GAIN BY IRRIGATION

With Large Capital Expenditure Water Could Be Had to Make Land Serve 600,000.

The future of Palestine is discussed by Viscount Bryce in an article contributed by him to the June number of the Menorah Journal, which publishes a number of articles by noted thinkers and students.

In the opinion of Viscount Bryce, Palestine, which now has a population somewhat less than 650,000, can support by agriculture an additional population of 300,000 under present conditions and a second addition of 300,000, after irrigation dams and other construction works have been built.

"Upon the political aspects of the question of Jewish settlement in Palestine I cannot attempt to enter," says Viscount Bryce, "for they involve difficult questions, on some of which it is too soon to speak with confidence. But there are economic problems on which attention may now at once begin to be fixed. What field does the country now present for colonization, and how can its resources be developed?

"It is a small country. The area of the Kingdom of Solomon was about as large as that of the State of Massachusetts. But Palestine had not then, and never has had, and has not now, any well defined boundary except the sea on the west. But let us take it, as understood today, at about 10,000 square miles. Much of this area is too dry and rocky for tillage; large parts are too dry even for cattle or sheep. Some large tracts might be irrigated, and would then yield rich crops, but to construct irrigation works would require considerable capital expenditure. There is no water power, except in the Jordan, which has a rapid fall from the Sea of Galilee to the Dead Sea, and it is also the only important stream from which water could be drawn for irrigation. So far as is known, no minerals exist in quantities that would repay working. Its population must therefore depend on agriculture. This was estimated before the war at about 650,000. But as many have died of want, or been killed by the Turks, within the last three years, the number must be now smaller. About two-thirds are Moslems, speaking Arabic—some very fanatical. No one would propose to eject them from their lands, so the present question is: For how many immigrants can room be found?

"Taking the country as it stands, (including the cultivable parts of the district east of the Jordan,) probably not more than about 300,000. If, however, the middle and lower Jordan Valley were irrigated, if reservoirs of water from the Winter and Spring rains were provided, if the ancient cisterns were repaired, if the terrace cultivation on the slopes of the hills were replanted with trees, for the land is now terribly bare, it would be possible to provide work and sustenance for many more, perhaps for another 300,000, or an even larger number."

FAVOR JEWISH NATION.

Speaker Tells of the New Jerusalem Already in the Making.

Under the auspices of the Metropolis Club, 105 West Fifty-seventh Street, a dinner was held there last night, bringing together many prominent Jewish people to discuss the possibility of creating a Jewish State in Palestine.

Former Judge Moses H. Grossman, who presided over the discussion, called upon the assemblage to give a rising toast to President Wilson.

The first speaker was Ittamar Ben Atzi, a native of Palestine and the editor of the first daily paper ever published in Jerusalem. After paying a glowing tribute to the British Army for the conquest of Palestine, the speaker said:

"We are living again in Palestine just as Joshua lived. The Jewish colony there already has set itself to the arduous task of building the new Jerusalem. Many of you Jews in America will soon be coming over to the land of your forefathers."

Lieut. Col. J. Jamison of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission, who has spent a year in Palestine with the British Army, said it was a happy day when the British Army wrenched Jerusalem from the Turks.

"The British Army defending Jerusalem," he added, "expect another attack in Palestine. Turkey does not need much of a force to fight Russia in the south and therefore she can muster a great army to oppose Britain in Palestine. Fourteen per cent. of the people of England, Scotland, and Wales have already become soldiers. We need more. That is why I am here with the British-Canadian Mission to enlist all British subjects and as many Jews as possible to help us fight this war out in Palestine."

"I must not be accused of preaching the dangerous doctrine of dual nationality," said Judge Julian W. Mack of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, the next speaker, "when I say that every Jew, no matter in which country he lives, ought to favor the establishment of a Jewish State in Palestine. I don't want all Jews to go back to Jerusalem. I want the Jews to remain scattered all over the face of the earth just as they have been since ancient times, but I do want those who desire to go to Palestine and establish a State to have the privilege and opportunity of doing so. There ought to be something more than our religious bond to hold the Jews before the world as a people."

Captain David Albala of the Serbian Legation and Yehuda Barak, a former merchant of Palestine, also spoke.

WHITMAN ADDRESSES JEWS.

Praises Loyalty at B'rith Abraham National Convention.

Governor Whitman, at the new Star Casino, 107th Street and Lexington Avenue, last night addressed the final session of the three-day convention of the United States Grand Lodge, Independent Order B'rith Abraham. More than 2,000 members and delegates were present.

The Governor said the Jews deserved great praise for standing behind President Wilson in these troublous times. He declared that the loyalty of American Jewry could never be questioned, and asserted that the war, among other things, had brought Gentiles and Jews to a better understanding.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

All of the new officers live in New York excepting George I. Cohen, whose home is in Boston.

SOUSA HERE FOR FESTIVAL.

He Will Lead Chorus of 10,000 Voices at Polo Grounds June 2.

Lieutenant John Philip Sousa arrived yesterday from Detroit, where his navy band has been playing in aid of the Red Cross. He comes to conduct the final rehearsals of Mendelssohn's "Elijah," in which he will lead his own band and a chorus of 10,000 voices on Sunday, June 2, at the War Savings Committee's Thrift Stamp Festival at the Polo Grounds. On this occasion there will be joined with his own band, which consists of eighty pieces, and 120 others selected from the Metropolitan Opera and the New York Symphony Orchestras.

Plans have been submitted, the committee announced yesterday, to repeat the Thrift Festival in twenty large cities. For these festivals the committee has asked the services of Lieutenant Sousa and his band, Mme. Schumann-Heink, Mme. Frances Alda, Leon Rothier, Miss Marie Sundelius, Charles Harrison, and Oscar Seagle.

SPECIALISTS SEE ANNA HELD

Six Called Into Consultation—Her Condition Unchanged.

Miss Anna Held's attending physician in a statement he issued last night concerning his patient's condition said that six blood and bone specialists had been called into consultation on the case—a rare disease of the bones and bone marrow—and that their conclusions would be contained in a statement which would be issued today. One of the specialists, it was learned, was Dr. Ernest Laplace, Professor of Surgery in Medico-Chirurgical College in Philadelphia.

The actress's condition remained unchanged last night, it was announced, but she continued to be cheerful in spite of a fatal prognosis held out for her.

CITY WILL MOURN FOR DEAD IN FRANCE

In Accordance with President's Proclamation, Memorial Day Will Be One of Prayer.

FIELD MASS AT BATTERY

100 Jewish Cantors Will Sing Hymn for Dead in Great Parade on the East Side.

New York City will observe tomorrow a Memorial Day of solemnity, for, in addition to commemorating its sons who fell in earlier wars, it will pay tribute to the soldiers and sailors who have made the last great sacrifice during the year. While the observances are in progress over here soldiers in France will decorate the graves of their comrades whose names are freshest on the nation's list of heroes.

In accordance with the President's proclamation urging that the day be one of deep prayer, special services will be held by all denominations. On the east side 20,000 persons will participate in a parade which will march past Governor Whitman in a reviewing stand in Delancey Street. During the procession more than one hundred Jewish cantors will sing the Jewish hymn for the dead, and during the two hours the parade is expected to last all business activity on the east side will be suspended.

Final arrangements for the military field mass in Battery Park tomorrow morning were completed last night. At 10:30 o'clock the religious procession will start from the Church of Our Lady of the Rosary in State Street, and with Cardinal Farley and Bishop Hayes at the head, will march around Battery Park and thence to the altar erected in its centre. The committee in charge of the observances is headed by Cardinal Farley, and includes Charles M. Schwab, Director General of the Emergency Fleet Corporation; Edward N. Hurley, head of the United States Shipping Board; Morgan J. O'Brien, Charles E. McCarthy, William D. Guthrie, Thomas F. Ryan, Victor J. Dowling, Nicholas F. Brady, and Arthur S. Somers. At the conclusion of the mass, a letter will be read from President Wilson, in answer to the invitation extended to him, followed by the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" by the audience in the park. The anthems of the Allies, played by the bands from the Fire Department and the office of the borough President, will close the day's program.

Memorial exercises conducted by Rabbi Jacob Tarlau will be held in the Educational Alliance Building, 197 East Broadway, at 10 o'clock, and an address will be delivered by Samuel Strauss. A union prayer service, participated in by several Harlem congregations, will be held at 10:30 o'clock at the Congregation Kol Israel, 24 West 114th Street. Prayers will be offered by Rabbi M. A. Margolis, Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein, and Rabbi Meisel. Speeches will be made by Congressman Isaac Siegel, Rabbi Goldstein, and Rabbi B. Z. Pearl.

FAST TIME FOR AIR MAIL.

Liberty Motor Makes Trip from Philadelphia Under an Hour.

Yesterday was one of the best days so far for the air mail service despite a hazy atmosphere, which it was feared at first might interfere with the pilots.

Lieutenant Bonsal made the flight to Philadelphia and back, leaving Belmont Park at 11:29 A. M. and reaching Philadelphia at 12:30. He received the mail there from the Washington carrier, also that from Philadelphia, and started north with it at 1:42, reaching Belmont Park at 2:32, less than an hour.

It was just as the races were starting, and his arrival created another demonstration similar to that of Monday. Both going and returning he used a Liberty motor plane, and when he started out this forenoon he was accompanied by Lieutenant Webb in another plane with Liberty motor equipment, which Webb took to Philadelphia for use on the Washington-Philadelphia leg of the route. There was 150 pounds of mail going to Philadelphia and 135 returning.

WOMAN'S FORUM ACTS TRAVESTY ON HENRY VIII

Wives and Near Wives of Doughty King Resurrect Him in Miss Boswell's Skit at the Rivoli.

Henry VIII., Bluff King Hal, was resurrected with his six wives at the annual Forum Follies, given by the Woman's Forum yesterday at the Rivoli Theatre, and the doughty monarch was made to understand that the forum had no use for the kind of a feminist that he was.

Forum Follies has always been devoted to the exploitation of forum talent. Last year—when the "Follies" was given at the Rialto—and this year at the Rivoli, both houses given through the courtesy of the manager, Samuel L. Rothapfel, the program has been more elaborate with moving pictures, the orchestra of the house, and different professional features, but the numbers that the women, who, as yesterday, packed the house, like best are those which show real home talent. Miss Helen Varick Boswell, President of the forum, wrote the Henry VIII. skit. Its object was to give the "wives and near wives" (according to the program) of the monarch an opportunity to talk over the characteristics of their collective husband, something his autocratic methods of disposing of wives had prevented their doing in life.

There was nothing mean about the forum women in their travesty of the man whom they considered had taken unfair advantages of members of their sex, for they allowed him to have his innings on the stage, and there was not a wife or near-wife of the lot who made a more magnificent appearance than did King Henry, as he was represented by Miss Florence Guernsey. A portly gentleman of pompous mien, robed in crimson velvet and with small, white, jeweled hands, he opened the skit by walking majestically across the stage back of hanging gauzes. Then, following the reunion of the Queens, a seance, at which he was supposed to listen on the outside, he was permitted to make farewell remarks, though not without repression.

Katherine Parr, the last of Henry's Queens, was the first to appear, being given this prominence because "a woman who buried Henry the Eighth was one to be reckoned with." Catherine of Aragon, the first wife, was next to appear and admitted that at first Henry had not been so bad, but that finally she was so glad to be rid of him that she had no hard feeling to any of the women who had taken her place. Anne Boleyn boasted of having died in her bed; Jane Seymour said she loved candy and the King did not. The Marchioness de Montreuil said that she had been too wise to marry Henry, and Anne of Cleves, who acknowledged that she was Dutch and not good looking, said that whatever she was she was "much too good for Henry." When the King made a final appearance he was quietly snubbed when he told the women in a casual manner to "fade away."

"No, they will not, Henry," said Miss Boswell, who was the History Lady and as beautiful as any of the Queens, wearing a giddy crimson frock. "You lived in the sixteenth century. We are twentieth century women and have the vote."

The Queens were Mrs. Anna Lazear Allan, Mrs. I. Brooke Clarke, Mrs. Wayne, Mrs. Stanley K. Greene, Mrs. Ambrose Higgins, Mrs. Louis Whiting Gay, and Mrs. Roy Emery Fletcher. Mrs. John Francis Yawger, President of the City Federation of Women's Clubs, headed another skit, "The Club Knitting Class," among whose members were Presidents of individual organizations, among them Miss Evelyn Goldsmith, Mrs. Walter S. Comley, Mrs. Otto Hahn, Mrs. Everett M. Harter, and Mrs. Austin M. Palmer.

LONDON, May 28.—Sir Henry Joseph Wood has decided not to accept the offer to become conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. He will remain in London.

FULTON THEATRE LEASED.

Oliver D. Bailey and N. D. Smith Take Playhouse from Sept. 2.

A lease was executed yesterday by which the Fulton Theatre was taken over for a term of years by Oliver D. Bailey and N. D. Smith, the former a playwright and the author of "Pay Day" and "Branded," both of which were produced in New York. The theatre was rented from the Henry B. Harris estate at an annual rental said to be $40,000, and the lessors will take possession on Sept. 2.

The Fulton is now occupied by the Actors' and Authors' Theatre.

Seven Theatres to Close Saturday.

This week's hot weather is having its effect upon the theatres, and seven attractions are already announced to terminate their engagements this week. They are "Nancy Lee," at the Hudson; "A Cure for Curables," at the Thirty-ninth Street, "The Copperhead," at the Shubert; "Jack o' Lantern," at the Globe; "Belinda," at the Empire; "Seven Days Leave," at the Park, and the one-act plays at the Greenwich Village Theatre. In all but one of these cases the theatres probably will remain closed for the Summer.

KITCHIN SEES PLOT IN REVENUE BILL

large majority of the House and Senate were opposed to such undertaking. I ceased further insistence upon its consideration and at once began to make efforts to so arrange the legislative program that we would get away by July 1. I conferred with the minority leader and many other members of the minority, also with the Chairmen of the various committees relative to the speeding up of legislation. I assured them that we would not have a tax measure and, therefore, that we could get through the business in time to adjourn by July 1.

Tribute to Minority Co-operation.

"Many of us believed and all hoped that by mutual, earnest co-operation it was possible and probable to dispose of the legislative program and adjourn by July 1. We went to work to that end. I took the matter up with the leaders in the Senate on both sides, and the same assurances that no tax measure was included in the session's program were made. All agreed to co-operate in facilitating the consideration and passage of the necessary war measures and the appropriation bills in time to get through by July 1, if possible, and we all thought it possible and probable.

"I want to say that there has been upon the part of the minority, as well as the majority, an absolute keeping of good faith, both here and in the Senate, and today the program is in such advanced condition that, without a tax measure, we would be ready to adjourn by July 1. The minority has not forced the majority to bring in a special rule to consider any measure on the present program. The minority has consented to dispense with calendar Wednesdays and unanimous consent Mondays, whenever unanimous consent requests were made. While some did not favor all the measures on the program, or all the measures that have been presented as war measures, in toto, not one has attempted to filibuster or delay the consideration of these measures, but were willing to come to a showdown and vote.

"I wish to say that when I saw the notice for the first time—and it was the first intimation I had from any quarter—in The New York World, about May 10, that the Secretary of the Treasury would demand and insist upon a revenue measure at this session, I was the most surprised, the most amazed man in this body. I understood just a few weeks before that no revenue measure was in contemplation at all. I was firmly convinced that it was not necessary to enact revenue legislation at this session and that it was unwise, under all the circumstances, to undertake such a bill at this late date in the session.

"But the President of the United States, Commander in Chief of the army and navy of the United States, has declared otherwise. He has given it as his opinion that it is necessary that proper and just revenue measures be put upon the statute books before this session closes. Although, as I said, I do not believe there is an absolute necessity for the passage of such a measure at this session, yet when the Commander in Chief speaks I believe, under the present circumstances, that we should defer to his judgment. A refusal would be misconstrued and would be heralded by every enemy throughout the world, and especially in the Central Powers, as a split between the Congress and the Commander in Chief, and that Congress had refused to give him the necessary money to maintain our armies in Europe. We could not afford to be so misconstrued and misinterpreted. Our duty is plain. We should go to the task, as good soldiers and patriotic statesmen, promptly and uncomplainingly.

"It has been asked, How is it possible that we could pass a revenue measure in the short session, when we claim that now it will take four or five months or more to pass one at this session? The answer is easy. If the Ways and Means Committee—and it had decided to do that—should come back here a day or two after the Fall elections, Congress not being in session and no departmental work to perform, with no attendance necessary upon the sessions of the House, with no members bringing in their constituents to protest to us against taxing their particular product, or incomes, or profits—in that month of cool weather, working morning, afternoon, and night, we could do what it will now take us two or three months to do.

"As it is now, the House will be in session, and we will have to attend its sessions, and are subject to roll calls; we must attend to departmental duties, and our correspondence is three or four times as large when the House is in session. We cannot work as many hours, if the whole day were given to us in this hot, intolerable, Summer weather of Washington. I believe that by pursuing the other course we could have passed just as wise and as equitable a tax measure in the short session as we can at this session. And practically all the taxes would have been collected at the same time as they will be if the bill is passed at this session."

Representative Green of Iowa interrupted with the statement that he was convinced Mr. Kitchin had acted in good faith, but added:

"It has come to my attention and to the attention of others of the House by repeated rumors that the action of the press had something to do with this matter. Can the gentleman inform me whether there is any truth in that?"

"Mr. Speaker," replied Representative Kitchin, "I do not think that the Secretary of the Treasury thought it was necessary to have this revenue measure at this session until his return from the Liberty Loan campaign. In fact, I know he did not think it was necessary when he began that campaign. But I think, after going out in the campaign, seeing the situation from another viewpoint, and after getting to Washington, with a closer eye upon Treasury conditions, and learning the demands of the different departments for enormously increased appropriations, he became unduly alarmed and gave undue weight to opinion of Treasury officials, and was convinced it was necessary to have this legislation at this session.

Says Publishers Have a Lobby.

"In answer, further, I do not think that Secretary McAdoo thought about the press, the newspapers, and magazines one way or the other. However, I do believe that, way back, hidden somewhere, unseen by most of us, there was the influence of one of the shrewdest and most powerful lobbies that ever infested the hotels or the corridors of the Capitol which made itself felt with some in whose judgment the Secretary of the Treasury had great faith. I know that such a lobby has been maintained here by the big publishers. Its committee has had interviews with me. It was determined by the publishers at the first of the session that the session should not close until they had had a chance to put to a vote in Congress the question of either a repeal or a modification of a suspension of the operation of the postal rate provisions of existing law.

"I know they attempted to get it on the Post Office bill in the House or to get a separate bill for the purpose. They failed. They attempted to get it on the Post Office bill in the Senate Committee and they failed. They then gave notice that a motion would be made in the Senate, after the Post Office Appropriation bill was reported to it, to suspend the rules so that such amendment could be offered to the bill, and thus have another fight in the House and the Senate.

"I know that they planned that if they could not get it in some pending bill, one way or another, they would insist on a Revenue bill which would offer them their chance. I know that the leading papers that have been denouncing Congress and the Ways and Means Committee, and especially me, for the present postal rate provisions, as soon as they had the first intimation that a tax bill would be demanded by the Treasury Department, came out in strong leading editorials demanding, in the interest of the Treasury and the country, that Congress enact another revenue bill.

"I understand their game. I want to warn this House and the country of their game. Here it is: They are going to try to put the repeal of the postal provision or the suspension of its operation upon whatever revenue bill that is passed here. But they know that the manhood and the patriotism, the sense of right and justice, and of honesty and fair dealing, between the Government and every class of the people of the membership of this House will forbid and prevent such repeal or modification going on a bill here.

"They then hope to put such an amendment on in the Senate, and then, when it goes to conference, they are counting upon the conferees of the House and the Senate sitting in session day after day and week after week and finally getting together on every proposition except the repeal or the modification of that provision, and then, when election time or adjournment time is nearing, they hope to get the President or the Secretary of the Treasury to insist upon the House conferees yielding, appealing to them not to take the responsibility of defeating or further delaying the passage of the greatest and most important tax and financial measure ever proposed, on account of sticking to the little, pitiful postal rate provision.

"That is their game, and, gentlemen, I warn you now, see if that is not the path they take. I am going to watch and see who is going to help them play that game and let you see what a prophet I am. I serve notice on them and the House now that, if the Speaker's judgment shall assign me as one of the conferees, there will be one who will not help them play that game, but will use all of his power to thwart it."

STIRRED BY WILSON SPEECH

London Newspapers Express Keen Appreciation of Address to Congress

LONDON, May 28.—The evening newspapers today express keen appreciation of President Wilson's last address to Congress. The Westminster Gazette says: "President Wilson touched his highest note in his recommendations to Congress of the new taxation America must impose upon herself. On this line the note of idealism did not obscure the practical purpose of the speech. The United States are not sparing themselves, and there is every indication that Congress will accept the new load with enthusiasm."

The Star says: "President Wilson's speech stirred our blood. Ships are crowding faster and faster to the ports of France and England with regiment after regiment." This is, in his vivid phrase, the very peak and crisis of the war."

To OFFICERS of the AMERICAN EXPEDITIONARY FORCE

At the commencement of the present war, Cox & Company's Bank established a subsidiary in France under the name of Cox & Co. (France), Ltd., through which British Officers in uniform can cash checks on Cox & Company, London, up to the equivalent of £5 (about $25) at any one time, without the formality of establishing identity and signature—a convenience which no other Bank can offer, and which obviates the necessity of carrying ready money or easily-lost letters of credit in the war zone.

To cover the whole of France, a special arrangement was made with the Bank of France, whereby the same privileges were extended to Officers in uniform by all the many hundred Branches of that Bank in places where no branch of Cox & Co. (France), Ltd., existed. The same facilities were also provided throughout Italy, at all branches of the Banca Italiana di Sconto.

These facilities, of which practically all British Officers and a number of United States Officers already in Europe avail themselves, are now accorded to all Officers of the American Expeditionary Force, Military, Naval and Air Services, who open banking accounts with Cox & Company, London.

Founded in 1758—thirty-one years before George Washington became the first President of the United States—Cox & Company's Bank has been inseparably associated with British military enterprise ever since; it has held the appointment of Bankers and Official Agents to the entire British Household Brigade, as well as to the bulk of the Cavalry and Infantry, from the time of the Battle of Waterloo up to the present day.

BEFORE SAILING FOR EUROPE, instruct your local Banker to give you a draft or to cable you a transfer to Cox & Company, Charing Cross, London. Current accounts are conducted without charge, and interest at prevailing rate is allowed on deposit accounts. International exchange at finest rates.

CREDIT INFLATION AND WAGE INFLATION.

The President will find unanimous support in condemnation of inflation of the sort which he condemns. But it will not escape notice that he condones another sort of inflation which he practices. And the latter inflation is the worse of the two. It is open to question whether there is any considerable credit inflation, if allowance is made for the contraction of credit in the manner of the regulation of the railways and all public utilities. The laws have been enforced against some thirty billions of capital in a manner which has reduced their credit more billions than the banking credits have expanded, perhaps, and certainly so if allowance is made for that sort of banking inflation which is merely legitimate expansion in proportion to growth of trade.

Long ago THE ANNALIST published diagrams showing that railway credit had fallen below industrial credit. Recently The Tribune has been publishing diagrams showing that the credit of public utilities of all the sorts subject to regulation also has fallen below the credit of the industrials, and that both are above the credit of the railways, whose credit used to rank next to public credit. Here is represented contraction of credit as well worth notice as the inflation of credit so generally condemned. Both the contraction and the inflation should be corrected, and are in process of correction. The flurry in prices in the security market shows welcome progress in the direction of the restoration of railway credit and the reduction of industrial credit. Railway credit is improved by the increase in rates, and the Administration procedure is approved in that sort of inflation. Industrial credit is lowered by the prospect that profits of scores per cent. will be reduced by taxation, and that sort of contraction is approved.

Inflation above the market rate for money should be checked, and that is within the power of the Federal Reserve Bank by its control of the credit market. The Federal Bank officials need no instruction on that point. The writings of PAUL WARBURG have shown ample appreciation of the dangers of inflation in theory. But in practice the bank is embarrassed in the application of its knowledge. It is compelled to recognize the facts of the money market, and it is not the function of the bank to do what ought to be done by the regulators of rates and the tax layers. Still, there is room to show favor to railway credit in proportion that it is bettered by the action of the Director General of Railways, and to frown upon the speculation in industrials as their inflation is lessened by the tax laws.

Without excusing credit inflation of the obnoxious sort, it may be said that the harm it does is rivaled by the disturbance of all prices by wage inflation. In that sort of inflation the Government is a leading offender. The reference is not to the advance of railway wages by $300,000,000, but to the "labor snatching" which made the advance of railway wages necessary. Government contractors have overbid one another and all others in the labor market in the manner in which the Allies bought competitively in this market, and necessitated the Government regulation of prices. Now there is necessity of regulation of wages in the manner of price regulation. It is not possible to raise wages repeatedly, and to shorten hours, without reducing production to such an extent that the advance of wages is illusory and irritating to both those who pay and those who receive the wages. Labor is entitled to its pre-war pay, generously estimated. But labor is not entitled to wages which enable it to eat 10 per cent. more foodstuffs than when it was well fed in 1914, while our allies are eating 30 per cent. less.

Our consumption of sugar in 1917 was four pounds above the five-year average, and was more than is good for those who used it. Our use of tobacco is far above normal, the total of cigarettes leaping by billions, while the tobacco industrials earn several times as much as the railways. Government is responsible for this inflation more than private employers, who are compelled to pay wages in competition with Government. The result is that some sorts of capital and labor are inflated at the expense of other sorts of labor and capital, the latter sorts being unable to protect themselves because of the Government's regulation of markets.

This is all the worse because the Government condones all sorts of inflation of wages by the parasitic variety of labor, meaning the sort which inflates its wages by duress of various sorts, practiced both upon lawmakers and upon other sorts of labor. Individual workers are showing their patriotism in many ways, but union labor neglects the opportunity to establish a prevailing rate of wages, and work for wages, by which unionists would abide. But some sorts of labor and capital are alike in seeking all that the traffic will bear, and not being willing to accept a standard return. There never was in the history of labor in this country such a volume of strikes as in this wartime, when strikes have been forsworn formally, by an undertaking violated oftener than observed.

It would be less obnoxious if the increased wages were put to good use, instead of wasted. The United States ranks only fifteenth among the countries leading in savings banks. If the inflation of wages were used thriftily, there would be in the wage fund an inexhaustible source of Liberty Loans. But the inflation of wages and the contraction of credit together are making the situation more difficult as it ripens. These facts should be considered when the question of consumption taxes comes before Congress.

IDEAS IN POLITICS.

State Senator T. D. ROBINSON is to manage Attorney General LEWIS's campaign for the Republican nomination for Governor. Mr. ROBINSON is a nephew of Mr. ROOSEVELT, but no avuncular complicity in his designs is to be assumed or suspected. According to Senator ROBINSON, "the voters "are demanding with increasing vehe-"mence that political bodies repre-"sent ideas and that these be made "clear in representative gatherings "and conventions." Senator ROBINSON's ears are acuter than those of some of the rest of us if that increasing vehemence is audible in their porches. Yet it is to be hoped that he is right. The return of the State convention, responsible representative party government, is devoutly to be wished. If Mr. LEWIS, Mr. ROBINSON, or anybody else can focus the attention of Republican voters on that end, good luck to their endeavor!

A NON-PARTISAN LEAGUER.

Former Congressman CHARLES A. LINDBERGH, candidate of Mr. TOWNLEY's Non-Partisan League for Governor of Minnesota, has had a chance to see how popular his notions are in Duluth. He couldn't find in "the Zenith City of the unsalted seas" anybody who would rent him a hall for his rally. It was proposed to let his orotundity be heard at a street meeting, but "the idea was abandoned." Duluth is a passionately patriotic town. Mr. LINDBERGH's patriotism may best be judged by a few dips into his little book, "Why Is Your Country at War?" which is published in pocket size so as "to be studied at spare moments." He is careful, but he cannot hide his animus:

> Trespass upon our rights upon the high seas makes our cause just, still I do not claim that it was wise to enter the war. I believe the problem could have been settled without war or sacrifice of national honor, the same as we expect to adjust the trespass upon our rights to the high seas by the other nations. Our purpose is humane, nevertheless I believe that I have proved that a certain "inner circle," without official authority and for selfish purposes, adroitly manoeuvred to bring about conditions that would make it particularly certain that some of the belligerents would violate our international rights and bring us to war with them.

That "inner circle" is "the interests," the "Money Trust," responsible for all our iniquities, including the Federal Reserve System. Evidently Mr. LINDBERGH's opinions have caused him to be classified as a pro-German:

> It is impossible, according to the big press, to be a true American unless you are pro-British.

The greed of "patriotic speculators" caused us to invite the violation of our international rights, inspired the campaign for preparedness, and the arming of our merchant ships. The speculaters knew upon which side they could make the most money and forced "the American public to pay them many millions of dollars." "We "cannot repeal conscription without "in every way taking into considera-"tion" our soldiers abroad, but it should be repealed "as soon as it can be done" with protection to them. He complains that it is considered "traitorous to suggest terms of peace." And "the winning of battles by some "nations and their loss by others will "be of comparatively little value to "the winners and of loss to the losers—"with an economic victory for the "masses of the world." "Peace with universal victory and no defeat" is what we must get out of the war. Not as a logical result of the war, but "as a sequence to the absurdity of war."

A sort of a Gopher Bolshevik. Even the Liberty Loan was devised by the special interests "in the hope that the "plain people would get a little of the "loan so that they would believe "themselves to be interested in keep-"ing up the system." But "let us "not be prejudiced by any little per-"sonal interests," and so refuse to "support a true economic system." "The little dividend is a mere bagatel "[sic] compared with our losses under "the present system."

Mr. LINDBERGH's theory of war taxation is simple but filling:

> The taking of property or money to pay the costs of the war should begin with the largest of the fortunes, and as these are scaled down to equal the lesser, then conjointly they should be scaled down to take in the lesser still, and so on the process should run until all the greater fortunes should pay in full the material costs of the war. Those with comparatively small means should pay nothing until those with larger means had been reduced to their equal, [sic.] That is the only just rule.

If that just rule had been law, "there would have been no careless "and reckless, and as it was in some "cases wanton, traveling upon the "high sea in the danger zone by neu-"trals." Such is the gospel which Duluth refused to hear. Such is the platform of this candidate of the Non-Partisan League. More fortunate than many of the managers and orators of that concern, Mr. LINDBERGH, so far as we know, is not under indictment for sedition.

RAILWAY RATES AND WAGES.

The increase of railway rates is announced so nearly at the same time with the advance of wages that the public will think of them together, as it should. If the Interstate Commission had thought of them together, the country would not be in its present difficulty about the deficiency of railway accommodations. Now that they are thought of together, there will be an end of the politicians' and theorists' promise of lower rates and higher wages, although an economic contradiction is implicit in the promise. The two are joined when rates are at their approximate lowest and wages are at their actual highest. Labor cannot complain that it is being exploited for the benefit of capital. Capital has been exploited for the sake of labor, but railway capital is indifferent because its bargain has been made and is a good one. If the Director General continues to manifest the same spirit of fairness toward both labor and capital, the settlement will be as satisfactory to railway capital as to labor.

Also the settlement is as good for the Government as for labor and capital. There is a great present deficiency, and there even may be a deficiency on the Government's first year. But the present deficiency of some hundreds of millions is a mere matter of the worst Winter ever known, and cannot be expected to recur for another generation.

Rates are advanced 25 per cent., and apply only to the future. Wages are advanced in some cases over 40 per cent., and are made retroactive. If the Government could collect the increased rates back to Jan. 1, and apply the increase to the rates of 1915, in the manner of the wage increase, the Director General's deficiency of, say $750,000,000 for the year might not survive. The Interstate Commission might have made an order for the provisional collection of an increase of rates, subject to a refund if the decision were adverse to the increase. But that was not the way of the Commission with the railways. The Commission is now receiving its punishment in the reward of the railways. It has forfeited public confidence, and should have nothing to do in the way of regulating the Director General's management, beyond keeping the accounts, or giving advice on matters of fact. Policy is taken out of the Commission's control. There may be smiles at the increase of wages by $300,000,000, and the decrease of salaries by $3,000,000. It is clear that the Director General, like Congress, fears the rank and file more than the High Command. The time may come when he will want brains, and can be more independent about muscle.

It is thought a large order to increase the wages of 2,000,000 at a stroke of the pen. The rate increase will affect everybody and everything, for there is no man, no business, no commodity without concern in the increase of rates. For mere size the two increases are entitled to rank together as without precedent. Even the wage increase is not limited to 2,000,000 immediately concerned. When the Government decrees equality for men and women, for colored as well as whites, for union and nonunion alike, the standard is set for all employers. It is a blow which the unions will find it difficult to parry, at least on the railways. Why should anybody belong to the union when he gets no better pay, and no monopoly of employment? How can the unions object to equality and generosity of treatment? Clearly there is more than one way of fighting unreasonable unionism.

The same remark applies to the settlement of the eight-hour question. At the same time that it is put in the way of adoption by all industry, it is not settled in the union way. The Adamson law allowed the eight-hour day to 400,000. The Director General gives it to all. But he allows only pro rata pay, not punitive pay, in order, the men said, to prevent payment of the increase. The conditions of railway operation make it peculiarly difficult to do all work within an eight-hour day. All private employers have the same difficulty in some degree. No employer maliciously works his men over the customary day. The question of overtime is more in the control of the men than of the employers. There are abundant opportunities for the men to cause overtime, and punitive pay is rather an inducement for them to do so. As the matter is settled, the man whose increased wage is $4.23 for ten hours' work is allowed $3.38 for eight hours and 85 cents for two hours' overtime. He gets his pay, but the railway is not penalized. Finally, details of wage disputes are referred to a joint board of workmen and former railway officials. It is a pity that there is not also a rate board, composed of shippers and railway officials. But the settlement of the two questions is better than anybody expected, or might have hoped.

AERIAL MAIL SERVICE OF THE FUTURE.

The best authorities upon aeronautics, including inventors, entertain no doubt that the safety of the improved airplane will be limited only by the fallibility of pilots and mechanics and by unseen flaws of material used in construction. According to expert judgment, the airplane will compete with the automobile as a means of conveyance and communication. The inexorable demands of war have done more for the airplane than could have been expected from many years of industrial peace. A swifter, stancher, safer flying machine is a compensation of the war. It has multiplied trained pilots into the scores of thousands.

After the war inventive minds will evolve a motor compared with which our vaunted Liberty will seem like an experiment in the retrospect, and every one of the essential parts of the fabric that carries the motor will be perfected. So say scientists interested in aeronautics. Their confidence is infectious. It explains why there has been a design, some talk of a conspiracy, to make a monopoly of the airplane industry after the war. There is no cause for wonder if the Post Office Department, which has been experimenting with an aerial post between New York and Washington, is now planning an extension of the service to all parts of the United States. This is the program:

> Flights between Chicago and other Middle West cities and Eastern points, and, finally, transcontinental flights.
> Washington to Chicago flights in from seven to nine hours.
>
> Establishment of flights in sections not accessible by trains.
>
> Aerial routes where circuitous approaches, due to cañons, lakes, and other natural objects, make ordinary mail deliveries unusually slow.
> Final interlocking of the entire country after the war with airplane mail service for letters and packages.

The longer the route the greater the superiority of an airplane mail service over a railway service. The Empire State Express could run from New York to Chicago in eighteen hours; a high-power airplane would cut the time in half. A relay of airplanes would reduce the schedule between New York and San Francisco to thirty hours. Some day there should be an aerial express for a thousand and one articles, perhaps a service for perishable products. Baggage carried through the air is conceivable.

Of the hosts of war pilots many will be open to engagements when peace returns: to fly for the Government, for corporations and individuals. Now they are defying machine guns, aircraft guns, and diabolical devices of the busy munition-makers. In peaceful times these flying men will have to contend only with the elements. How beatific the transformation! Fogs, snowstorms, lightning will become as familiar as friends. "We are training aviators now," says Mr. PRAEGER, Second Assistant Postmaster General, "with "the intention of using them for the "airplane mail service when they "return from aviation in France." It will be exhilarating as well as remunerative work, and it may be supposed that the supply of airplane drivers will be greater than the demand eventually.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Taking First Lessons as Voters. Two tales that are told about the enrollment of women last week can be taken or not taken, according to preference, as significant of feminine capacity for dealing with the formalities of politics. Before anybody, however, makes on them the comment, "Just like a woman, for all the world!" it would be well for him—of course it would be "him"—to ask some experienced election booth official if he could not tell tales of like quality about men.

The first of the stories concerns a woman who has always professed more than an ordinary interest in politics and whose fervent admiration for the Republican Party and its leaders has had for not a few years past frequent and voluble expression. The day after the enrollment she was asked by another woman who had herself enrolled if she had done it, too. "Certainly I did," she replied. "In which circle did you mark your cross?" was the next question, and to that came the astonishing answer, "Why, in none. That wasn't necessary!"

This, naturally, led to further interrogation, and in course of time the self-confident expert in politics disclosed, first, that in her opinion the enrolling place to which she had been directed by a circular from the Republican leader of her district was devoted exclusively to the enrollment of Republicans—else why should he have sent her there? Second, that after she had answered a long string of questions she had written her name in a book, which completed her enrollment in her grand old party. "But didn't they give you a slip of paper, bearing four circles, with a party emblem over each?" she was asked. She said: "Yes, here it is." And after a little fumbling in her handbag she produced it!

The second story concerns a more than elderly woman who, after answering the appointed questions, received her slip and evidently did not know what to do with it. She was told to make her cross in the circle of the party she wished to join. "What party does President WILSON belong to?" she asked. "That's the party for me!" The President's political preference was revealed to her. Then, without troubling to enter the seclusion of a curtained booth, she put her cross in the Democratic circle and handed in the slip.

An Answer Seemingly Sufficient. Were it not for painful memories of "embalmed beef," and of the odors both literal and metaphorical that arose therefrom during and after our war with Spain, the reply of the two great meat packing companies now under accusation by the Federal Trade Commission would instantly be accepted as an adequate defense. Even in spite of those memories the answer is more than plausible, for all the statements in it are such as ordinarily intelligent men would be expected to make, and to make with truth. Surely it requires no more than ordinary intelligence, leaving the question of honesty entirely aside, to enable men to know that it would not do, in these days, even to offer unfit food for use in the training camps, and that only through a widespread conspiracy involving many army officers could such food ever get as far as the company cooks.

What would happen to bad meat, and about it, after that, could so easily be imagined by a would-be swindling purveyor that he would do business honestly or not at all. Times have changed since 1898, and though, as the President says, we still have profiteers, few indeed of them follow the crude lines of twenty years ago. As a nation we may not be much more conscientious than we were then, but at least our sense of the permissible and the safe has been considerably raised in these two decades.

It is easy to see that just what the packers say did happen to a little of the meat they shipped probably did happen, and that they probably were not to blame for it. On the other hand, there is difficulty in understanding why the members of the Federal Trade Commission should have made charges sure to be answered instantly and effectively. They, too, are credited with ordinary intelligence, and of course they would not knowingly invite a refutation so humiliating to themselves.

There the case stands, for the moment, with the packers having the better of it, and the public will wait for further developments with an interest as yet little more than amused. But how quickly that amusement would turn to fierce anger if by any chance it were proved that somebody has been trying to foist unfit food on our soldiers! The American people are not going to submit patiently to any profiteering of that kind, however it may be with other kinds.

Caution Is Not Unbelief. As all reports of conditions in the Central Empires reach the outside world only after they have passed a rigid and effective censorship, they can be accepted as true only when corroborated by better evidence than themselves. And that better evidence is as scanty as the reports are abundant. Always it is necessary to remember that if we believe these stories of starvation, of cannibalism, of mutiny, and the like, we are believing what the rulers of Germany, for purposes of their own, want us to believe. Hence, comment on these terrible tales must be cautiously made, never forgetting that we have heard the same sort of things periodically, since soon after the war began, and that still the power of the German Army as a fighting machine is as great as ever, or greater, and it can still take the offensive against the combined forces of four big nations, to say nothing of seventeen little ones.

Nevertheless, the question is as to the accuracy of any particular story of privation rather than as to its general veracity. The Germans and the Austrians certainly are suffering, and suffering cruelly, from the scarcity of food and of many things besides food. There may be exaggeration, but exaggeration in itself implies the existence of truth. Here in the United States, where the effects of the war are only beginning to be felt, next to the whole of our normal course of life has been disarranged and restricted. Conditions far worse than ours prevail in England, France, and Italy, and by inevitable progression they can be little better than desperate in the lands that are hardest hit of all by the consequences of their own abominable crimes.

Remission of an Italian Tax.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In THE NEW YORK TIMES issue of May 25 there appeared a dispatch from Camp Dix regarding the steps taken for the exemption of military tax in Italy on the Italians who at the present time are serving in the United States Army. I think it my duty to state that your correspondent has not been exact in sending you information on that subject. What has been done for the Italian drafted or enlisted men, who may or may not be included in the deserters' lists, is due not to General Scott's initiative, but to my own, in execution of superior orders.

After a few very cordial and friendly meetings on the subject, the War Department has issued the General Order 33, dated April 6. General Scott's orders were then a consequence of that general order.

I will be grateful to you for publishing this letter.

A "Star-Spangled Banner Burg."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

To a Pennsylvanian the poor claim of six-starred Palenville is pitiably pathetic. The borough of York Haven, York County, Penn., flaunts a flag with a score of stars. With a population of 680 and an allotment of $5,000, this village had 285 subscribers to $105,000 of Liberty bonds of the third issue. Is or is not York Haven the star-spangled banner burg of the United States?

CRUELTY OF THE HESSIANS.

A Revolutionary War Episode of Present-Day Significance.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Long ago the writer was struck with the unfair and provincial way in which American history has been presented in school texts to the youth of this country. The aid given by France in men, ships, and money in the war of independence is glossed over as of no consequence, and as for the British, they are held responsible for deeds of cruelty in which they themselves probably had no hand. Here is one case, at all events, where the blame should fall upon the Hessian mercenaries. It is taken from a letter written by one John A. Gillett to his wife and is to be found on page 298 of Henry R. Stiles's "History and Genealogy of Ancient Windsor, Connecticut," 1892:

> My Friends: No doubt my misfortunes have reached your ears. Sad as it is, it is as true as sad. I was made prisoner the 27th day of August by a people called heshens (Hessians) and by a party called Gagers (Yagers or Jagers) the most Inhuman of all mortals. I can't give Room to picture them here; but thus much I at first Resolved not to be taken but by the Impertunity of the Seven taken with me and being sorounded on all sides by numbers I unhappily surrendered; would to God I never had then I should never (have) known their unmerciful cruelties; they first disarmed me they plundered me of all I had, watch Buckles money and sum Clothing after which they abused me by bruising my flesh with the Buts of their (guns.) They knocked me down. I got up and they (kept on) beating me almost all the way to there (camp) where I got shot of them—the next thing was I was allmost starved to death by them. * * * After giving you a small sketch of myself and troubles, I will Endeavor to faintly lead you into the poor situation the soldiers are in, especially those taken at Long Island, where I was; in fact, there cases are deplorable and they are Real objects of pity—they are still confined and in houses where there is no fire—poor mortals, with little or no cloths, perishing with hunger * * * occasioned for want of food their natures are brook and gone, some almost loose their voices and some their hearing. They are crowded into churches and there guarded day and night. I can't paint the horable appearance they make—it is shocking to human nature to behold them. Could I draw the curtain from before you there expose to your view a lean Jawd mortal * * * surrounded with tattered garments, Rotten Rags close beset with unwelcomed vermin. * * *

It has always seemed to the writer that Americans of British descent, instead of the narrow spirit some of them display toward the country from which they spring, would naturally be more anxious to refute, rather than to credit, any statement to its disadvantage. After all, in judging a man accused of a crime, we must take into consideration his past life. The English, the Scotch, the Irish, the Welsh have never been known, as a race, to be cruel or inhuman. In spite of her many wars with England, going back as far as the Hundred Years' War, during the greater part of which period the English ruled over quite a number of provinces in France, in spite of Waterloo, the French have never nursed any bitter feeling against the British. Both peoples fought each other time and again; in turn they won and were defeated, and that is all there ever was to it. Not so with the Germans. The "reiters," who were German mercenaries in the service of the French Protestants during the wars of religion in France in the sixteenth century, were the dread of the rural populations, and they were also the worthy progenitors of the Hessians in the American war of independence. Just as the Prussians of today are the worthy scions of the Hessians, with this difference, however, that "Kultur" and "efficiency" have made of them veritable fiends. Can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?

Resented by the American Irish.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

> It would be well for the Melloweses in and out of Ireland to understand that when they make threats to the American people the first to resent it will be the sons of Irishmen, who, above all things, are Americans. They will show the Melloweses and the Goldens that when they try to involve America in the affairs of Ireland at a time when their country is at war with Germany—a country to which Mellowes is avowedly friendly—they will put a "crusher" on them that will make known to them the real meaning of the United States "coming down" on them.
>
> That they sense the feeling of Americans of Irish descent in the matter is evidenced by the statement that it is feared that England will try to induce America to send our troops to Ireland. Such nonsense!
>
> That statement is the result of open expression on the part of Americans of Irish descent—said more in jest than in anything else—that they would like to go to Ireland to settle the whole matter. They meant by that that it would not be done in the blundering fashion of the English, but with long "night sticks," such as our New York police have used when they put down riots here greater than any rebellion Ireland ever has known, though, truthfully, with less loss of life. When the Irish agitators were trying to stir up trouble at Broadway and Thirty-eighth Street several months back, it was a lone detective of Irish descent who settled the whole thing forever by a liberal use of his police "billy."

MOTHER OF MERCY.

(Suggested by the Red Cross poster, "The Universal Mother.")

Though gone are all the old, familiar things,
The smiles he loved, the hands he yearned to touch,
Though peace had taken flight on shattered wings,
And hope gone limping off upon a crutch,
Though fled are all the joys he ever knew,
He finds them, mother, once again in you.

For you have all a loved one's magic power
To soothe his troubled breast, to banish sighs,
To rout the ills that haunt his darkened hour,
To conjure sunshine out of clouded skies.
The golden quest of life begins anew
And hope comes dancing back because of you.

What matters if in unfamiliar keys
He hears the drone and hum of every day?
What matters if the boulevards he sees Evoke no memories, are leagues away
From all his youth and childhood brought to view?
The homeland calls him back to life through you.

The strength of all the mother souls who give
Their sons to fight our cause dwells millionfold
In you. Through you Democracy shall live!
Through you the harassed ranks of Freedom hold!
Mother of mercy, naught that we can do
Can ever pay our debt of love to you.

THE FUTURE OF GERMAN STUDY.

In Favor of Putting the Whole Subject in the Hands of Native American Teachers.

By GARRETT W. THOMPSON,
Head Professor of German, University of Maine.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I should appreciate the privilege of expressing through your influential columns a conviction, anent the present war, which has an important relation to the future policy of our educational institutions.

It would be foolish indeed if the American people did not profit by the lessons of this awful conflict, or failed to read either the warning or the opportunity which will come with peace. It would be quite as foolish if the great institutions of our country, the press, the pulpit, the forum, the university, and college, did not realize that a new era is coming, with new demands, new ideals, new necessities, new possibilities. The great call of the hour is to study this coming era in the light of past mistakes, present revelations, and approaching needs.

I believe it is the paramount duty of every educational institution to decide that henceforth the teaching of German, its language, literature, and culture, shall be without exception in the hands of native American instructors.

I am aware how far-reaching such a decision would be; I have considered the arguments against its adoption which to some might seem reasonable; I realize that it would affect teachers whose loyalty has never been questioned. And yet, over against these and all other considerations stands one vital fact: the destiny of American civilization will be largely in the hands of the young men and women who throng our colleges, and the shaping of their ideals will be safest if controlled by American minds.

Do we value the blessings of liberty and the heritage which our forefathers left us? If we do, then surely these blessings are worth preserving. Do we appreciate the infinite sacrifice the allied arms are making and the terrible price in blood and property we are paying for the perpetuity of these self-same blessings? If we do, then our smallest duty is to see that when peace comes such costly treasures shall not be lost. The American heart is proverbially kind and generous; it does not encourage the harboring of deep wrongs. In the general joy of peace there will be a period of forgiving and forgetting, and a strong inclination toward the restoration of former conditions. Just here lies the peril. German intrigue is not going to cease with the end of war; it will make only a more subtle use of the calm and confidence of peace. To expose our American youth to such deadly and insidious agencies is to court disaster.

It is true that there are many loyal Germans in America, and in the teaching profession. We offer no affront to their patriotism; we do not question their sincerity. But many of the most prominent Germans in whom we have had absolute confidence have proved themselves false to American ideals. Propaganda has been sown carefully in our colleges by German teachers who were never suspected until too late, and even then convicted with utmost reluctance by the administrative authorities. How can we discriminate? We have been deceived; we can be deceived again. Who knows when and where the next case will break out? What real American can believe that there ought to be a next case? Is it safer to spare the feelings of those German instructors who might suffer from the general rule, or to safeguard the ideals and character of our American youth?

It is needless to enumerate the things for which Germany stands condemned before the civilized world. Surely no one can be ignorant of them. These crimes against humanity have never been repudiated by the Germans as a people; their silence both here and in the Fatherland is an indictment against them. And even if the malpractices of the High Command found little sympathy among the masses, the taint is in the blood; it may be there honestly, but it is there no less dangerously. It is precisely this taint which is so perilous. German ideals cannot be those of our boys and girls. German atmosphere is not healthful for liberty-loving peoples. Teuton influence, as revealed in Germany's vast ambitions and practices, is a social poison. What greater reason could our educational institutions have for effecting the proposed change of policy than just this fact, that German teachers, consciously or unconsciously, bring into the classroom an un-American influence?

Since the beginning of the war German Kultur has become a household word. We have also heard much of the superiority of German learning and scholarship. We do not minimize the value of German scholarship, nor do we belittle its influence. But there is also broad scholarship in France, in England, in Italy, and in other countries. Each nation has been thinking and making its contribution in science and literature to the world's great store. The prize of honor has not always gone to the Teuton, and more than once he has sat at the feet of his superiors. In the present issue the question is not one of relative German or American scholarship. The ghastly insight into the Teuton mind and heart which we have gained would be meaningless if it involved merely a loss of teaching ability or equipment. The presence of German teachers in American education is a menace too great to be overlooked. In no way can our colleges and universities prove their patriotism more concretely than by surrounding their students with American influences, thus making "the world safe for democracy."

RUSSIA.

Will the Allies Act Before It Is Too Late?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your splendid editorial article, "Too Late," in yesterday's issue should strike a responsive chord in every American heart. I have been longing for the molders of public opinion to give attention to Russia. This conflagration is of such proportions that when the thought of the country is upon one portion of it, other, but most important, portions may be out of view.

Disintegration is taking place in Austria-Hungary, and a decisive victory in the west may cause a true self-determination of the peoples now under Austrian rule.

But Russia is helpless and prostrate, without worthy leadership, and is in a state of mind to yield to any strong power that will bring order out of chaos. We must be friends of the real Russia. How can we manifest that friendship toward the nine-tenths who do not adhere to the Bolsheviki, reaching out a strong hand which they may grasp? It is not best to pick fruit until it is ripe, but it is fatal to permit it to rot on the tree.

We realize the almost superhuman thought that must be expended by those in authority at this time in the preparation and conduct of the war and the splendid work that has been done at home and abroad in all these activities. We are assured that the necessary machinery has been set in motion to supply the western line with all it needs to secure a complete victory there, and trust that the time has come when the situation in the east may be thoroughly studied and its problems solved.

Not a Day to Lose.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I express my gratitude, which is shared, I am sure, by great numbers of your readers, for the powerful and solemn warning uttered in your editorial article today as to our duty in regard to Russia?

The truth of your statement is self-evident and irresistible. If we continue to sit still while Germany, with the help of the Bolsheviki, annexes Russia, we shall have lost the war, no matter what may be done on the western front, and the consequences for us, and for the world, will be beyond all calculation. For our own sake we and our Allies, with Japan giving her full aid, must act and save Russia from this fate, and if Russia is to be saved we have not a day to lose. Now is the time for America to take the lead. The issue of the war depends upon what we are willing to do to save Russia. I wish your article might be read by every man and woman in our land.

Old Field Glasses Very Useful.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

> Believing an experience I have had in furnishing an old pair of field glasses for use on a submarine chaser may, if given publicity, help to get contributions of other glasses for use in the navy, I would like to say that I took an old pair of these glasses to a New York optician, had them tuned up, and sent them to a submarine chaser I have a special interest in, via the New York Postmaster. Today I am in receipt of an acknowledgment, with the statement that the glasses, which had been around my home for many years practically unused, were "by far the best glasses on the boat."
>
> The difficulty the navy is experiencing in getting good glasses for work at sea and my gratification at being able to send glasses which may be of service at a critical moment prompt me to suggest to any one who has a good glass to send it to the navy, either by way of the Navy Department at Washington or to some fighting boat in the war zone in which he may have a special interest.

NO MORE GERMAN.

For a Return to Greek and Latin in the Schools.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Every unprejudiced educator, every clear-thinking linguist, will fully indorse your splendid article in which you summed up with rare lucidity the complex problem of the study of foreign languages in our schools. Right you are. English ought to be, for the time being at least, a good enough and sufficiently accommodating vehicle for the thought and feelings of our average native and foreign born population.

Properly speaking, the acquisition of a foreign language is nothing but the gaining of a key either opening a new literature to us or giving us access to the population of a country where that idiom is spoken, or both. At least 99 per cent. of our high school boys or girls, with the present faulty and perverse method of teaching foreign languages in use in our schools, never reach that stage where they could really enjoy their Heine, Maupassant, Cervantes, or Dante in the original; and hardly 5 per cent. of them ever have the occasion of utilizing their linguistic knowledge in foreign countries.

The only two languages which have a real educational, yea, cultural value, Latin and Greek, have, alas! been almost eliminated from our colleges and universities as an integral part of the intellectual baggage of our graduates.

It is impossible to treat this vast problem adequately in a short letter, but I wish at least to state here that William II., through his educational revolution, in the first decade of his reign, one of whose principal platforms was the dilution of classical culture, has eventually contributed to the disruption of the splendid political and intellectual structure of old Germany, the Germany of Goethe and Schiller, of Ferdinand Lassalle and Karl Marx, of Virchow and Mommsen—that Germany, in brief, which was so dear to all of us, and whose memory still lurks in the hearts and minds of the descendants of our German immigrants of the forties, fifties, and sixties of the nineteenth century. The learned philologist and archaeologist, full of idealistic enthusiasm, and who was more at home in the Forum of Rome and about the Acropolis of Athens than in the streets of Berlin or Leipsic, yielded his time-honored place to the bespectacled doctor of chemistry working in his laboratory at the manufacturing of poisonous gases for the "poilus" of the future.

Germany has lost, probably for generations to come, her old claim to be counted among the intellectual world powers. It is Uncle Sam's chance to replace Fritz also in this domain. This war has transformed us from a conglomeration of disparate racial fragments into one great national unit, reduced the former Babel of tongues into one idiom, the idiom of patriotism and sacrifice; from a nation of debtors we have become a nation of creditors; the spendthrift of yesterday woke up next morning, as a docile and faithful pupil of Professor Hoover. A peaceful, pacific, yea, to some extent pacifistic, Commonwealth is on its way of becoming more warriorlike than the barrack nation of Frederick the Great and William, the imperial Miles Gloriosus of Potsdam.

And now, let us have the ambition of becoming also the most cultured nation of the world, the leader of the world culture of the future. Our Harvard and Yale must gradually acquire the ring of Cambridge and Oxford; the literary output of our great publishing houses ought to be equal in quality and quantity to that of the most famous book factories of London and Paris, Berlin and Vienna.

Professor Woodrow Wilson, almost absolute ruler of our army and navy, finance and transportation, commerce and industry, lacks one brilliant feather in his cap—a congenial Secretary of Education, able to outline for the post-bellum school generations of our whole country a broad educational program commensurate with Uncle Sam's new position as the leader-to-be of the world's nations.

RED CROSS TOTAL NOW $148,833,367

Figures Yet to be Received Are Expected to Swell Aggregate to $150,000,000.

CITY RAISED $35,000,000

Colonel W. B. Thompson Announces That Corporations Here Contributed Over $20,000,000.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Final figures on the second American Red Cross $100,000,000 war mercy fund still were incomplete tonight, but on the face of latest returns the fund was oversubscribed $48,833,367. Figures yet to be received were expected to carry the total to $150,000,000.

New York's contributions to the Second Red Cross War Fund will probably reach $35,000,000, it was announced at Red Cross Headquarters yesterday. Returns have not all been received, and it may be several days before the final total for the city is reached.

Not only was it the greatest sum of its kind ever raised in the city, but there were by far a greater number of contributors than have ever made gifts to one such cause before, it was announced, the number of givers in New York City, large and small, being well above 2,000,000. The hearty popular support for the war and for all war causes was hailed by Red Cross leaders as a fact even more gratifying than the generous oversubscription of $10,000,000.

Brooklyn and other boroughs, which appeared to be lagging earlier in the campaign, made a better showing at the finish, carrying all boroughs up to their quota. Darwin P. James, Chairman of the campaign in Brooklyn, announced yesterday:

"Brooklyn has passed its quota. Its total contributions to the Red Cross will be in excess of $3,000,000, or greater by at least $1,000,000 than Brooklyn was asked to give. This figure does not include a considerable amount subscribed in Manhattan, which will be finally credited to Brooklyn."

All returns were not in for the other boroughs last night, but their committees estimated final figures as follows: Queens, $450,000; Bronx, $400,000; Richmond, $225,000.

One of the large contributions which was not announced until yesterday was $100,000 from Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Schwab. Another additional contribution was $130,000 from Henry L. Doherty & Co. of 60 Wall Street, making a total of $280,000 from that firm.

Corporations Gave $20,000,000.

Colonel William Boyce Thompson, Chairman of the Corporations Division, which raised a total of more than $20,000,000, of which more than $12,000,000 was credited to New York City, said yesterday:

The corporations and business houses in New York deserve credit for the common sense they have shown by their fine support of the Red Cross. As was pointed out in the opinions of Charles E. Hughes, Morgan J. O'Brien, and other eminent lawyers, the corporations are vitally interested in protecting and preserving their property and they have responded splendidly to the call to insure the work of an unquestionably necessary agency in winning the war, as is the Red Cross.

The Corporations Committee is entirely satisfied with the responses made by the corporations. We actually raised here in Greater New York more than $20,000,000, although, because of deductions of subscriptions to be paid in other divisions our net total appears as something more than $12,000,000. This is really better than we aimed to do. Before the campaign started we felt that, apart from what we might get from the Carnegie Foundation and the Rockefeller Foundation, we ought to aim to get $15,000,000 here in Greater New York. Well, the Rockefeller Foundation gave $5,000,000 and the Carnegie Foundation gave $1,000,000. Deducting these, we succeeded in getting subscriptions of more than $16,000,000, thus bettering our goal.

The response to the call of the Red Cross has been so general all over the country and its work and purposes are now so much better understood by the great mass of Americans that we feel certain that in those cases where the corporations have declared special Red Cross dividends, instead of making direct contributions to the war fund, the greater part of these amounts will find their way into the treasury of the Red Cross.

Banks Here Contribute $1,862,800.

George F. Baker, Jr., Chairman of the committee canvassing banks and trust companies, summed up the week's results in the following letter sent to the Red Cross Headquarters yesterday:

I have to report that in Greater New York there are 49 national banks, 36 State banks, and 30 trust companies, all but five of which have contributed to the American Red Cross in this campaign.

Twenty-four national banks, 12 State banks, and 3 trust companies contributed 1 per cent. of their capital, the remaining banks contributing various sums aggregating $1,802,800.

The following additional contributions from banks were announced:

These weighed 1,206 pounds and netted, when counted, $10,800. During the drive the Central Trust Company has received for Red Cross account and counted three tons of small coinage.

It was announced that Red Cross girls raised $29,000 selling Red Cross signs to motorists in Queens.

Dr. Frank R. Oastler, Chairman of the Red Cross Hospital Division, announced yesterday that contributions to the Hospital, Homes and Dispensaries Fund amounted to $95,771. Contributions of $1,000 or more were as follows:

It is expected that several hundred thousand dollars may be raised by the auction of art works donated to the Red Cross, which was to have taken place at the Waldorf-Astoria on Monday night, but was postponed because it was midnight before the speaking and the announcement of figures was concluded. The date for the auction will be announced later.

John McCormack, who pledged himself to raise $100,000 for the Red Cross by concerts, sang last night in Newark and went $1,000 over his mark. Mr. McCormack's audience in the First Regiment Armory paid $9,000 to hear his long program of Irish airs and patriotic songs and later paid $2,000 for phonographic records which the singer auctioned.

NEW ENGLAND 67% OVERTOP

Total for Division Reaches $11,100,000, and Is Still Growing.

BOSTON, May 28.—New England gave a Red Cross subscription of 167 per cent. of its minimum quota of $7,000,000, Red Cross officials announced tonight. The total tonight had reached $11,100,000. It had been hoped that the district would oversubscribe by 25 per cent. and efforts had been made to go over the mark by 50 per cent.

The Boston metropolitan district contributed $4,240,000, as against a minimum requirement of $3,000,000. Other districts gave as follows:

STUYVESANT FISH GREETING

Sothern and Marlowe Recite in Aid of 307th Regimental Family Unit—Fete to Continue Today.

The Gramercy Park fête for the benefit of the 307th Regimental Family Unit began yesterday, but was interrupted by rain, and will be continued today from 3 until 11 P. M. The program mapped out for yesterday will be followed as closely as possible.

Stuyvesant Fish had not yet finished his address of welcome, as the representative of the Gramercy Park Trustees, who for the first time in the park's history opened the park to the public, when a thunderstorm broke. Less than $100 worth of cakes had been sold, when the downpour drove those in the booths, their arms filled with goods, including custard pies, to the refuge offered by the National Arts Club, whose doors were opened to the fête ticketholders for the day, and there the day's program was carried out so far as speeches and recitations by E. H. Sothern, Julia Marlowe, Edwin Markham, and Robert Underwood Johnson went. But Boyce's Tigers and the Junior Police parade and several other events were postponed.

The evening weather being also unpropitious, the ticket holders filled the hall of the National Arts Club again, and again E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe recited; Miss MacDonald and Clifford Walker, who have been entertaining soldiers in their camps, did monologues, and Helen S. Woodruff read a "take-off" on hints as to how to make home beautiful. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company's Glee Club also sang during the afternoon.

This afternoon the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company Military Band will play and tea will be served, and there will be dancing in the National Arts Club. Among those taking part yesterday were Mrs. Delancey Kane Jay, Mrs. Charles W. Cooper, Mrs. Robert G. Ingersoll, Mrs. Lewis B. Woodruff, Mrs. Henry Bartol, Mrs. Samuel P. Blagden, Mrs. Augustus Jay, Mrs. Schuyler Schieffelin, Mrs. Edward Ringwood Hewitt, Mrs. McNeal Swasey, Mrs. Lewis B. Woodruff and Mrs. J. A. Vanderpoel.

Some 1,200 tickets were sold for the fête, and those not used yesterday will be good for today.

HEBREW ORPHANS' HOME.

Part of Schieffelin Estate in Bronx Bought by Asylum.

One hundred and three acres of the Schieffelin estate in the Edenwald section of East Bronx have been sold through J. Clarence Davies to the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, it was announced yesterday. The property has large frontages on the Boston Road, Laconia Avenue, Baychester Avenue, and 231st Street. It has an elevation of 140 feet.

Ten streets and avenues were closed by the city in order to render the site available for the plan of building a number of separate cottages for the asylum. Building operations will not begin until after the war.

UPSET BY OVERWORK.

Committee Asked for David Nevius, Bank Cashier.

An application filed in the Supreme Court yesterday for the appointment of a committee of the property and person of David Nevius, until recently a resident of the Gotham Hotel, and relieved on May 8 of his duties as Vice President and Cashier of the Union Exchange National Bank, reveals the fact that Mr. Nevius is in the Rivercrest Sanitarium, and it is not believed his mental condition will improve. Mr. Nevius entered the employ of the bank as a clerk and has been widely recognized as one of the self-made banking officials of the city. He is 51 years old, and his condition is believed to be the result of overwork.

Of these, 60 per cent. have returned to their old employers.

CAPTIVES PUT TO WORK.

65,000 German Soldiers in Great Britain Are Available.

LONDON, May 28.—There are 65,000 German prisoners of war in Great Britain, it was announced in the House of Commons today by James Ian Macpherson, Parliamentary Secretary to the War Office. Of these, he said, 42,000 were employed in farming and other work of national importance, while 10,000 more had been designated for similar employment.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Provost Marshal General Crowder's work-or-fight order has been applied to interned enemy aliens by the Government, and many Germans formerly engaged in business in the large cities of the country soon will be plying hoes, rakes, and other farm implements in gardens at troop camps, raising vegetables for the soldiers.

One hundred of the interned enemy aliens have been sent from Fort Oglethorpe, Georgia, to Camp Devins, Mass. The next quotas will go to Camp Dix, New Jersey, and Camp Grant, Illinois. A 400-acre farm will be cultivated at Camp Dix. Each 100 aliens will be looked after by 25 soldiers.

SAY GERMAN BLINDED NURSE

But Miss Meiers's Sister Has Not Heard of Such Misfortune.

Special to The New York Times.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., May 28.—Relatives of Miss Melinda Meiers, who went overseas early in the war as a trained nurse, stated tonight that they have received word that she is on her way to this country hopelessly blind as the result of a German soldier's rage. According to them, she was attached to a hospital in Rumania, in which several wounded Germans were among the invalids. In an unguarded moment she was attacked by one of these and her sight destroyed.

TRENTON, N. J., May 28.—Miss Lillie A. Meiers said tonight that she had received no information that her sister had been blinded. She said she would communicate with Plainfield relatives and try and learn the source of their information.

Miss Lillie Meiers, who is a stenographer employed at the State House, said the last letter she received from her sister, some time ago, contained the information that she was well. The sister is a graduate of Mercer Hospital in this city.

GIRLS CAN HELP SOLDIERS.

Dr. Katherine B. Davis Tells Them How to Aid Government.

Dr. Katherine B. Davis of the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities, in addressing the "Win the War Meeting" for women and girls in the Great Hall at New York City College last night, said:

"American women and girls should make three resolutions; first, that they will do their tasks better now than they have ever done them before; second, that they will do some specific work; third, that they will live up to the highest standards of conduct and character. The members of the Commission on Training Camp Activities are asked to bring home to the public what the Government is doing to help the soldiers lead clean lives and establish clean communities. The Government wants the women and girls to back it up in every way, and they can do this best by forming a public opinion that will be conducive to the clean life."

FRAU OBER ANSWERS SUIT.

Admits German Sentiment, but Denies Any Open Expression.

Frau Margarete Arndt-Ober filed a reply in the Supreme Court yesterday to charges by the Metropolitan Opera Company that one of the reasons why she was discharged was because she was pro-German, had an "intense hatred for America," and openly criticised the attitude of the United States in the present war. Frau Ober, who is suing the Metropolitan for breach of contract, said:

"I am simply an artist. I have never mixed in politics and have been careful to do nothing which would antagonize the public, whose favor I have to so great an extent enjoyed and before whom it is my earnest desire and hope to appear again. I have never at any time openly and outwardly manifested sympathy with the cause of Germany and hostility toward the United States. When a great corporation stoops to such so-called defenses, it clearly exposes to what straits it is willing to resort to deprive me of what the justice of the New York courts, I feel convinced, will give me, though I am a native German and still a German subject."

LEAGUE UPHOLDS ANDERSON

Anti-Saloon Trustees Unanimously Stand by Its State Superintendent.

The Trustees of the New York Anti-Saloon League by unanimous vote at a meeting yesterday turned down the demand made by some temperance and prohibition organizations for the scalp of William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the league. The demand was based on attacks made by Mr. Anderson on William J. Bryan for consenting to become President of the Dry Federation, which Mr. Anderson does not consider 100 per cent. "dry." In a statement made on behalf of the Trustees, it is pointed out that Mr. Anderson already had received vindication from the National Executive Committee of the league.

Club for Women Democrats.

To provide a political home for women who will not affiliate with men's political organizations, a preliminary meeting for the organization of the Women's Federal Democratic Club was held at the Hotel Vanderbilt last evening, with more than 100 women present. The temporary officers chosen were Miss Louise E. Tucker Chairman pro tem.; Miss M. Louise Gross, Secretary, and Mrs. Marion Coffey, Treasurer. Miss Tucker told the women that the organization was the result of a suggestion of President Wilson immediately after the women had received the vote.

"We will not interfere with local politics," said Miss Tucker, "there is work we can do that is aside from that of the regular political organization, as the President said when he asked us to do this."

Directors Re-elect Willard.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, May 28.—At a meeting of the Directors of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company in New York today, Daniel Willard was re-elected President, and other executives were reelected. This means that Mr. Willard and the several Vice Presidents will continue in the service of the company, in operations other than those which are controlled by the Government.

Senate Passes Urgency Bill.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The Senate today passed the Urgency Deficiency bill, carrying $123,000,000, including $60,000,000 for housing Government war workers. The bill has been passed by the House.

MOONEY RESENTENCED TO DIE ON GALLOWS

Court Orders Him Removed to San Quentin Prison and Executed Within 90 Days.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 28.—Thomas J. Mooney, convicted of murder in connection with the Preparedness Day bomb explosion here in 1916, was resentenced today to be hanged on an indeterminate date not less than sixty nor more than ninety days from this date at San Quentin Prison. Sentence was passed by Judge Franklin A. Griffin, who presided at the trial.

The order specified that Mooney be removed to San Quentin Prison within ten days, and there hanged at a time to be determined by the Warden, but not less than sixty nor more than ninety days from this date. Judge Griffin did not amplify the statement necessary to sentence, merely saying that the law imposed a plain duty on him. Mooney showed little emotion.

Today's developments take from the courts a case which has consumed much time for the last two years and has attracted international attention. Organizations as far distant as Russia have sought to intervene in Mooney's behalf.

Mooney's fate now rests with Governor Stephens, who has a pardon petition before him and a request from President Wilson for executive clemency, based on findings of a Federal commission that questioned testimony which contributed to Mooney's conviction.

Mooney was convicted in February, 1917. An earlier death sentence was nullified because an appeal was pending when the date set for his execution arrived. The bomb explosion resulted in the death of ten persons and the injury of thirty-eight others.

FRENCH HAIL 21ST INFANTRY

Veterans of Same Organization in France Send Greetings Here.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—The War Department made public today a message of greetings to the 21st Infantry Regiment of the American Army from the veterans of the 21st Infantry Regiment of France. The Honorary Presidents of the Fraternal Association of the Veterans of the 21st French Infantry Regiment are Generals Michel, Kolb, and Rosenwald. The text of the letter follows:

Paris, March 26.

The veterans of the 21st French Regiment of Infantry to their comrades of the 21st American Regiment of Infantry:

At the beginning of the second year of the war of the great Republic of the United States, which, shaken to its very depths, rose to the defense of right, the veterans of the 21st French Regiment of Infantry are happy to send their fraternal greetings to their valiant comrades of the 21st American Infantry.

They wish us to assure them of their gratitude and that of all French for the glorious assistance they bring to this gigantic struggle whence the fate of liberty and of the world depends. In spite of past and future suffering, they are certain of the definite victory, and while awaiting that glorious day they all join you in cheering from the bottom of their hearts:

Hurrah for the 21st American Regiment of Infantry! Hurrah for the American Army! GAGNEPAIN.

In a reply to the veterans of the French organization Secretary Baker said:

"Your fraternal thought will go straight to the hearts of your American comrades. The example of their seniors will be a stimulant to them and they will make it a point of honor to prove themselves worthy of those who for almost four years have been defending the liberty of the world."

CONCRETE SHIP TESTED.

The Faith Makes a Successful Voyage with Observers Aboard.

A PACIFIC PORT, May 28.—"She acted just like any other vessel," was the way Captain R. E. Connell, commanding the steamer Faith, the largest concrete ship in the world, commented on the vessel's behavior during her trial voyage from another Pacific port to this port, where she arrived today.

"We had some very rough weather and the Faith certainly stood the test," said Captain Connell. "She responded readily to her helm throughout the voyage."

F. R. McMillan and H. H. Loefler, research engineers for the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and C. C. Brush of the United States Lighthouse Service, were aboard the Faith as observers on this trial voyage.

"In our opinion the trip was very successful and indications are all very favorable toward the success of concrete ships," said the observers.

NOTED REVOLUTIONIST DEAD

Amilcare Cipriani Was Often Elected, but Never Sat in Italian Chamber

News has been received here of the death of the famous Italian revolutionist, Amilcare Cipriani, in a Paris hospital on May 3, at the age of 73. Although elected to the Chamber of Deputies nine times, he had never taken his seat. He had kept on fighting against Austria in 1866 after Victor Emmanuel had made peace, and was condemned to death. There were other sentences to serve.

He also took part in the Paris Commune of 1871, and was again condemned to death. From the first sentence he escaped; the second was commuted to a sojourn at the penal colony of New Caledonia. There, too, he started a revolt, was captured, and imprisoned. In 1879 he was free again and in Paris. Here he wrote for Le Citoyen until the law overtook him again, and he was arrested and expelled from the country, and sought refuge in Switzerland.

Although he had long since received amnesty for his old Italian sentence, he had nevertheless been subsequently sentenced as a deserter. In 1880 he ventured to go to Rimini to see his old father. There he was recognized by the neighbors and denounced. The sentence was for ten years, but the Government, afraid of the demonstration aroused in his behalf, commuted it to a few weeks. In 1894 he was again in France, and was caught in the dragnet spread after the assassination of President Carnot and again expelled. In 1897, in spite of being a cripple from carrying an Austrian bullet received fighting with Garibaldi in the '60s, he joined the Greeks against the Turks until the powers intervened and stopped the war.

Although he had never been allowed to take his seat in the Italian Chamber—he was last elected from Milan in January, 1914—French justice had dealt leniently with him, and since the present war began he had been allowed to grow old with his books as companions in the village of Bandol, in the South of France. The other day he said: "We fought for the freedom of nations; this war will free the people."

But his life was not all adventure; there was also romance in it. When he was living in exile with Mazzini in London in 1869, he fell in love with and married an English girl. Then Cipriani went to France to fight the Germans and lost all trace of his wife and a daughter who had been born meanwhile. Thirty-eight years later he met the daughter for the first time in Paris. She was married and had lived almost next door to him for some months before she discovered who he was.

BOARD OF ESTIMATE TO PAY SUBWAY BILL

Votes $300,000 for Interborough Connections in Times Square and Brooklyn.

WILL COMPLETE 'H' SYSTEM

Service Board Counsel Refuses Assurance That Trains Will Be Running by June 15.

Voting $300,000 for the Interborough Rapid Transit Company to make the necessary connections at Times Square, Manhattan, and at Borough Hall and at Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn, the Board of Estimate at a special meeting yesterday cut short the controversy between the city and the Interborough as to which should pay for the work and brought nearer to completion the "H" subway system which will mean express service straight up and down the east and west sides of the city. The Public Service Commission would give no assurance as to just when the Seventh Avenue and Lexington Avenue lines would be ready for use, but it is expected they will be in operation by July 1.

Comparatively little work is to be done on the Times Square and Brooklyn Borough Hall and Atlantic Avenue connections, but when the work is completed it will mean that trains in the present subway will run into the new Lexington Avenue subway at Forty-second Street and proceed to the Bronx. Trains in the new Seventh Avenue subway will run from the Battery up the west side of Manhattan to Times Square, from which point they will proceed over the tracks of the present subway. Each side of Manhattan will thus have a separate subway system. The present tracks of the subway between Grand Central and Times Square will be used for shuttle train service, connecting the main east side and west side trunk lines. Both of the lines will be operated by the Interborough.

In granting the money, which was in the form of corporate stock and will be charged against the debt limit of the city, the Board of Estimate made it clear that if, eventually, it is decided that the Interborough and not the city should pay the $300,000 its action should not be construed as default. The agreement of October, 1917, provided that the cost of the work should be paid by the Interborough out of its construction fund of $38,600,000. The company, however, refused to accept the agreement and the Public Service Commission requested the Board of Estimate to consent to a modification of the agreement and authorize the money.

President Dowling of Manhattan asked Howard A. Butler of counsel for the commission if he could tell when the Seventh Avenue and Lexington Avenue lines would be ready for operation.

"No, I cannot," replied the lawyer.

"June 15 is the proper date, is it not?" asked Mr. Dowling.

"I believe so," was the reply.

Borough President Connolly was not present and President Van Name of Richmond voted in the negative.

The Merchants' Association sent a letter to each member of the Public Service Commission yesterday urging him to make all possible haste in reaching an agreement with the Board of Estimate by which the demands of the men employed on the new subways for increased pay may be met, the services of the men retained, and the contractors be relieved from financial burdens which they are no longer able to carry.

"The imperative necessity of an adjustment of this matter is so obvious," the letter says, "that we think no formal question of procedure should be allowed to prevent action in such form as immediately to bring the final decision of the question before the Board of Estimate by means of a proposal adopted and recommended by you."

The commission has already submitted to the Board of Estimate a method of continuing the work, and is now waiting action by the board.

2 TOWNS VOTE 'DRY,' 3 'WET'

Elections on Local Option Held in New Jersey.

ATLANTIC HIGHLANDS, N. J., May 28.—At the local option election here today the "wets" cast 351 votes, the "drys" 116, a majority of 135 for the "wets." Until the vote was counted it had been expected the "drys" would win.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., May 28.—The citizens of Wall Township, about four miles south of here, at a special local option election today, voted "dry." The "wets" required 31 more votes to carry the election.

DOVER, N. J., May 28.—Wharton Borough went "wet" by a majority of 220 in an election on local option today. The total vote cast was 515 "wet" and 295 "dry."

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., May 28.—An election on local option here today resulted in a victory for the "wets" by a majority of 67. The total vote cast was 356 "wet" and 491 "dry."

TOMS RIVER, N. J., May 28.—A "dry" victory by a majority of 16 was the outcome of a local option election held here today. The vote cast was 247 "dry" and 231 "wet."

NO VISITORS IN DEATH HOUSE

Sing Sing Murderers Punished for Shouting at Execution.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, May 28.—As a harsh disciplinary measure, Sing Sing prison officials have just issued an order forbidding relatives to visit the sixteen condemned murderers in the death house here.

The condemned men are held incommunicado, prison attendants say, because of the demonstration they made the night John Kushnieruk was executed last week. Then they shouted their denunciation of the executioner and the prison officers. Heretofore relatives were permitted to visit the prisoners facing death on Sundays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays. Now even the mother of sixteen-year-old Paul Chapman, the boy murderer from Brooklyn, is prevented, it is said, from seeing him.

Prison attaches say they cannot recall when relatives were ever before forbidden to see condemned prisoners. Warden William Moyer and the other attendants at Kushnieruk's execution were greatly annoyed by the disturbance made by his companions in the condemned cells. Alvah Briggs, convicted of taking four lives in St. Lawrence County, and Joe Cohen, who is alleged to have directed the assassination of Harriet Baff, the Manhattan poultry dealer, are said to have led the weird shouting then.

Whitman Speaks at Organ School.

Governor Whitman spoke last night at the commencement exercises of the Guilmant Organ School, held at the Old First Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue and Twelfth Street. The Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield, chaplain and professor of hymnology in the school, presented the diplomas, and there was a program arranged by Dr. William C. Carl, including the playing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" by Joseph Bonnet, organist of the Church of St. Eustache, Paris.

CADET AVIATOR KILLED TAKING HIS FINAL TEST

Mineola Army Board Says Youth Tilted Machine at Wrong Angle, Causing It to Fall.

MINEOLA, L. I., May 28.—Cadet Aviator Charles B. Passwater of Noblesville, Ind., was killed today when his airplane dropped 300 feet while he was flying near the grounds of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club. The machine went into a "tail spin" and before Passwater could straighten it out the plane hit the ground.

It was said at Hazelhurst aviation field late this afternoon that the exact cause of the accident was not known, but it was thought that possibly Passwater was flying at too flat an angle, and the machine was stalled. He was unconscious when lifted from the wreckage and died an hour later in the post hospital.

Passwater, who was 23 years old, came to Hazelhurst about three weeks ago from a Southern training camp. He was completing his training and expected to get his commission as a Lieutenant in about two weeks. He was preparing to land at a designated spot, a part of his training course, when the accident occurred.

A board of investigation under Major R. D. Wrenn found that the cadet attempted to glide to earth while his machine was at a wrong angle. This, said Major Wrenn, threw the plane into a "tail spin" and caused it to crash down.

GERMANS SEIZE DUTCH SHIPS

Four Taken to Swinemunde—None to Sail Without Permission.

AMSTERDAM, Monday, May 27.—The Germans have seized and taken into Swinemunde the Dutch steamship Jantje and sailing vessels Maria, Jacoba, and Gerzine. This is in pursuance of their policy of not permitting Dutch vessels to sail without German safe conducts, pending arrangement of the transit question between Holland and Germany.

TURN OLD METAL INTO WAR STAMPS

Metal Exchange, Behind in Its Work, Closes Doors Twice to Handle Crowds.

$2,500 RECEIVED YESTERDAY

Police Decide Exchange Does Not Require License, as It Is a "Part of the Government."

So many persons came yesterday to the metal exchange of the War Savings Committee in the Winfield Building, Fortieth Street and Fifth Avenue, that twice during the day the doors had to be closed so that those who were in could be waited upon before others were admitted. Last night when Mrs. Joseph Griswold Deane and Mrs. Charles L. Tiffany ordered the business closed for the day the four appraisers were far behind in their work and piled about the counters were silver and gold articles that were still to be appraised and their owners paid in War Savings Stamps. Mrs. Deane estimated at that time that articles to the value of $2,500 had been turned in during the day.

When business opened there was a line of men, women, and children waiting, each with one or more gold or silver articles that they wished turned into stamps so that the Government can melt the metal into bullion and so save a gold reserve in this country. Among those who came early was J. S. Barnes, Jr., who brought in a great silver cup, a trophy he had won three times at the traps at the Westchester Country Club. The inscriptions on the cup showed that George C. McMurtry, Jr., had presented it in 1911. Other winners who had held it were J. C. Ayer, C. B. Stears, H. O. Whitney, S. Cott, G. S. Nicholas, and F. Hall, whose names were inscribed on it.

"There is nothing I can do with this trophy half so important as Uncle Sam can do with it," said Mr. Barnes. "I think I can win another, and anyhow I don't feel willing to keep it as long as the Government can make use of it."

The cup was valued by E. M. Gattle, the appraiser, at $57.00, and Mr. Barnes walked away with the equivalent in War Savings Stamps.

Mrs. Alfred Wagstaff, wife of Colonel Wagstaff, head of the S. P. C. A., brought two old silver bowls. She wore a service flag pin with five stars, and said she had three sons, a son-in-law, and a nephew in the service. She added that as her whole heart is in the war and the winning of it, she brought the bowls to buy stamps for her little grandson.

Mrs. Deane explained why the exchange opened without either a license to do a second hand business, or to conduct a pawnshop. She said that the committee had been advised that it would be wise to obtain a license from the city, and so avoid trouble. The matter, she said, was referred to Adrian H. Larkin, attorney for the War Savings Committee. He submitted the question to District Attorney Swann, and the latter replied that it was not a question for his office and advised that the Police Commissioner be consulted.

Mr. Larkin received a letter on Saturday from John W. Goff, Jr., Third Deputy Police Commissioner, saying that the application had been put up to the Corporation Counsel's office and the latter had ruled that no license would be required, because the exchange was under the auspices of the War Savings Committee, which is a part of the Government.

GERMANY REQUIRES NOTICE.

Otherwise Prisoners May Not Be Interviewed Without Presence of Witnesses.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—In response to this Government's inquiry regarding regulations in German prison camps, Germany has replied through the Spanish Embassy in Berlin that prisoners may be interviewed by Inspectors without presence of witnesses if previous notice of inspection has been given, otherwise witnesses must be present.

Court Approves New War Fund.

Supreme Court Justice Platzek approved yesterday the incorporation of the British and Canadian Patriotic Fund, organized to solicit subscriptions here to aid the families of British subjects of New York who are fighting in the British or Canadian armies. Among the organizers are Brig. Gen. W. A. White, head of the British Recruiting office here; C. Clive Bayley, British Consul, and Thomas A. Jarvis, President of the Canadian Society of New York.

WANTED HIS LEAVE FIRST.

Sailor from the Vindictive Won Medal and Money Bonus Also.

DOVER, England, May 17. (Associated Press.)—One of the crew of the Vindictive was asked by a friend who met him on his return what happened to him when the old cruiser was blown up in the harbor at Ostend.

"I jumped overboard," was the reply, "and the next thing I remember was when I came to in Dunkirk. An officer leaned over me, and told me I had earned the Distinguished Conduct Medal, a money bonus, and a week's leave."

"What did you say to that?" asked his friend.

"I told him I would like the leave first," replied the sailor.

NATION MAY TAKE CONTROL OF WOOL

Peabody Tells Manufacturers That a Textile Administrator Is to be Appointed.

AFFECTS ENTIRE INDUSTRY

Cotton, Silks, and Other Fabrics to be Restricted—Ban Civilian Use of Olive Drab.

Announcement was made yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers, held at the Waldorf-Astoria, that a Federal Textile Administrator was about to be appointed, as a war measure, for the purpose of coordinating the interests of the Government, and those of the entire textile industry of the nation.

Herbert E. Peabody, President of the association, and Vice Chairman of the War Service Committee of the Woolen Industry, made the announcement, following a pl a by Samuel Weill, President of the National Association of Clothiers for greater unification of effort on the part of all branches of the woolen industry to meet the needs of the Government and the civilian population in the matter of clothing. President Peabody's announcement seemed to come as a complete surprise to the 200 woolen manufacturers, jobbers, and representatives of the men's tailoring trade present. Up to the present time, the woolen, cotton, silk, and other fibre industries have co-operated with the Government separately.

In making his announcement, Mr. Peabody, who as Vice Chairman of the woolen industry, has been in close touch with the Quartermaster's Department of the army, gave few details. "The Government," he said, "has decided to appoint a textile administrator. He will have jurisdiction over the woolen, cotton, silk and other textile industries. The administrator's office will be divided into sections, and naturally we will be interested particularly in the woolen section, which will comprise representatives of the manufacturing, jobbing and tailoring to the trade interests."

It seemed to be the idea of those present at the meeting that in a general way the forthcoming textile administrator would control all the textile industries of the country, much in the same way as the Government is now controlling transportation, food and fuel. At present the woolen trade of the country is working under a system of fixed prices set by the Government.

Harry P. Bonties, President of Claflin's, Incorporated, and at present Chief of the Woolen Branch of the Supply and Equipment Bureau of the Quartermaster's Department, who appeared at the meeting as the special representative of Major Gen. Goethals, Acting Quartermaster General, said that the Government did not just now feel that fixed prices for army fabrics in a strict sense should be established. "There is," he added, "of course, a price which we consider fair both to the Government and the manufacturer, based on the cost of raw material which has been established, plus an average conversion cost, and plus a fair profit, but we should not feel that it would be proper to bind the Government to this price under all circumstances."

"There is one other matter which I should like to bring up," Chief Bonties said, "and that is the impropriety of using for civilian purposes the olive drab shade now, in a way, consecrated to the use of our troops. The commercial use of our national flag is very properly forbidden by the law, and the uniforms that clothe our troops should be no less respected than the banner under which they march."

Mr. Bonties's plea brought quick response in the form of a resolution adopted unanimously, in which the manufacturers requested the proper authorities to adopt at once measures to prevent the manufacture, sale, or use of olive drab cloth except for and by the United States Army. The action taken yesterday would, it was predicted, have the effect of practically stopping the use by the public, not only of woolen cloths of olive drab color, but of cloths made from other textiles.

Mr. Bonties said the General Staff of the army was now preparing a definite program for 1919, and that when its requirements were announced it would be possible to determine how much machinery must be assigned to the clothing of hundreds of thousands of men to be called to the colors. Now, it was said, about 50 per cent. of the woolen machinery of the country was engaged in turning out military cloths. Due to the alleged scarcity in raw wool supplies, and the intention of General Goethals to pile up big reserves of soldiers' clothing for emergency, Mr. Bonties said that substitutes in the form of cotton and reworked wool "will undoubtedly have to be used to a very much larger extent than formerly in producing fabrics for civilian use."

President Weill of the clothing manufacturers' organization, William Bianel, President of the National Woolens and Trimmings Association, and J. L. Reiss of the International Tailoring Association, with headquarters in Chicago, all spoke in discouraging terms regarding the outlook for getting cloths for civilian trade.

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday ....6 p. c. for the best names
Monday..............6 " " " " "

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Hand Work and Fine Materials.

"Though there has been a deal of talk this year about economy and simplicity in dresses for women," said a local manufacturer of considerable prominence, "plain, low priced garments have not been our best sellers. On the contrary, never before has hand embroidery been used so extensively as this year, and the very best materials are usually wanted. The only real economy has been in the use of less materials in cutting garments. But this has not in the least detracted any from the smart appearance of the gown, and style is as necessary as it ever was in making sales."

Ribbons on Undergarments.

Practically all of the best selling numbers in fancy underwear lines are extensively trimmed with ribbons, according to reports from several of the large manufacturers in this city. This is said to be particularly true of the better grades which are made to be worn under more or less transparent waists. Embroidered designs, both large and small, are also wanted in these garments. Comparatively high prices have apparently had no appreciable effect in curtailing business, retail merchants everywhere ordering in substantial quantities and frequently coming in for additional supplies in an astonishingly short time.

Homemade Bathing Suits.

While it may be due to a spirit of economy, though it is believed to be due more to a desire to be individual, the use of a considerable number of homemade silk bathing suits for women is presaged this Summer by the over-the-counter sales here of the fabrics that go into them. For actual swimming suits, there has been a large run on satins and taffetas and some call for the better mohairs, which are scarce and high. Black is far and away the leading shade in these purchases, fully 85 per cent. of the yardage disposed of being of this hue. For "non-wettable" suits there has been buying of moires and brocades.

South Does Not Like Blue Hats.

Despite the fine demand that exists here for Georgette hats in various shades, particularly in navy blue, these chapeaux do not appear to be favored especially by some of the Southern trade. A buyer for a store in an Alabama city came into the office of the Retail Millinery Association of America very recently and complained that he could not find enough good white hats in this market to fill the demand he has for them. "We can't sell navy these days," he said, "and that's all they are showing here. We can't sell Georgettes, either—for our patrons regard them as Winter hats—and navy Georgettes are all I can see. I want white, all white, milans and some fine quality leghorns. The trade all say they have them, but they can't back up their statement with the goods."

Tailored Waists Liked.

There are some very smart tailored waists being shown in the late offerings for the Summer trade, and it is said that buyers are taking to them very readily. Glossy satins are popular for this purpose and are made frequently with tight sleeves, the body of the waist close fitting, and with prominent buttons in front from the top of a high collar to the waist line. Such waists as these are usually in solid colors, the only contrast being the buttons. Cuffs are sometimes large and flaring, with buttons to match those on the front of the waist, but smaller. Pearl gray is popular in these waists.

Wide Range of Millinery Styles.

It is said that never before have women had such an opportunity to display originality in their selection of a hat as they have this Spring. There is such a wide variety of hats in vogue and on display in the leading millinery shops of the city that every woman may choose something which is expressive of her personality and still have "the latest thing." Everything from simple untrimmed but smart shapes to those literally buried in flowers, ribbons, and plumage may be seen on well dressed women. Gold lace is extensively used on many models of an Oriental design, while others glisten with lacquered plumage. All of these seem to be getting their share of business in a season which is proving very large from the standpoint of volume.

Gray Goods Sales Still Lag.

Gray goods sales, particularly in the case of the coarser fabrics, continued to lag here yesterday. Some additional business was done in printcloths, and some nice sales of sateens and twills were put through at full prices for shipment in June and July. In the printcloths, business was done on May-June 38½-inch 64-60s at 19 cents, but other staple construction lagged. Buyers showed more of a disposition to go after odd widths than they have for some time, and among these sales were 31½-inch 56-52s, for May and June delivery, at 13 cents, and 32-inch 64-60s at 16 cents for August shipment. Closing prices on spot printcloths, several of them nominal, were:

39-inch, 72-76s....22½c	38½-inch, 64-56s..18c

Fall Shoes to be Lighter.

Not only will the men's shoes to be offered to the public this Fall be less varied in style than has been the case for many years, but a great many of them will be lighter in weight than for a long time. The war, through the United States Government, is held responsible for both conditions. As to styles, the Government has asked that as few as possible be produced through the life of the war. As to weight, the change will come about through army requirements of almost all the heavy upper and sole leather that will be available for some time. With the lightening of the weight of shoes for civilians, which means making them of lighter and less durable stock, there will come a decline in the amount of wear they will give. This, however, is regarded as one of the burdens of the war that must be borne with a grin.

Features in Fall Suits.

Wool velours are very much in evidence in all the early showings of Fall suits for women, and various shades of tan seem to be very popular thus far. Coats are being made longer than last year in some instances, while in others they are the same as last season and even shorter. Buyers have not yet shown any disposition to favor any particular length, but have bought a few of each, evidently waiting to see what the season develops before they commit themselves. Sleeves usually are tight, and narrow shoulders prevail in nearly all lines. Various belted and girdle effects appear, some of which confine the waistline closely to the body. Others are more or less loose. The general silhouette is very little changed from last Winter.

New Drafts Hurting Sales.

Anticipating a falling off in demand as the result of the actual and probable drafting of several hundred thousand additional young men for the National Army, returning salesmen who are not perpetually steeped in optimism say that retailers of men's wearables of all kinds have in very many cases curtailed their purchases for Fall. The only really bright spots at the moment, it was said yesterday, are the cities or towns located near the big training camps and cantonments. Retailers in those places are doing a big business in all qualities of the goods in question. A notable illustration of what a camp does for men's wear business is the comparison between Battle Creek and Grand Rapids, Mich. They are within 100 miles of each other. The former has a big camp near by, and the latter has not. The former is booming, but of the latter, as one salesman asserted, "the less said the better."

ATTACKS ESPIONAGE ACT.

Counsel for German Editors Says It Violates Freedom of the Press.

Alleging that the Espionage act is unconstitutional, Otto A. Stiefel, attorney for Benedict and Edwin S. Prieth, former publishers of the New Jersey Freie Zeitung at Newark, and Henry Waechter, William von Katzler, and Hans von Hundelshausen, editors, filed in the United States court at Newark yesterday a demurrer to the indictment recently returned against them as a result of articles published last Summer.

Mr. Stiefel says on the constitutionality of the espionage law that it violates "the First Amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which provides that Congress shall make no law abridging the freedom of speech or of the press."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Further Losses Among Industrials, but Rails Gain—Liberty 3½s Now Par.

Following the line of reasoning which resulted in the general drop in prices after the President's speech on tax legislation Monday, the market opened yesterday morning with the industrials showing further losses and the rails at about the previous night's close. The downward movement in the recent favorites among the industrials continued through the forenoon with rallies in some issues extinguishing most of yesterday's losses. The final price changes were irregular, with the industrials for the most part under their Monday figures and the railroads showing a fair recovery.

In financial circles no attempt had been made yet to forecast the extent of the increases which the new tax bill will carry, and traders look for uncertain fluctuations until Congress furnishes some indication of the changes which must be made. Prices in some issues carried Monday's declines much further, American Sumatra leading this move with a slump of nearly 10 points, followed by a rally of almost the same size. Baldwin broke through 80, afterward recovering most of its decline, while Bethlehem Steel B dropped to 77⅞ at the low. Steel rallied 1⅜ from its lowest price and closed almost unchanged.

Sentiment is slowly crystalizing in favor of the railroads, but no marked increase in buying has yet resulted from the radical increase in rates allowed to carriers. There were times yesterday when it seemed as though the buying in rails were going to reflect the rate advance, but activity in most of them was very limited. An exception was supplied by New Haven, which moved up to 45⅜, closing with a net gain of 3 points. Interborough Consolidated issues were heavy on the passing of the preferred dividend, and Marine preferred made a new low for this movement on talk of further difficulties placed in the way of consummation of the agreement for the sale of the British companies by the proposed increases in excess profits taxes. Activity was slightly larger than on Monday, with sales still short of a million shares.

The Liberty 3½s were in great demand yesterday and made a further advance to 99.98 at one time, at which price thousand dollar bonds were selling for only 20 cents less than par. The second 4s recovered slightly after dropping to 94.26, and the new 4¼s closed practically unchanged at 97.24. Call money again loaned at 6 per cent. throughout the session.

GOOD TONE IN LONDON.

Money More Scarce Owing to Purchases of Treasury Bills.

LONDON, May 28.—The stock market had a good tone today. Home and investment issues hardened in view of the impending distribution of dividends. Foreigners, especially Central Americans, were firm. Industrials were quite steady. Some mining stocks were strong on reorganization talk.

Money was in good demand and scarcer, which was attributed to the recent heavy purchases of Treasury bills. Discount rates were quiet.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, May 28.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 60 francs for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 16 centimes. Five per cent. loan, 87 francs 85 centimes.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Most Demand Loans Made at 6%—Time Money Dull.

Practically all of the demand loans made yesterday were negotiated at 6 per cent., although some few transactions were put through at 5¾ per cent. The renewal rate was also 6 per cent. Time money was dull, and it was reported that the supply of funds was very limited.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

New Haven Leads the Market.

In view of things of the past, it seems extraordinary to point out New Haven as a major stabilizer of a weak market, but such seemed to be the case yesterday. Early in the session when the industrials were declining rapidly, New Haven led the railroad group in an upward movement which had a constructive effect later in practically all parts of the list. At 45⅜ the price reached a new high level for the year, and the closing quotation of 44⅛ scored a net advance of 3 points. There appeared to be "good" buying of the stock all the way along, a development which added to Wall Street's puzzlement over the course of this issue in recent weeks.

Royal Dutch Rumors.

The American shares of the Royal Dutch Petroleum Corporation have been the subject of much mental speculation usually accompanying upward movements of the price. Yesterday it was reported that representatives of the British Government had bought a large amount of the 220,000 existing shares, presumably with the idea of adding them to other shares bought in Holland for the purpose of control. A companion rumor was that more than 50 per cent. of the American certificates had been acquired by interests allied with the Shell Transport Company, a British concern, and that shortly the remaining stock would be exchanged for Shell shares. In quarters familiar with Royal Dutch affairs it was said that nothing was known of either reported development. The stock stands in a unique position in respect to news and gossip about it for the reason that the headquarters where verification might be secured lie across the ocean.

Fuel Shortage Hurt Cable Company.

The National Conduit and Cable Company is one of the concerns domiciled in the neighborhood of New York which makes direct reference to the effect of fuel shortage on its business last Winter. The quarterly statement issued yesterday for the three months ended March 31 noted that the factory was shut down for lack of fuel approximately one-third of the working days. A loss of $292,413 resulted for the period, according to the estimated income account, after meeting expenses, taxes, and depreciation reserves. In the corresponding quarter last year the company had a profit of $1,612,211.

Gasoline Exports Increase.

War demands abroad continue to absorb increasing amounts of gasoline. Commerce reports indicate that the allied nations imported from the United States in March approximately 22,000,000 gallons, compared with about 5,000,000 gallons in the same month last year. The expansion of the American Army and naval forces in European waters, presumably, accounted in part for the great increase. France imported close to 11,339,000 gallons, against 2,156,000 gallons in March of 1917. The aggregate of exports during the month was 27,918,000 gallons to the whole outside world, an increase of more than 100 per cent.

City of Newark Notes Sold.

The National City Company received yesterday an award of $3,000,000 of City of Newark (N. J.) 5 per cent. notes, due Dec. 1, 1918. The notes were offered by the company on a 4.80 per cent. basis, and sold promptly.

Liberty 3½s Close to Par.

The tax-exempt 3½ per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan continued their upward movement yesterday and sold as high as 99.98, compared with 99.84, the high point touched on Monday following the announcement of further tax legislation. After selling at 99.98, a reaction set in and the bonds went down to 99.58, closing at 99.60, which represented a net loss of .10 for the day. Transactions totaled $1,637,000.

Liberty 4s and 4¼s Decline.

The 4 per cent. bonds of the Second Liberty Loan and the 4¼s of the Third Loan established new low records yesterday on the Stock Exchange. The former sold down to 94.26 and the latter at 97.20. The 4s were dealt in to the amount of $1,048,000, and the closing quotation was 94.34; while the 4¼s closed at 97.24, a net loss of .06 for the day. Sales of 4¼s amounted to $3,439,000.

Liberty Loan Payments.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York received yesterday only about $17,000,000 in payment of the second installment on the Third Liberty Loan. The 20 per cent. payment due yesterday should have brought in a minimum of $63,671,000, but evidently a great many banks outside of New York City did not mail their remittances until yesterday, and consequently the Reserve Bank will not have the funds before this morning. Despite the fact that the Treasury Department circular clearly states that payments must be made on a certain date, many of the country banks content themselves with mailing their checks on the specified day, not allowing for even the normal length of time for the mail to reach its destination. In some instances, country banks wait for their customers to make their payments before they remit to the Reserve Bank, and if the customers are a day or two late in paying the bond installments, the banks do not hesitate to delay their remittances to the Reserve Bank.

More Gold from Canada.

The New York agency of the Bank of Montreal received yesterday another $1,000,000 of gold from Canada, making a total of $4,000,000 received in the last ten days. The object of the gold importations is to relieve the tension in the exchange situation in respect to Montreal.

City Bonds Strong.

The 4½ per cent. bonds of the City of New York which mature in 1963 sold yesterday at par, and the asked price for similar bonds of other maturities was also 100. Not long ago the bonds were quoted at around 93. The recent advance has been due to the demand for tax-exempt securities and the latest news from Washington regarding plans for increasing income taxes has naturally been effective in creating a still greater demand for tax-exempt bonds of this character.

The Marine Deal.

The Finance Committee of the International Mercantile Marine Company held its regular Tuesday meeting yesterday, and President Franklin made his regular Tuesday reply to the reporters: "No developments to report" on the big deal, but the dealers in Marine stock apparently were more optimistic, for they bid the stock up some three points while the meeting was going on. Incidentally, the most eager seekers after news about the deal are not the stockholders, but subordinate employes of the company, who are wondering if it means the liquidation of the whole concern.

The B. R. T. Financing.

Not many more days are expected to go by before an announcement is made on behalf of the War Finance Corporation regarding the financing of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit note issue which falls due in six weeks more. Officials of the company were in Washington yesterday talking the matter over. The company has planned and obtained authorization for a bond issue of $130,000,000, but it is possible only the $57,000,000 necessary to take up the notes will be floated.

Due to the uncertainties incident to any war, there are at present securities selling at prices that do not indicate their intrinsic worth. The man who is able to determine real values can place his money in conservative bonds and notes to particularly good advantage now.

M'ADOO COMBINES EXPRESS COMPANIES

Adams, American, Wells Fargo, and Southern United in a New $30,000,000 Corporation.

G. C. TAYLOR AS PRESIDENT

Capitalization Based on Actual Value of Property and Government to Share in Profits.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Plans for the consolidation of the four principal express companies, the Adams, the American, the Wells Fargo, and the Southern, were approved today by W. G. McAdoo, Director General of Railroads, and the basis on which they will deal with the Railroad Administration was determined.

The new company will be capitalized at $30,000,00, the actual value of the physical properties put into the business. The combined capitalization of the companies at present is $57,000,000. Mr. McAdoo makes no provision in the reorganization for good will or other assets not represented by property values.

It is said that George C. Taylor will be President of the new company and will act as Director General McAdoo's agent in carrying on the express business. The character of the service and the character of the rates will be under Mr. McAdoo's control and subject to initiation by him.

Other express companies, including the Great Northern, the Northern Pacific, and the Western, the first two owned by the railroad companies for which they are named, and the other by the Gould lines, will continue as at present. It is said that these companies would not agree voluntarily to come into the proposed combination.

A definite annual income is not guaranteed by the Government under the new arrangement, as is the case with the railroads which are under Government control. It is said that this lack of a guarantee was one of the objections raised by the companies which have remained out of the combination.

A statement issued today by the Railroad Administration contained these details concerning the relation of the new company with the Government:

"An important feature of the arrangement is that the new company is to be capitalized only to the extent of actual property and cash put into the business and that the Government will share on a progressively increasing scale in any profits derived from the business.

"The general method of determining the compensation is that the Director General will received 50½ per cent. of the operating revenues, or gross earnings,) and out of the balance the express company will pay operating expenses and taxes and a dividend of 5 per cent. on its capital stock.

"Out of the next 2 per cent. available for distribution the express company will receive 1 per cent. and the Government 1 per cent.; out of the next 3 per cent. available for distribution the express company will receive 1 per cent. and the Government 2 per cent.; any further amounts available for distribution will be divided one-fourth to the express company and three-fourths to the Government.

"The Director General is greatly pleased to be able to inaugurate this salutary method of division of profits. The express company is given a continuing inducement to accomplish the greatest efficiency and economy, and yet the Government will enjoy an increasingly great proportion of the benefits of all such efficiency and economy.

"The new express company will put into the business physical properties of the actual value of $30,000,000, for which capital stock to that amount will be issued. No other capital stock will be issued, except at par for cash.

"While the new express company is permitted, upon arranging therefor with the Director General, to use railroad employes in express service, the entire compensation of all such employes, both for railroad and express services, will be fixed and paid by the Director General, and the express company will compensate the Director General for services rendered by such employes to the express company.

"The new arrangement will make it practical to avoid a great deal of wasteful duplication of facilities and to eliminate a large amount of accounting which, while necessary under the old system of separate contracts between the various express companies and the various railroad companies, will be unnecessary under the new system."

At present the Adams Express Company is capitalized at $10,000,000, the American at $18,000,000, the Wells Fargo at $24,000,000, and the Southern at $5,000,000.

IMPROVED EXPRESS SERVICE.

Taylor Tells How Unified Control Will Benefit the Public.

George C. Taylor, President of the American Express Company and selected to act as President of the new express corporation, said last night:

"Hereafter the express companies will eliminate the individual identity which has separated them for the last three-quarters of a century and offer to the Government and to their joint patrons a unified, single express service. In the future merchants, manufacturers, and individuals need merely specify 'by express' and the entire man power and vehicle power of the express world will respond to their call.

"At no time in the history of the railroads has the volume of express traffic been so great as it is today, the business reaching a total during the last fiscal year of over $200,000,000.

"Already the vast terminals now maintained by the various companies are being unified for a practical saving of time and transfer.

"The new move will bring into one organization over 100,000 men now trained in express service. It will be the policy of the company to maintain a broad gauge attitude toward its employes, many of whom have spent their lives in the service and thousands of whom have made great personal sacrifices in carrying the immense burden of the last three and a half years.

"In the past the express companies have been vital factors in the conveyance of merchandise and foodstuffs. They have eliminated distance and the time element between the manufacturer and his market. The move is designed to improve the distribution of commerce and agriculture and the business of the country may look upon it with confidence that their interests will be carefully and intelligently served."

The non-transportation activities of the separate companies, such as money orders, travelers' checks, travel department, and foreign exchange will not come under the consolidation, but will be conducted by the individual companies as in the past, the offices of the new company acting as agents for the old companies in the handling of these features.

Associated wih Mr. Taylor in the management of the company will be:

B. D. Caldwell, now President of Wells Fargo & Co., who has been selected as Chairman of the board.

William M. Barrett, now President of the Adams Express Company, will be a Director and member of the Executive Committee

The following have been selected as operating Vice Presidents:

R. E. M. Cowie, now Vice President and General Manager of the American Express Company, will have charge of the Atlantic Departments.

E. A. Stedman, now Vice President and General Manager of Wells Fargo & Co., Chicago, Central Departments.

C. D. Summy, General Manager of the American Express Company at Chicago, in charge of Southwestern Departments.

A. Christesen, Vice President and General Manager of Wells Fargo & Co., San Francisco, in charge of Pacific Departments.

E. M. Williams, Vice President in charge of traffic for the Adams Express Company, in charge of Southeastern Departments.

F. M. Holbrook, Vice President in charge of traffic of Wells Fargo & Co., New York, will be located at Washington as assistant to the President.

D. S. Elliott, Vice President in charge of traffic of the American Express Company, New York, will be in charge of traffic for the new company.

J. W. Newlean, Vice President, and Controller for Wells Fargo & Co., Chicago, will be the Vice President in charge of accounting for the new company.

E. E. Bush has been selected as Manager of Maintenance and Purchases.

T. B. Harrison and C. W. Stockton, now General Attorneys for the American and Wells Fargo respectively, will act as General Counsel.

RAILWAYS' EARNINGS DROP.

Michigan Central and Pittsburgh & Lake Erie Incomes Cut in Two.

Two subsidiaries of the New York Central—the Michigan Central and the Pittsburgh & Lake Erie—published their reports for the calendar year 1917 yesterday. Each of them, so far as its earnings were concerned, showed virtually the same experience as that of the parent road—their net incomes were practically cut in two. The Pittsburgh & Lake Erie made a relatively better showing. Having in 1916 a net income of $10,121,348, last year it was cut to $5,961,698, a loss of $4,159,649.

The Michigan Central, which in 1916 earned $6,837,372, last year reported a net income of only $3,438,216, a loss of $3,399,155. Its gross operating revenues increased in the year from $46,418,790 to $52,879,424, but the net revenues, at $14,590,297, showed a loss of $1,182,231. Owing to increases in taxes, the loss in operating income amounted to $1,471,514. Non-operating income also diminished, and fixed charges and other deductions increased $1,860,613. The Pittsburgh & Lake Erie's gross revenues increased less in proportion, totaling $25,621,634, an increase of $1,578,491, and net revenues fell off by $3,296,897, but its fixed charges, instead of increasing, were cut down by $450,295.

SEEKS 20,000 MEMBERSHIP.

The American Bankers' Association Starts Active Campaign.

The American Bankers' Association has begun a campaign for 20,000 members by Sept. 1 next. The increase in the membership since the last convention has broken all records, the gain for the twelve months amounting to 1,483. At present the association numbers 18,189 members.

Since May 1, 1908, the membership has nearly doubled. New York and Illinois are tied for first place with 1,082 members each. Pennsylvania is third, with 990; Iowa fourth, with 981, while Kansas has 844, and Ohio 745.

There are nearly 30,000 banking institutions in the United States, and, therefore, a membership of 20,000 is not regarded by the association's officers as anything except a modest ambition. As a special inducement for joining, it has been ordered that the payment of dues for one year will bring the privilege of membership until Aug. 31, 1919.

PLEA FOR REVISION OF INCOME TAX LAW

M. F. Frey, Expert of Guaranty Trust Co., Says Provisions Should Be Simplified.

SEES MANY INTRICACIES

Declares That Four Separate Levies Could All Be Consolidated Into One Graduated Tax.

Now that Congress has definitely decided to revise the tax laws, chiefly with the view of producing additional revenue, bankers and others are calling attention to the urgent need of simplifying the provisions of the Income Tax law so that the same may be more intelligible and more easily administered.

Morris F. Frey, tax expert of the Guaranty Trust Company, said yesterday that much of the confusion which existed in the administration of the law was due to the complexities of the act and not to the fundamental principles of the tax. "By rewriting the law," he said, "many of the intricacies and inconsistencies, which have been brought about to a large extent by amendment from time to time, may be eliminated and the fundamental principles of the tax and the distribution of the burden upon the taxpayer remain unaffected."

Under the income tax law as it stands today there are four separate taxes (exclusive of the excess profits tax), namely: the normal tax under the act of Sept. 8, 1916; the normal tax under the act of Oct. 3, 1917; the surtax under the act of 1916, and the surtax under the act of 1917. The confusion necessarily incident to the assessment of these numerous taxes is declared to be evident to everybody, and according to Mr. Frey there is no reason why they should not all be consolidated into one graduated tax.

"Undue Burden on Earned Income."

"The provision in the war excess profits tax law, Section 209, providing for an 8 per cent. tax on occupations," said Mr. Frey, "is clearly an income tax and in no sense should be connected with war or excess profits. It must be recognized that this tax imposes an undue burden on earned income and at the same time gives preference to unearned income for the purpose of taxation. The provision should be taken out of the War Excess Profits Tax law, and the rates under the income tax law increased on earned and unearned incomes alike, to produce the revenue sufficient to cover the amount to be raised by the 8 per cent. tax."

Among the other suggestions advanced by Mr. Frey are:

1. The elimination of the personal exemption for the purpose of the assessment of the normal tax.

2. The granting of credits on income derived from dividends paid by corporations on which the corporation has already paid a tax.

3. The elimination of all withholding of taxes at the source.

He also advised that the new law grant permission to taxpayers to make deductions for all losses sustained in dealings in property for profit, not connected with the taxpayer's business or trade. Mr. Frey believes that all interest paid by corporations should be deducted.

"The present restriction on the amount of interest which may be deducted by a corporation, limiting such deduction to interest on indebtedness of an amount not exceeding the sum of the paid-in capital, plus one-half of the interest-bearing indebtedness outstanding at the close of the year, should be removed," he said. "This provision has always been inequitable, and works a particular hardship under present conditions when the rate of tax are so high. When the tax was 1 per cent., many looked upon the provision with more or less indifference, but with the rates of tax in many cases running as high as 50 per cent. of the income, the restriction now amounts to a most important item.

Would Deduct Interest on Indebtedness.

"The fundamental principal of the income tax law is to tax profits, and to tax a portion of the income of a corporation which is actually paid out as an expense is certainly not within the spirit of the law. The law should be amended so as to permit the deduction of all interest actually paid on indebtedness.

"Section 31 of the law providing that dividends shall be taxed to the individual stockholder at the rates prescribed by law for the years in which the profits or surplus were accumulated by the corporation, is wrong on principle and difficult to administer. Dividends of corporations, like any other income, payable to individuals, should be taxed to the individual when received, regardless of when earned by the corporation.

"Adequate provision should be made to require the distribution of all earnings which are not necessary to the business of the corporation, so that there will be no opportunity for a corporation to accumulate surplus or profits for the purpose of evading high rates of taxation. The provisions of Section 31 cannot accomplish this purpose, as the proper administration requires more detail information of the bookkeeping of corporations than can be handled to advantage by the department. Any evasion of taxation by means of accumulation should be prevented by direct provision of the law, and not indirectly by complicating the general assessment of the tax."

INTERBOROUGH CUTS ITS DIVIDEND IN HALF

Declares 2½ Per Cent. for the Current Quarter Instead of 5 Per Cent.

Directors of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company yesterday cut the regular dividend in half, declaring a quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent., instead of the previous dividend of 5 per cent., payable July 1 to stock of record June 20. That is, the dividend is reduced from 20 per cent. per annum to 10 per cent. per annum. At the same time, "in view of the action taken by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company," it was announced, Directors of the Interborough Consolidated Corporation suspended "for the present" the usual quarterly dividend of 1¼ per cent. upon the preferred stock of that corporation.

The action of the Directors came as no surprise to the financial district, as it had been rumored for some time that the dividend would be very heavily reduced, owing to the desire of the management to conserve working capital and the resources of the company, because of the heavy increases in both material and labor costs of operation, and parallel increases in the demands of construction work on the new subways.

The formal statement issued said only that "on account of war conditions and the advisability of conserving the cash resources of the company," the Directors "deemed it inadvisable at the present time to declare the full dividend."

The dividend of 10 per cent. on the Interborough Rapid Transit stock represents the smallest disbursement made since 1910, two years before the dual subway contracts were completed. In that year 9 per cent. was paid; in 1911 10¼ per cent.; the following year it jumped to 15 per cent.; in 1913 it was 12 per cent.; in 1914, 15 per cent.; in 1915, 22½ per cent., and last year and the year before, 20 per cent. The Interborough Consolidated Corporation has paid 6 per cent. on its preferred stock since its organization as the holding company in 1915.

The preferred stock of the Interborough Consolidated, the holding corporation, is noncumulative. Last year its earnings, derived from Interborough Rapid Transit dividends, amounted to 7.14 per cent. on its outstanding preferred stock, on the 20 per cent. dividend basis for the latter.

Certificates on Sale Till Saturday.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York has been instructed by the Treasury Department to accept subscriptions, subject to allotment, to the latest offering of certificates of indebtedness, issued in anticipation of the receipt of Federal taxes, until the close of business on Friday. These certificates are dated May 15 and bear interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum, as do all the other certificates maturing on June 25. The Treasury Department announces that to and including Saturday, May 25, there had been sold $1,544,650,500 of certificates available in payment of income and excess profits taxes. Sales of certificates dated May 15 aggregated $104,014,000 on Saturday, this figure being included in the total amount of certificates mentioned above. Yesterday there matured $500,000,000 of 4½ per cent. certificates, dated Feb. 27, which were sold in anticipation of the Third Liberty Loan. There now remains outstanding $1,612,085,500 of 4½ per cent. certificates, which added to the so-called "tax certificates" makes a grand total of $3,156,736,000 of short-term Government obligations.

FARM LOAN BONDS FIND BIG DEMAND

Sales Reach Total of $40,000,000 in Eight Days in Spite of Red Cross Drive.

WILL PAY 4¾ PER CENT.

Fact That Bonds as "Instrumentalities of United States" Are Tax Free Aids in Disposal.

The distribution of the 5 per cent. Farm Loan bonds of the Federal Land Banks has been unusually successful, and last night it was learned that for the eight business days the sales totaled $40,000,000. The bonds have been offered at 101 and interest, netting more than 4¾ per cent. to the redeemable date (1923) and 5 per cent. thereafter up to redemption or maturity. The distribution has been in the hands of a syndicate headed by Alex Brown & Sons, Harris, Forbes & Co., Brown Bros. & Co., Lee, Higginson & Co., and the National City Company.

Originally when the bankers made a contract with the Federal Farm Loan Board, they agreed to sell $15,000,000 of bonds and to take an option for an additional $15,000,000. The sale of the bonds right from the start was so satisfactory that not only did the bankers undertake to dispose of $30,000,000, but consented to float $10,000,000 more, making a total of $40,000,000.

The bankers are now anxious that the output of the farm loan bonds should be checked and that the public offering of the securities should not be indefinite as to time. The understanding is that the banking group is willing to place $20,000,000 more of the bonds (a total of $60,000,000), but is desirous that the Farm Loan Board and the Secretary of the Treasury should agree not to put out any further issues of the bonds until a fixed date. In some quarters the opinion is that none should be sold following the closing of the books until after the next Liberty Loan campaign. The chief point made by the bankers is that from a market point of view a constant and never-ceasing issue of bonds is objectionable, and that it is far better to anticipate future requirements and to sell a larger block now than to keep on doling out the securities for an indefinite period.

The fact that it has been possible successfully to place the bonds during the week of the Red Cross campaign is regarded as remarkable in view of the general market conditions.

One of the reasons why the bonds have sold so well is that farm loan bonds are, under the law, "instrumentalities of the United States," and as such are exempt from Federal and municipal taxation. These farm loan bonds have the same tax exemption features as the 3½ per cent. Liberty Loan bonds, but they are not the direct obligations of the United States Government. This week's announcement of tax legislation has led many investors to buy tax-exempt bonds.

In banking quarters it is believed that the farm loan bonds are likely to advance in price by reason of the tax exemption feature. The 3½ per cent. Liberty bonds sold yesterday at 99.98, or practically at par, while the yield of the farm loan bonds is more than 4¾ per cent. Although it is recognized that the basis of the 3½ Liberty bonds will always be lower than that of the farm loan bonds, still it is believed that the margin of difference between the two issues is bound to be less than it is today.

SECURITY: The bonds are directly secured by a closed first mortgage on the land and building, a fireproof concrete and steel structure eleven stories in height. The building will be one of the handsomest apartment buildings in Chicago and its location at 229 Lake Shore Drive, on the city's best residential boulevard, directly overlooking Lake Michigan, ensures its constant rental.

BORROWING CORPORATION: 229 Lake Shore Drive (Incorporated), an Illinois Corporation. Guaranteed by endorsement by its president, a leading Chicago business man.

VALUATION: The land and completed building are appraised at $750,000.

EARNINGS: Conservatively estimated at $72,500 net, more than two and one-half times the greatest annual interest charge.

MONTHLY PAYMENTS: To ensure prompt application of the earnings to the payment of the bonds, monthly deposits of principal and interest must be made, under the usual provisions of the Straus Plan. Each deposit is one-twelfth of the amount of principal and interest due during the year, thus accumulating a sinking fund to meet interest coupons and serial principal payments promptly.

We recommend these bonds as a thoroughly secured investment. As we anticipate a rapid sale of this attractive issue, we suggest immediate orders or inquiries. Ask for

THE COTTON MARKET

Trading Very Quiet for Greater Part of the Day, with Prices Up 23 to 38 Points.

The local cotton market was very quiet through most of the session yesterday. A combination of factors, which might have seemed bearish if the market had been in a less strong technical position, in the circumstances seemed to have their only effect in making traders extremely cautious in committing themselves, and the more cautious short willing to cover. Under the circumstances, the advance for the day, which amounted at a firm closing to from 23 to 38 net points, appeared to be largely an indication of the size of the short interest at the opening, and without other significance.

The renewed German offensive seemed to have inspired some traders with the desire to limit their commitments; others were evening up for over the holiday tomorrow, and still others waiting for the Government weather and crop reports. At the same time there were substantial indications of a broadening demand in the spot markets, and some traders appeared confident that the Southern holders are gradually succeeding in compelling manufacturers to come to their prices.

The market opened very dull, with prices 8 to 16 points off because of good growing weather in the South, easier cables and expectations of a bearish weekly weather report today. There was enough tentative selling to bring the market down some 10 points further, when the covering began which formed practically the only feature of the market the rest of the day. Nobody appeared portentiously anxious to cover, however, and prices limped forward gradually, with occasional temporary recessions, the best spurt coming just at the close, when the ring woke to something like activity for a few minutes. No exports were reported yesterday. Southern spot markets were 100 points lower to 50 points higher.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

COTTON MARKET INQUIRY.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—An investigation of the cotton markets in New York and New Orleans will be made immediately by the Department of Agriculture, Senator Smith of South Carolina was advised today by Secretary Houston. The investigation will be made under the supervision of the Bureau of Markets. The South Carolina Senator had requested the inquiry.

Senator Smith said if the department found it had not sufficient power to conduct a thorough investigation he would introduce a resolution calling on the Senate Agriculture Committee to inquire into the situation surrounding the cotton markets and authorizing the subpoenaing of witnesses and papers.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 13,842 packages. Somewhat freer offerings, very moderate trading, and advices of increased shipments on the way caused a slightly weaker feeling, though the general range of values is much the same as previously quoted. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 43¾@44¼c; extras, (92 score,) 43@43½c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 41@42½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 37@40½c; thirds, 35@36c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 45@45½c; extras, 44@44½c; firsts, 42@43½c; seconds, 39@41½c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 42½@43c; good to prime, 40@42c; common to fair, 35@39½c; renovated, extras, 37½@38c; firsts, 36@37c; lower grades, 32@34c; imitation creamery, firsts, 33½@34c; ladies, current make, firsts, 31@32c; seconds, 29½@30c; lower grades, 28@29c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 29½@30c; No. 2, 28½@29c; lower grades, 26@28c.

EGGS.—27,401 cases. Arrivals continue liberal, but the proportion of fine, strong-bodied Northern stock fit for the best class of trade is small, and for such there is a good demand, with prices tending in sellers' favor. Average good and lower qualities which comprise the great bulk of the supply are freely offered at unimproved prices. The larger part of the supply of current packed eggs is offered in range of 30@33½c, with some inferior qualities of Southern even lower, and only a limited supply commanding the higher quotations. Dirties in fair demand when in strictly fine quality; ordinary lots are pressed for sale at irregular figures. Most of the check eggs are showing more or less mold, and probably the greater part sells from 25c. downward. There are very few sound dry lots free from mold, and these would bring steady prices if obtainable. Nearby white eggs of strictly fancy quality are a little short of requirements, and most receivers report sales at slightly better prices than heretofore quoted. Fresh gathered, extras, a dozen, 37c; storage packed firsts, 34½@36¼c; regular packed extra firsts, 35@35½c; regular packed firsts, 33@34½c; seconds and poorer, 28@32c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, storage packed, 29½@30c; No. 1 regular packed, 28½@29½c; No. 2 and poorer, 25@28c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 26@28c; undergrades, 18@25c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 41@42c; ordinary to prime, 38@40c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 37@40c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 36@38c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 38@40c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 30@38c; duck eggs, 29@43c.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

The wheat position is now going through the period of between seasons. Seldom, if ever, have stocks on hand been as low as at the present time, and the outlook for the new crop has seldom been excelled. The Food Administration continues to admonish consumers to limit the consumption of wheat as far as possible in order that there shall be no curtailment in the export movement to our allies in Europe and to our army. If the crop turns out as well as present indications seem to point, there is every reason to believe that this year's yield will be of sufficient volume to take care of home needs and provide a very large surplus for export.

RYE.

Market weak; No. 2 Western, $2.02, cost and freight, New York.

CORN.

The corn market displayed a firmer tone early, with a fairly active demand. Subsequently, however, prices broke, and the close was at the lowest, with prices ⅝c to 1⅛c below the final of Monday. In the local cash market, kiln dried No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.80½, No. 4 yellow at $1.70½, cost and freight, New York.

The local market for cash oats was weak; Standard quoted at 80½@81c, No. 2 white, 81½; No. 3 white, 80@80½c; No. 4 white, 79@80; fancy clipped white, 82c to 84c; ordinary clipped white, 81@82c; all elevator.

The provision market was irregular with lard showing a certain amount of firmness early in the day, while pork and ribs were easier. Subsequently the whole list turned weak and closed at about the lowest. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 33,000, estimated for Wednesday, 28,000; Kansas City received 12,000 and Omaha 13,000.

COFFEE.

The market for coffee contracts was very quiet yesterday, with prices on the call unchanged to 2 points lower on a little scattered selling and a general absence of aggressive demand. There was a very indifferent trade, with a disposition to liquidate, underlying sentiment being more bearish than bullish. The close was unchanged to 10 points net lower, near months showing the greatest weakness. The local spot market was dull and unchanged. Rio spots were 50 reis higher, with Santos spots unchanged, and futures 25 reis lower to 25 reis higher.

SUGAR.

There was little in the way of fresh development in the market for refined sugar; only here and there does the trade hear of some sections where there appears to be a temporary shortage of sugar. Refiners are working on Government orders and oversales and allowing brokers moderate allotments to meet any urgent orders which they may have. Prices remain at the fixed level for both raws and refined, raws being on the basis of 4.985c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 6.005c. for centrifugal, and refined at 7.45c for fine granulated.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Stocks were weak in the industrial issues, while the railroads showed net advances, at the close of the market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. A sustained rally prevailing during the afternoon session was checked just before the close and profit taking caused fractional recessions. During the rally, securities regained practically the severe losses sustained in the heavy selling movement in the second hour, when even the rails, in which was centred the buying demand, sold off sharply.

WORKERS CRITICISE RAILWAY WAGE RISE

McAdoo Gets Many Complaints That Increases in Some Cases Are Too Small.

SHOPMEN IDLE IN PROTEST

Demonstrations Will Do No Good, Officials Say—Board to Take Up Complaints Very Soon.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Scores of protests reached the Railroad Administration Headquarters today against small wage increases granted by Director General McAdoo's recent order. Word came from Alexandria, Va., that between 300 and 400 shop employes of the Southern Railroad had quit work for the day to emphasize their dissatisfaction with the new scale.

Notice of the demonstration at Alexandria was greeted at the Railroad Administration with the comment that all protests and suggestions for modification of the wage order should be presented formally to the Director General for consideration by the Board of Railroad Wages and Working Conditions, which will meet here within a week to take up just such questions. Officials said strikes would avail nothing at this time, except to hinder railroads and cause public ill-feeling toward the strikers.

Reports came that other union organizations, particularly machinists, were planning walkouts, but these were not credited by labor Directors of the railroad administration.

It has been conceded by some officials that higher wages than those allowed by the Director General's order might have to be paid shopmen, including machinists, sheet metal workers, blacksmiths, electricians, boilermakers, and carmen, owing to the high scale of wages in shipyards and other industries employing large numbers of these workmen. The new wage order established a minimum of 55 cents an hour for "machinists, blacksmiths, boilermakers, and other shop mechanics who have been receiving the same hourly rate." Confusion has been created over the interpretation of this provision, since the hourly rate varies greatly in different shops and parts of the country.

Another class of employes who may have to be paid more are the maintenance of way laborers, who are being lured with higher pay to other work. For several weeks reports have been reaching Washington that track laborers were planning to remain with the railroads only until the receipt of their back pay under the retroactive increases, and then to go to other employment. Some of these reports proved unfounded on investigation, but officials are not overlooking the danger of losing employes to other war industries.

For this reason the new Board of Railway Wages will be instructed to make all possible haste to consider wage adjustments called to its attention by the Director General on complaint from employes, and to recommend modifications from time to time. It is probable the board will take up the grievances of machinists and other shopmen first. Many of these have complained that they get not a cent increase under the new order, owing to the fact that the advances proposed by the scale have been more than taken up by increases during the last two years.

Several thousand complaints and suggestions were received by the Director General after the report of the Railroad Wage Commission recommending the scale which the Director General finally adopted in substance. Indications are that nearly as many will be forthcoming now.

Few protests have come from the four leading railway brotherhoods, although committees of local organizations have sent some informal suggestions for modification.

BOUGHT OUR AIRPLANE WOOD

German Agents, Guggenheim Says, Tried to Cut Down Supply Here.

As the result of a motor trip along the north shore of Long Island, which he took in search of black walnut trees to be used by the Government in making airplane propellers, William Guggenheim, Chairman of the Army and Navy Committee of the American Defense Society, 44 East Twenty-third Street, yesterday announced that German agents had combed the island before our entrance into the war in an effort to buy up all the essential walnut wood. Mr. Guggenheim said his evidence indicated a systematic attempt to cut down the Government's supply of the only wood found practical for the severe strain of aerial work.

"One of the men I have just interviewed," said Mr. Guggenheim, "is a prominent lumber dealer of the north shore. He informs me that agents of the German Government have already travelled through the Long Island towns, buying up every available black walnut tree. This dealer says that the agents paid very high prices and were glad to get even single trees. Some of the walnut thus obtained was many miles from the railroad, my informant said, and, though the cost of hauling the trees was pointed out as likely to be great, the emissaries were quick to close their deals."

All of the purchases, Mr. Guggenheim added, were made before the country went to war. He declared that, despite the thoroughness of the enemy canvass, many trees escaped. On his own country place, near Sands Point, there is a large grove of walnut, fully grown, which the Government will soon cut down for the manufacture of propellers and for gunstocks.

Jews Raise $25,000 for the Blind.

The Hebrew Association for the Blind announced yesterday that its fund of $25,000 now being raised would be used in opening new fields of usefulness for civilians and for soldiers blinded in the war. The association pointed out that work of re-educating blind soldiers would be done by the Government and that unfinished plans of the organization were to give additional aid to the war blind and to help other persons whose blindness was not caused by the war. The work will not be confined to the blind among the Jews.

BAFF MURDERER LOSES.

Court of Appeals Upholds Death Sentence of Joseph Cohen.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 28.—Joseph Cohen, the poultry dealer who was convicted in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court on the charge of planning and procuring the murder of Barnet Baff in the West Washington Market on Nov. 24, 1914, today lost his appeal before the Court of Appeals. The court affirmed the conviction in the lower court, thus approving the sentence of death pronounced by Justice Tompkins on Aug. 17, 1917. Cohen is in the deathhouse at Sing Sing Prison.

When Cohen was convicted last August he expressed confidence that the Court of Appeals would set aside the verdict. His brother, Jacob Cohen, and David Jacobs, who were named with Joseph Cohen in the indictment for first degree murder, were acquitted in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court, and the jury declared Abraham Graff guilty of manslaughter in the first degree.

Although the Court of Appeals also affirmed the conviction of Frank Ferrara, the chauffeur of the "murder car," several stays have been granted by Governor Whitman. Giuseppe Archiello, who was also sentenced to death for alleged complicity in the murder, received an order for a new trial from Justice Tompkins in October, 1917.

Evidence at the trial of Cohen was that he had been in constant communication with Antonio Cardinale, the gunman who confessed to having hired men to kill Baff, and that he arranged the details of the murder.

CONTROL CANCER IN LARYNX

Dr. Arrowsmith Tells Surgeons of Development in Technique.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 28.—Specialized surgery of the throat has developed in technique until cancer of the larynx, formerly one of the most feared forms of that disease, is now more easily curable than in any other part of the body, according to Dr. Hubert Arrowsmith of Brooklyn, speaking before the fortieth annual convention of the American Laryngological Association here today. Failure of the general practitioner to bring incipient cases of the disease to the attention of the throat specialists is one reason for the few cures in past years, speakers asserted.

Such signs as a continued hoarseness for six weeks should be a warning to the practitioner that something beyond cure by lotions or general methods has developed, and that the diagnosis of a specialist is a duty he owes his patient in order to make sure that some malignant malady is not in its early stages, it was asserted.

Policeman on Trial as Pro-German.

Patrolman Peter Kraft of the Miller Avenue Station was placed on trial yesterday before Deputy Police Commissioner Leach, in Police Headquarters, Brooklyn. Morris Salpter, a lawyer and a member of Local Draft Board 80, testified that Kraft, while in Public School 72, where the board meets, said: "We're in for a losing fight in this war. You can't beat the Germans; furthermore, we don't want to beat them. What we want to see is Germany beat England. England is a traitor in this war. We are sending our grain over there and pretty soon the country will be starving." Paul Chenloff, another member of the board, testified along the same lines. The case will be continued next Tuesday.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

The sale of a large tract in the Port Morris section of the Bronx was the feature of the real estate market yesterday.

The F. & M. Schaefer Brewing Company made a contract for the sale of its property located between 133d and 134th Streets, Walnut Avenue to the East River, consisting of two blocks and a considerable amount of land under water with riparian rights. This site was originally acquired by the F. & M. Schaefer Brewing Company for the purpose of erecting a brewery plant. In the meantime, however, another location was found and it purchased the site at Kent Avenue, South Ninth and Tenth Streets and East River, Brooklyn, where it erected a modern brewery plant. R. J. Schaefer, President of the company, negotiated yesterday's deal through Joseph P. Day, who declined to give the name of the purchaser.

The site is adaptable for shipbuilding purposes, but no information was obtainable regarding the purpose of the purchase.

Two Hotel Transactions.

Two hotel properties also figured prominently in yesterday's business. The 4 East Fifty-sixth Street Company, representing Klein & Jackson, leased from William Baumgarten & Co. the Fifty-sixth Street "L" of their property at No. 4, consisting of a six-story building on plot 40 by 80.5. The lease is for a period of fifteen years.

Klein & Jackson plan to extensively remodel the property and connect it with the Hotel Langdon at the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-sixth Street, erected by them on land leased from Woodbury G. Langdon, and which they rented to Edward H. Chatillon. The addition will also be leased to Mr. Chatillon. It will provide forty additional rooms and the ground floor will be utilized for increasing the dining room space. Baumgarten & Co. will continue to occupy the Fifth Avenue portion of their property, next to the Langdon.

In the other hotel deal it was learned that negotiations were pending for the long-term lease of the Hotel Glenmore, at the northeast corner of Seventh Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street, which is owned by the estate of John Hardy. The prospective lessee is understood to be the 859 Seventh Avenue Company, in which Alexander Pincus is interested. The Glenmore is an eight-story structure on a plot 50.5 by 100, which adjoins the Hotel Wellington.

Italian National Club House Sold.

The building at 117 and 119 West Forty-eighth Street, formerly occupied by the Italian National Club, has been acquired by the Calma Realty Company, which owns the Belmont Theatre, adjoining, at 121 to 127 West Forty-eighth Street. The property consists of a five-story building, on a plot 37.6 by 100, just west of Sixth Avenue. The parcel at 117 was purchased from the Reynard estate, and that at 119 was secured under a long lease with an option of purchase from Lilly Nicoll and others. The building contains a large ballroom with balcony. It will be extensively altered. E. H. Ludlow & Co. negotiated the deal.

A Harlem-Bronx Trade.

Dr. William Whitney purchased from the Ulster Court Corporation, Joseph G. Abramson, President, 288 East 168th Street, a five-story new-law tenement, on a plot 50 by 100, held at $70,000. In part payment the buyer gave 7 West 120th Street, a four-story and basement private dwelling, on a lot 21 by 100.11, valued at $25,000.

Auction Property Resold.

Arthur Couwenburghs purchased from Leonard Weill, operator, 326 West Eighteenth Street, a three-story dwelling, on a lot 20 by 92. The seller purchased the property Jan. 24 at the stand of Joseph P. Day in the Vesey Street Auction Room.

Buyer for Tenements.

Charles Wynne resold to the Port Jervis Land Improvement Company 316 East Fortieth Street, a five-story tenement, on a lot 25 by 98.9.

Bronx Sale.

Arthur T. Walker purchased from John Meroney 1,820 Topping Avenue, a three-story and basement dwelling on a lot 22 by 95, located 87 feet south of 176th Street.

Brooklyn.

Adeline Murray sold to Baldassaro Di Giovanni, for occupancy, the two-story house at 1,780 Seventh-sixth Street, on a plot 30 by 100. B. J. Sforza was the broker.

Walter S. Ross and C. C. Gretsinger sold, for Charles Hurwitz, the dwelling at 328 Seventy-sixth Street, to an investor.

In the Bushwick section, Friday & Lehman sold the two-story frame dwelling at 445 Chestnut Street, for Frederick Rohwerder to Fenella Johnson, for occupancy.

Westchester County.

Fish & Marvin sold for the Scarsdale-Edgemont Corporation a plot on Norwood Road, in the Edgemont Estate at Scarsdale, to Mrs. John F. Bigelow of New York City. It is the purchaser's intention to start the erection of a residence at once.

New Jersey.

Okin & Isaacs of Newark sold for Joseph V. B. Irving of Jersey City to Taggart Brothers of New York two six-family frame flats, each on a plot 47 by 95, at 7 and 9 Berwind Street, East Orange. The buyers gave in part payment a twenty-five-acre farm in Fairfield County, Conn., and a farm of thirty-nine acres at Mountainview, Union Township, N. J. The East Orange houses are rented at $15 a room.

Joseph F. Gilroy of New York bought from the Avri Chemical Company, the three-story building at the corner of Johnston Avenue and Canal Street, Jersey City.

Title has been passed whereby the Young Men's Hebrew Association acquired from the Margaret Droge estate a large frame dwelling on a plot 71 by 231 at 438 Summit Avenue, Jersey City. The building will be used for a community centre.

Twenty-Year Broadway Lease.

The Schulte Cigar Company has leased for twenty years, at an aggregate rental of about $120,000, the store, basement, and sub-cellar of 388 Broadway, containing 15,000 square feet of space. A sub-lease of the basements of the building was negotiated from the Walker Safe Company. The leased premises adjoin the six-story Schulte Building at 384 and 386 Broadway, in which are housed the executive offices of the Schulte organizations, including the Mutual Profit Coupon Corporation. The Charles F. Noyes Company was the broker in both leases.

Commercial Leases.

Robert G. Grunert leased for the D. A. Cushman Realty Corporation the store in the New Hotel Strand, 47 West Thirty-second Street, for a long term, to the United States Lunch Company, which will operate it as a restaurant and lunch room.

The Ogden & Clarkson Corporation leased the building at 66 and 68 University Place to the American Aniline Products, Inc., for a term of years.

J. Arthur Fischer has leased for the Arco Realty Company the five-story building 30 West Sixtieth Street to M. Falco for a term of years. The premises will be altered and used as a restaurant.

Brokers in Red Cross Drive.

The Real Estate Board's Committee on the Second Red Cross Drive had obtained contributions of $25,000 up to yesterday afternoon. William L. De Bost, Chairman of the committee, said: "The $25,000 so far secured does not represent the full amount we expect to report. Many officers have not yet reported, and when the final returns are in the sum total will be largely increased. In eighty-one of the real estate offices canvassed, contributions by employes represented 100 per cent."

Will Build New Chapel.

George B. Post & Son have prepared plans for a new four-story chapel, day nursery, gymnasium, and meeting room to occupy the site at 196 and 198 Bleecker Street, now occupied by the home of the Bethlehem Chapel Memorial Nursery, which is to be razed. The estimated cost of the new building is $50,000.

Recent Buyers.

Frederick W. Lincoln is the buyer of the dwelling 38 West Fifty-third Street.

Archibald C. Kains is the buyer of the dwelling 10 West Tenth Street.

Max Banish is the buyer of the five-story tenement 220 West 141st Street.

Elizabeth N. Todd of Lake Mahopac is the buyer of the private dwelling 300 West Ninety-second Street.

Education Notes.

City Supt. Ettinger has instructed public school Principals that in the future the Salute to the Flag will be rendered at every assembly of pupils in the schools. They will stand on signal, raise the right hand to salute, and keep it there while the following words are given: "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the Republic for which it stands—one nation, indivisible, with liberty, and justice for all." Whenever the flag is displayed every child or teacher passing should come to the position of salute and hold it until past the flag. This does not refer to flags that are draped on the wall nor to flags that are furled or cased. Whenever the flag is carried past children or adults all should salute. At the discretion of the Principal an officer of the United States forces addressing the pupils, may be welcomed with a salute. In every case it should be made clear to all concerned that the salute to the flag or a superior or officer is a recognition of the United States as exemplified in the flag or in the person and uniform representing it.

Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank, in a letter to President Somers says: "Now that the Liberty Loan campaign is over I want to express the gratification we all feel in the results obtained by the efforts of the school organization. There seems to me no better medium for spreading patriotic impulse to the homes than through the schools, and the work of the school organization was thrown so solidly behind the Liberty Loan work that its effect, direct or indirect, can hardly be overestimated. The work by the children is not only of value to the Liberty Loan work, but it also makes better citizens of them, and I feel that through your schools you have helped to do a great work in this last campaign."

School Principals have been requested to test, before promotion, all upper grades, especially graduating classes, as to their knowledge of the causes of the war and of other war facts.

The metropolitan typewriting contest of the Isaac Pitman Shorthand Writers' Association will be held at the Eastman-Gaines School, 123d Street, at Lenox Avenue, on June 8 at 2 P. M. Separate contests will be held for those from New Jersey and other suburban places. There will be seven classes—evening high, day commercial or private school, evening commercial or private school, parochial school, day high school, open, and professional. Entry blanks can be obtained from Charles L. Frank, 464 West 149th Street.

A dinner was given last evening at Mouquin's by the District Superintendents' Association to William J. O'Shea, who was recently elected from District Superintendent to Associate Superintendent.

DECLINES TO PUT OFF HYLAN'S LIBEL SUITS

Justice Cropsey Overrules Mayor's Plea for Delay in Trial of Actions Against The World.

CASES TO BE HEARD MONDAY

Defendant Says Since Mayor Had Time to Go to Florida He Had Time to Get Ready for Trial.

In spite of the plea of Mayor Hylan for delay, Supreme Court Justice Cropsey in Brooklyn yesterday ordered that his $300,000 libel suit against The New York World should be placed on the calendar for trial next Monday.

This suit was based on charges printed during the last campaign by The World, under the heading "Who is John F. Hylan?" that the candidate for Mayor had been closely associated with a swindler and exconvict in transactions regarding the Black Diamond Automobile Company, a concern actively promoted in 1906, and later by Mr. Hylan, but which died in its infancy. The suit was also based on the alleged implication that Mayor Hylan, after the Black Diamond Company had practically collapsed, had sued his own company for legal services; that the suits were not properly defended, and that considerable judgments had been collected. Another charge which was made the basis for suit was that Mr. Hylan had sought to charge a relative by marriage the sum of $2,280 for collecting a judgment of $3,790.

Later suits were brought by Mr. Hylan against The World for printing charges made during the campaign concerning his alleged association with pro-Germans, especially in the Friends of Peace movement. A motion is now pending to consolidate the causes of action.

Although the first suit was filed on Oct. 17 and the other suits started subsequently during the campaign, so that an interval of seven months has elapsed, counsel for Mayor Hylan presented affidavits yesterday arguing that the press of official duties had not given him the opportunity to prepare his case for trial and asking a postponement until the Fall term of court.

Wanted Time to Sift Matter.

One of the grounds for a postponement was that The World's charges, occurring in a series of newspaper articles published during a period of three weeks, were so intermingled with collateral statements intended to strengthen and give color to the implications of unprofessional conduct, that much time and pains were needed to treat such a variety of matter.

Among the articles published during this period by The World was one on Oct. 20, charging that Mr. Hylan, when a County Judge, had granted an extraordinary privilege to one Burt G. Lewis, indicted for gambling, who had contributed heavily to the campaign fund which had been used to elect Mr. Hylan a Judge, and that for five years previous Lewis had contributed nothing. This matter, The World alleged at the time, had been exposed and denounced by James C. Cropsey, then District Attorney of Kings County, and now the Supreme Court Justice who yesterday denied the Mayor's request for more time.

Some of the other accusations made in the series of articles were that John F. Hylan had appeared as attorney in a number of alleged "strike" suits brought in behalf of Alfred R. Goslin, an ex-convict; that he had been severely criticised by the late Mayor Gaynor and others for rulings from the bench which resulted in freeing men brought before him on the charge of selling liquor without a license; that he and other Directors of the Eagle Savings and Loan Company of Brooklyn, which paid less than 10 per cent. to its investors when its affairs were wound up, had been censured by the courts; that he had promoted and advertised a school for oratory, although his own practice was to read his speeches.

In his affidavit, Mayor Hylan, after reciting the alleged difficulties which made the preparation of the case an onerous task, said that the increase of his duties to "problems" created by the war had taken up all his time and attention. He added:

"I believe, an am so advised by my counsel, that preparation will require at least a month of time, and in the exigencies of public business, I have not been able to find it and cannot find it during the month of June."

Time for Vacations.

In his affidavit in reply Howard Taylor, counsel for The World, asserted that the Mayor "has, notoriously, been away from the State and engaged in recreation, since he became Mayor, for many more days than his counsel would have required of him for assistance in preparation. Deponent is therefore constrained to conclude that the affidavit seeking to secure an adjournment of the trials until Autumn is only an excuse and that the fact is that the plaintiff does not desire to try these cases any sooner than he is forced to."

The affidavit asserted that the Mayor's attitude had been "disingenuous toward the court and public" and that an attempt had been made on behalf of the Mayor to create the impression that the Mayor was anxious to try the suits and that the defendant was hanging back. An article from The New York American was included in the affidavit quoting Samuel M. Fleschman, a lawyer said to be acting for the Mayor, as stating that the Mayor was "anxious and willing" to try the cases, but that the defendant had "blocked all efforts to get these cases to trial." The affidavit added that Mr. Moss and Mr. Marcus, counsel for the Mayor, had disclaimed responsibility for those statements.

An aged man stepped into the office of Assistant District Attorney John T. Dooling yesterday. He was shown a small painting about 35 by 40 inches. Peering at it closely for a few minutes he said, "I never painted that."

The man was Ralph Albert Blakelock, landscape painter. He pronounced the picture a forgery in spite of what purported to be his signature on it. Both Mr Blakelock and Mrs. Van Rensselaer Adams, who succeeded, with others, in obtaining his release from the State Asylum at Middletown in 1916, where he had been under treatment for fifteen years, were taken before the Grand Jury.

The District Attorney's office is looking into the allegations of a "picture factory" for the turning out of bogus Blakelock's. Yesterday Mr. Dooling had four pictures in his office which he subpoenaed from various collectors in this city and of the four one of them was pronounced genuine by the artist.

Mrs. Adams said that the picture in the District Attorney's office was a combination of two of Blakelock's famous pictures. The foreground, she said, was copied from a picture which sold at $1,750. That picture was painted twenty years ago and is now in the possession of the Toledo, Ohio, Museum. It is valued at $20,000.

Harry A. Watrous, Corresponding Secretary of the National Academy of Design, told District Attorney Swann that more than thirty spurious Blakelock's, including one from the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, had been sent to him for authentication.

As soon as Mr. Dooling became convinced that many bogus Blakelocks had recently been sold he inaugurated a John Doe investigation by the Grand Jury to run down those responsible.

Fund for Zionist Medical Unit.

The New York Chapter of Hadassah of the Zionist Organizations of America announced yesterday that it was continuing work of raising a fund of $1,000 to buy a motor truck for the American Zionist Medical Unit. It was said that none of the other funds of the society had been depleted yet in relief work. Contributions are received at the headquarters at 44 East Twenty-third Street.

DR. COPELAND DENIES A TRIAL TO BROWN

Suspended Director Will Have Hearing Before the Health Board on June 2.

HE MAY ONLY "EXPLAIN"

Neither Counsel Nor Witnesses May Be Present When He Answers Charges of Neglect.

Charges of neglect of duty, inefficiency and incompetency were served yesterday on Lucius P. Brown, Director of the Bureau of Food and Drugs of the Health Department. The charges were signed by Health Commissioner Royal S. Copeland, who set June 2 at 2 P. M. for Mr. Brown's hearing before the Board of Health, consisting of Dr. Copeland, Dr. Leland Copher, Health Officer of the Port, and Police Commissioner Richard Enright. The hearing will take place in the exhibition hall of the Department of Health, 139 Centre Street.

Mr. Brown was suspended on May 2, after he made public a reply to accusations against him by James E. MacBride, Chairman of the Civil Service Commission, who headed a committee that made an investigation of the Health Department. Notwithstanding the promise made soon after Mr. Brown's suspension that the latter would have an open trial with the privilege of calling witnesses, cross examining witnesses called by his accusers and of being represented by his counsel, George Gordon Battle, Health Commissioner Copeland yesterday said witnesses would not be present and counsel would not be permitted to appear with Brown.

In this, Dr. Copeland said, he was following out the opinion given him in reply to a request he made of Corporation Counsel Burr as to the form of the trial. Mr. Burr said that Brown was not entitled to a hearing "conducted as a proceeding in the nature of a trial, nor to be sworn, to introduce witnesses in support of his explanation, nor to be represented before said board by counsel." According to Mr. Burr, Brown is entitled only to "an explanation." The public will be permitted to be present at the hearing, Dr. Copeland said yesterday.

Specific Charges Made.

"Mr. Brown is not going to be hurried," he added. "Every opportunity will be given him to make ample explanation. He may have access to all records of the department we have, and to introduce all the material he desires. He may have an extension of time if he deems it necessary."

Dr. Copeland was asked why he had changed his mind with respect to giving Brown a public trial and allowing him to call witnesses and to have counsel conduct the examination.

"Regardless of what I said before, I now have the opinion of the Corporation Counsel, and I am going as far as the limit of the advice given by the legal adviser of the city," replied the Commissioner. The specifications of the charges against Brown include:

1. Failure and neglect to recommend to the Health Commissioner the adoption of food standards and the enactment of an amendment to the Sanitary Code and to the regulations of the Board of Health "necessary and proper for the effective supervision and control of the sale of food and food products in the city and for preventing the sale of unwholesome food and food not of standard quality."

2. Failure to exercise a personal supervision over his subordinates in the department; delegating to subordinates administration and control of the work that should have required his personal attention.

3. Failure to give proper consideration to the adoption of a food code for the city.

4. Failure to exercise proper supervision over the several divisions in his bureau.

5. Neglecting the work of the chemical laboratory of the department.

6. Failure to attend more than two meetings of the Board of Promotions and Discipline out of twenty-two meetings held between October, 1916, and May, 1918.

7. That he attended only three of twelve meetings of the Committee on Control of Health Districts, between Feb. 20, 1917, and May 2, 1918.

8. That Mr. Brown supported Senate bill 678, "that would have legalized the adulteration of milk, prohibited under the existing statute."

9. That Brown disclosed to an inspector under his supervision, Alfred Luks, the fact that Commissioner of Accounts Leonard Wallstein was conducting an inquiry into the Johnson Avenue slaughter houses, and that such information "did greatly embarrass the progress and imperil the success of said investigation."

10. Absenting himself 73 out of 750 working days between Sept. 3, 1915, and May 2, 1918, during which time Mr. Brown delivered lectures in thirteen cities, and that he also spent a large amount of time in delivering lectures and spent a good deal of his working hours in preparing such lectures and employed the services of employes in the department for that purpose.

11. Allegation of spending a considerable part of his time between June 23, 1915, and May 2, 1918, during official working hours, in transaction of personal business.

Charges Omitted, He Says.

Mr. Brown, after receiving the charges, made the following statement:

"The charges under which I have been relieved of duty in the Health Department were received by me this afternoon. I have read them over, and am struck by the fact that the accusations contained in the public letter of Civil Service Commissioner McBride, addressed to the Commissioner of Health, of April 30, 1918, which letter was the basis of the action by which I was relieved from duty, are not contained in the charges actually filed against me, except in one particular—the statement that I favored the Wicks bill, which allowed the standardization of the quality of milk. The averments of Commissioner McBride that I had favored the Borden Milk Company; that I had opposed the investigation of the Health Department to expose an alleged corrupt ring in the Bureau of Drugs, and that I had favored the house of Schieffelin & Co., have apparently been found to be baseless, and are not included in the charges. The charges actually served upon me relate, with the above exception, to my administration of my bureau. I have an absolute and complete answer and defense to each charge which I welcome the opportunity to present."

It was pointed out yesterday by those who had followed the recent Health Department investigation that the decision to give Mr. Brown only a hearing in order to reply to charges made against him placed him at a disadvantage as he would be unable to make a complete explanation without the aid of witnesses and under the direction of counsel. It is regarded certain that Mr. Brown will ask for an extension of time.

HOTTEST MAY 28 SINCE 1886

Temperature at 1:30 Was 86—One Prostration in Brooklyn.

According to the records of the United States Weather Bureau on the roof of the Whitehall Building, yesterday was the hottest May 28 on record since 1886. The thermometer registered 86 degrees at 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon, and it was much hotter in the streets below, where the dense atmosphere was almost stifling. A thunderstorm passed over the city late in the afternoon, accompanied by rain showers, but it did not bring much relief.

There was one case of heat prostration in Brooklyn—John Smarth, 48 years, of 92 Carroll Street, who was overcome while working on a steamship at one of the piers.

A lightning bolt struck the chimney of the Hanson Place Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn, and passersby had narrow escapes from the heavy blocks of stone that fell into the roadway.

Another bolt struck the steeple of the Reformed Church at Clinton and Jackson Avenues, Newark, tearing the side off completely, and the débris smashed the terrace with a crash that startled a Red Cross committee, who were in the lecture room at the time.

Opposite 156 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, a big tree was split in two, and the wires were stripped from the telegraph poles for some distance on either side.

Escaping Steam Is Wasted Fuel

THE lines of steam curling up from kettles and saucepans on your kitchen range tell a story of wasted heat which you should heed. That steam, confined, could do a big share of your cooking for you. And you are letting it escape and waste your dollars.

These Fireless Cookstoves Use all the Heat for Cooking

In a Domestic Science or Ideal Fireless Cookstove, every particle of heat is utilized for cooking. The water-seal top and the heavy, scientifically arranged insulation conserve the heat so completely that a few minutes' heating of the cookstove radiators will do cooking that would take hours of heat on your range. The fuel saving is often as much as 80%.

In addition, the confined heat prevents the drying up of foods and the big shrinkage in meats which ordinarily occur. This is another economy worth considering. The automatic steam valve permits the escape of excess steam and enables you to bake and brown as is possible in no other fireless cookstove—as quickly as in your range.

Best of all, an Ideal or Domestic Science Fireless Cookstove will give you so many additional free hours away from home, while the meals are being cooked, that it will more than pay for itself in time saved.

Ask your dealer to show these Fireless Cookstoves or write us for our free booklet, "Delicious Fireless Cooked Dishes," with recipes and photographs in color.

GERMANS TAKE SOISSONS, MENACE RHEIMS; ALLIED CENTRE FORCED BACK FOUR MILES; 25,000 PRISONERS CAPTURED IN THREE DAYS

AMERICANS HOLD ALL GAINS

Smash Three Counterattacks at Cantigny and Cause Heavy Losses.

WITH A HURRICANE OF FIRE

Waves of German Infantrymen Stopped Short in the Midst of Their Effort.

VICTORS IN ADVANCE JOKED

Officers Describe Fine Morale and Absolute Confidence of Our Soldiers.

WITH AMERICAN FORCES ON THE FRENCH FRONT, May 29, (Associated Press.)—Three counterattacks, made by the Germans to retake the terrain which they had lost in Picardy on Monday, completely broke down in the face of the American artillery fire and the heroism of our infantrymen.

All the ground won by the Americans on Monday remains in their possession.

Our Positions Consolidated.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Consolidation of positions taken yesterday by the Americans in the Cantigny salient and the repulse of renewed counterattacks were announced in General Pershing's evening communiqué issued tonight by the War Department.

Announcement also told of the repulse last night of three raids in Lorraine, in which several prisoners were taken and a number of the enemy killed. The dispatch follows:

In the Cantigny salient we have consolidated our positions in spite of heavy artillery and machine-gun fire. Renewed counterattacks broke down under our fire.

In Lorraine we repulsed three raids during the night, taking several prisoners and killing a number of the enemy. There and in the Woevre the artillery of both sides has been continuously active.

It is established that on May 27 our aviators shot down two hostile machines instead of one, as reported.

Artillery Smothered Germans.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 28, (Associated Press.)—The Americans penetrated the German positions to a depth of nearly a mile. Their artillery completely smothered the Germans. The roar of the American guns could be heard for many miles in the rear. Several fires were burning behind the German line. Twelve French tanks supported the American infantry.

The artillery preparation began at 5:45 o'clock, one hour before the infantry went over the top. The lines of Americans moved forward in perfect order, the tanks in the lead. The American artillery did magnificent work.

A strong unit of flame-throwers and engineers aided the Americans. All the tanks returned safely. At 8:25 o'clock the Germans began a bombardment, dropping two shells a minute, most of them falling in a ravine south of Cantigny. Compared with this the American guns fired six, four or two shots a minute. The American barrage moved forward 100 yards in two minutes, and then 100 yards in four minutes. The infantry followed with clocklike precision.

When the news of the American advance reached the villages in the rear cheering broke out among the soldiers and civilians, some of whom had been up all night in anticipation that something out of the ordinary was being carried out. The faces of the women and children were bright and happy and the sick and wounded in the hospitals were heartened by the feat of their brothers in arms.

Praise Their Comrades.

Boys from the front with whom correspondents talked today all were one in praise of their comrades. They said that they knew there was a long way to go, but the Americans had now shown their mettle, and if the Germans attempt to overrun them

Germans Bomb Hospital Containing Our Wounded; French Nurse and Several Civilians Among the Slain

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES ON THE FRENCH FRONT, May 29, (Associated Press.)—German airmen last night deliberately dropped bombs on hospitals in which there were scores of American and hundreds of French sick and wounded.

The hospitals are in a town many miles in the rear of the front.

A number of Americans were slightly injured by flying glass.

One French nurse was killed and another injured, probably fatally. Several civilians died of wounds.

Effects of German Bombing Attacks on Towns Behind the Lines Graphically Pictured—British in the North Alert to Meet an Offensive on Their Front.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Wednesday, May 29.—Apart from the usual amount of gunfire on many sectors of the British front, there is no hostile action, and for the time being the storm centre of the western front is south of the Aisne. That battle, as I explained yesterday, is outside the province of a war correspondent with the British armies in the north, and will be recorded by our confrères accredited to the French armies. Our anxiety is to know how it goes with the British troops down there and how it will affect the position on our own front.

Perhaps the plans of the German high command are dependent upon the progress of events across the Aisne, and it seems to me doubtful still whether they will regard it as a locality for their main effort during the next few weeks, or whether they will presently slow down their operations there and strike their main blow against the allied armies further north. I have my own opinion on the subject, but prophecy is idle and generally wrong.

On the British front the infantry remains on the alert for a heavy offensive, and meanwhile it is an air war rather than a field war which is in progress across the lines, apart from the unceasing action of the artillery. During these moonlight nights the German bombing squadrons come over our lines to drop explosives on towns and villages and camps in competition with the British night fliers, who set out on the same mission, and often in larger numbers, over the enemy's country. There is hardly a fine night on which there are not many of them over places inhabited by women and children and noncombatants of all kinds as well as soldiers on billets, and they are over towns of small size and little hamlets, so that the chances of escape are not so great as in London.

Full Moon Brings Raiders Out.

The night before last there were many German raiders out owing to the full moon, which rose late and was strangely red, like the harvest moon, over the black trees and white winding roads and shining roofs of one old town into which I happened to go a little before midnight. I happened to go there after an evening in the officers' mess, where there was a piano and a musician with a voice that Jean de Reszke loved and the mystery of art, so that to hear him sing was to thrust back the war and live for a while in a better world ruled in harmony. It was queer to have that voice in one's ear and soul and to go straight into the sinister street, where there are ugly noises of death, but that kind of contrast happens out here.

Between one road and another I noticed as I passed toward the town a number of figures sitting in the shadow of trees on the highway or standing in the moonlight looking out to the open country, where a fireball of some sort hung in the sky among the stars. These figures were mostly women and children, and I know that they had come out of the town to spend the night in the fields because they have broken houses next to their own homes or their own houses partially destroyed. It is rather pitiful to see these exiles of the night., though there are so many things more pitiful.

Warned of Coming Raid.

A man came up to the place where we stopped and said: "Alerte! Avion boche!" There had been an alarm some miles away of an approaching raid. We motored into the town because our road lay on the other side of it. It was a dark little town and our lights were out so that we were soon lost in the narrow streets. Then overhead there came a loud humming noise, like many bees swarming, and we knew that the German airplanes were close and flying low. There was no other sound. For a few seconds the old town was utterly silent.

No soul moved in the streets, where the moon flung a clear white light down one side, while the opposite shadows were inky black. All the windows were shuttered and no light gleamed through the chinks. Here and there were black gulfs where houses had been blown down in previous raids.

Suddenly there were several enormous crashes. The German airmen were dropping their loads. Instantly intense gunfire opened out on them from many anti-aircraft batteries. Across the pale sky with that red moon there were flashes of shrapnel among the scattered stars and searchlights traveled to and fro, their long white beams feeling about for the enemy, passing each other and making enormous triangles of light from earth to Heaven. Then machine guns opened fire from the ground with a sharp tattoo of bullets and the sound ricocheted down the streets like the beating of sticks against house fronts.

There were about twenty hostile aircraft up, and the drone of their engines was broken up into different notes and different rhythms as they scattered and flew in circles, dropping their bombs in many parts with terrific crashes. As they burst, bits of shell came clamoring down where our car was halted under cover of a wall. Shrapnel bullets whipped against walls and windows, and smashed them, and the street was littered with broken glass.

Watched Raid from a Trench.

A gunner officer in the car said, "I reckon we had better find a better hole," and we ran across the street and dived between the houses and found by luck a trench into which we went down. From that ditch we watched the air raid all around us where those black birds flitted about amidst the shellfire. Now and again we had a glimpse of one or two passing like dots across the moon and doing their deliberate work of destruction. It lasted half an hour in two spells, and in that time there were many bombs dropped, while the town below—that shuttered, lifeless town, suffered this outrage upon its old houses.

A figure loomed out of the darkness and spoke to us. He seemed to be the only soul alive besides ourselves. It was a French workman, who leaned over the ditch and spoke passionate things without any passion in his voice, but quietly and gently.

"I should like to have one of those Germans on a plate," he said. "I would like to cut him up with a knife—not a big knife, but a little knife."

He explained that his wife and children had fled out of the town before darkness and that he had stayed alone next door to a house that had fallen into a heap of ruins.

"It is very bad for our women and children," he said. "This war hurts them more than it hurts us."

When the raid was over shadows loomed through the darkness, stood talking in the doorways, and wandered through the streets searching for what new damage had been done.

GERMANS STILL ADVANCING

But Allied Reserves Are Arriving and a Check Is Hoped For.

BRITISH CUT FROM FRENCH

50th Division Saved by Converging Retreat When It Lost Contact on the Aisne.

OFFICERS BLOW UP BRIDGES

Give Up Their Lives to Delay the Enemy—German Tanks and Airmen Active.

By G. H. PERRIS.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Wednesday, May 29.—There has been very severe fighting today, with results necessarily favorable on the whole to the enemy because the allied reserves are only just beginning to reach the front. A strong thrust toward Soissons and the road and railway from Soissons to Coucy-le-Chateau at the moment when the head of the columns of the offensive were striking south of the Vesle from Braisne, Bazoches, and Fismes, suggests that the armies engaged have already been reinforced.

So far an almost insolent boldness has won through, but the French resistance is steadily increasing, and more prudence will soon be necessary. For instance, the River Aisne is a most awkward obstacle to have on your line of communications. The enemy was able to prevent the Allies from destroying all the bridges during the withdrawal, but it is not too late, and the bombarding squadrons of the Allies will doubtless find telling work to do in the early future.

Whether the German command intended this as a major or as a minor operation, extemporizing its expansion as they did the attack in Flanders when they found the chances good, is for the moment an academic question.

Seven divisions belonging to von Hutier's army two months ago have already been identified on the new front of attack. German airmen on this occasion have been bold, and numbers are meeting their match.

British Divisions Hard Pressed.

I must do justice to the British divisions which had to bear the brunt of one of the fiercest parts of the German assaut on the Aisne. Not merely because they are British. Nowhere could national pride be more out of place than on this battlefield where the best manhood of the two races stand shoulder to shoulder united in common effort and endurance, serving under the same chiefs with the warmest loyalty and showing in many ways that they realize as never before the equality of their virtues and the good fortune of partnership.

Watch them on the road going up to the lines and exchanging little gifts and greetings, or coming down and joining hands to help some party of refugees on its way. Hear their stories of each other, how one was "épatant" and the other "splendid, by Jove," and you will begin to understand the growth of a comradeship that should shame even whispers of petty jealousy sometimes audible outside the danger zone.

Fought to the Last Man.

Last evening when the enemy had got across the Aisne near Pontavert part of the British brigade was falling back. A group of French territorials, firing continuously upon the swarming graycoats, were taking refuge in Germicourt Wood and being gradually surrounded. Some Englishmen and older Frenchmen decided to make their last stand to die there together or to beat the enemy off. A handful of territorials got away to tell the tale. The Englishmen fell to a man.

The French officer who told me of this episode of the battle spoke also of the gallant work of a British cyclist battalion fighting with the French before Fismes, and of the fate of some British officers who lost their lives in blowing up Aisne bridges near Craonne. There was no time to take the usual precautions, but the thing had to be done, and they did it. My informant showed that he felt all the nobility and pathos of these sacrifices, and he wished, as much as I, that the folk at home should hear of them.

The first reports seemed to indicate that the success of the German assault on the British sector led the defenders by a threat of envelopment to retreat from the Aisne heights. This was not so. The Germans first crossed the river further west and the British left was therefore obliged to fall back.

As the numbers and positions of the four British divisions have been given in Marshal Haig's communiqué I can presumably speak with the same definiteness of their part in the battle.

It was the left, and particularly the 50th Division, that had to bear the heaviest of the shock. The bombardment, which lasted three hours, was of indescribable intensity, the chill night air being soon saturated with poison gas, and when at dawn the German infantry, hideous in their masks, broke like a tidal wave upon the thin British line it was overwhelmed. The 50th is a territorial division. Never was North Country pluck more needed or more plentifully given than in this desperate encounter of yesterday.

Fierce Counterattack Fails.

A counterattack toward Craonne failed under a flank fire from tanks and machine guns, and step by step the heroic line was withdrawn through wooded and marshy ground to the Oisne.

The French on the left were resisting like masses with the same bravery; contact was lost with them for short time, as also with the British 25th and 8th Divisions further east, and as the men fell back a front could be preserved only by a converging retreat toward the south by night. When the hills north of Vosle were reached the 50th Division had lost a number of its officers and other ranks.

The British centre, consisting of part of the 25th and 8th Divisions, was more fortunate. The 25th had been in reserve, and its support in the low and difficult ground at the east end of the Aisne Valley was most important. It and the 8th maintained their second positions till late in the afternoon.

On the right the 21st Division, together with the neighboring French division, had to defend the line of the canal from Berry au Bac to Bermericourt against the onset of four German divisions, aided by the strongest fleet of tanks the enemy has yet put into the field. This northwestern edge of the great plain of Champagne is very favorable ground for the use of cars of assault, and it was here that the French made their first experiments with indifferent results that have since been greatly bettered.

These two British and French divisions had the advantage of a line of heights with batteries and perfect observation behind them. They held out obstinately till the retreat of the left made it necessary to move southward.

Staffs and rankers equally have worked and are working together with the utmost cordiality; in fact, practically, as a single body.

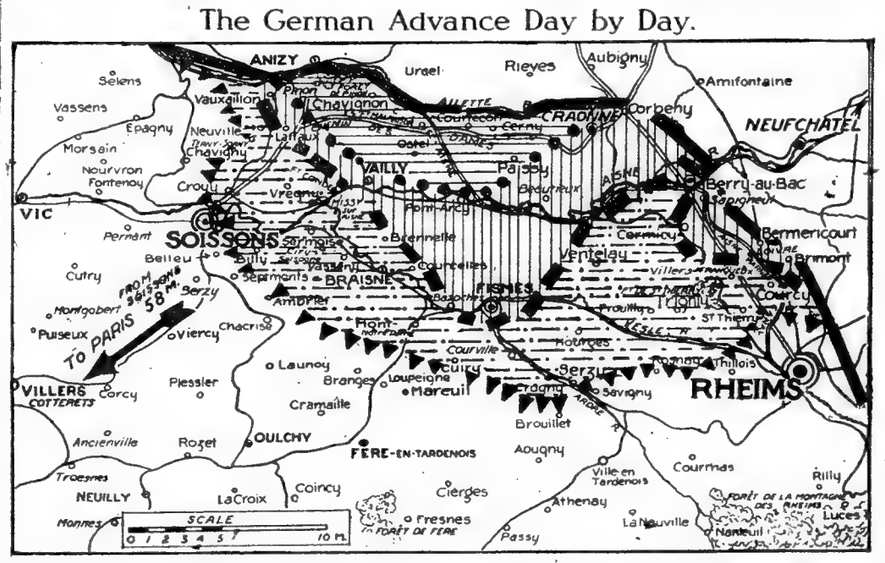
The German Advance Day by Day.



With the fall of Soissons and the extension of the German lines south of the Vesle River, the new enemy front between Soissons and Rheims may be represented as the arc of a circle, its most southern point being south of Fismes, while Rheims is only a few miles outside the curve.

The German advance on the three successive days of the offensive is thus indicated on the map: The portion shaded in unbroken horizontal lines represents the territory gained on the first day; that in vertical lines the gains of the second, while the ground covered by yesterday's advance is shaded in broken horizontal lines.

Clemenceau in Danger on Trip Near the Front

PARIS, May 29.—Premier Clemenceau, returning from the front tonight, declared that the morale of the French soldiers as they march singing to the battlefront is admirable and magnificent.

During the trip the Premier, with his usual fearlessness, went near the front lines. Three minutes after M. Clemenceau had passed a certain crossroads a General was killed there.

GERMANS USING TANKS IN DRIVE

Hope Thus to Avoid the Large Losses from the Fire of Machine Guns.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 29.—Interesting details come in regarding the efforts made by the enemy to correct the errors of their March offensive. Officers of the British division in the Craonne region declare that the advancing infantry were accompanied by tanks "in very large numbers" in order to minimize as far as possible the losses by machine-gun fire that proved so disastrous in the former battle.

The German air force, too, is described as "numerous and aggressive," and it is clear that the enemy airmen have been taken to task severely for their previous inefficiency.

Prisoners relate that the utmost has been done to revive the flagging morale. Some had been told that they would be in Paris in a fortnight, but they hardly appear to believe it.

As regards the use of storm divisions in particular the training has been most thorough. Supporting divisions have been exercised in advancing through the stormers, when the latter have carried a position, and it is stated that such practice work continued until it was accomplished without a vestige of confusion.

During the advance from the front the storm divisions enjoy exceptional advantages, especially respecting food, and their keenness for action is stimulated by promises of cash rewards, abundant leave, and lavish distribution of decorations.

War of Movement Restored.

In the never ending discussions of the past three days regarding the German intentions and objectives, one often hears the suggestion that the enemy struck on the Aisne in order to protect his right against possible allied counterattacks towards Laon, or chose the Chemin des Dames because of the moral value of success in this historic sector. Such theories are plausible enough, but do not take into account the basic principle of enemy action at present.

By new tactics he has brought back the war of movement and his central purpose is aggressive operation to defeat the allied armies before America turns the equilibrium of force against him. Time is too precious for movements, whose purpose is defensive or sentimental. The explanation is far more simple.

The essence of the von Hutier attack system is to fall with overwhelming force upon a weaker opponent. It is therefore obvious that the point must be chosen for preference where the density of the defenders is not great. The Aisne positions were the nearest point to the main area of allied concentration which fulfilled this requirement. They form, in fact, the outlying flank of a great army whose left is in Flanders, its centre at Amiens, and its right at the Montdidier-Noyon sector.

It is most probable that the German manoeuvre was a classic attempt to turn the allied fight by bursting through a weak flank guard in the hope of a subsequent turning movement that would roll up the stronger position to the westward.

May 28.—In consequence of the new factors, introduced by German strategy, of the surprise attack with enormous numbers, we must readjust our conceptions heretofore based on position warfare. That is the lesson of the second great offensive whose course hitherto has been a repetition of the attack of March 21.

In position warfare of the last year, and ever since the Marne, the defender knew where the blow would fall and was for a while able to mass his forces accordingly. The new shock may come at a point where his numbers are limited, with the result that the enemy pours through and gains a considerable amount of ground before the situation once again is stabilized. That it will be stabilized no one in the French Army doubts.

To the enemy tactics of massed assault with depth, the Allies have replied by a corresponding depth of defense which necessitates the abandoning of ground quite out of proportion to what has been the custom in position warfare. In the present battle, which seems to be the principal drive and not a diversion as at first thought, the Germans have engaged, according to the latest reports, at least twenty-five divisions. Sheer weight of men drove them through the light screen of the allied defenders.

It must be remembered that the Allies are playing safe with the full certainty that the American Armies will ultimately turn the scale in their favor. The Germans are in exactly the contrary position. They have got to try for an immediate decision. It would be playing their game to waste our energies in defense of positions whose loss, however regrettable, is of no vital importance.

Masses of Reserves Coming Up.

PARIS, May 29.—Masses of allied reserve troops are arriving constantly on the battlefield, telegraphs the Havas correspondent on the French front.

Perfect harmony exists between the French and British troops, who cooperate in defending the ground foot by foot and heroically delaying the enemy advance.

Allied movements, the correspondent adds, are being carried out in order and with assurance.

Among the elements of confidence is the demeanor of the troops coming up to enter the fight. They are declared to be hopeful and in high spirits.

ALLIES RETIRE ACROSS VESLE

Now On the Heights South of River—Also Fall Back on Rheims.

NEW GERMAN ARMY ENGAGES

Huge Forces Outnumber Allies, Who, However, Retire Without Disorder.

BERLIN TELLS OF SUCCESS

Troops Are Being Pushed Forward "Uninterruptedly" —Many Towns Taken.

PARIS, May 29.—Under continued violent German attacks the French troops on the right wing of the Aisne offensive have evacuated Soissons, except for its western outskirts, and the German forces of the centre are in possession of the territory between the Aisne and Vesle Rivers and a considerable part to the south of the latter, having extended their advance in this region about four miles.

On the left wing of the German advance the Franco-British troops hold positions on the Brouillet-Savigny-Thillois line, west of Rheims, and the troops covering the cathedral city have withdrawn behind the Aisne Canal, northwest of the town.

These developments are reported in the night bulletin of the War Office, the text of which follows:

The battle took on particular violence on our left wing. In the region of Soissons, after stubborn resistance and fighting in the streets, which held back the enemy for several hours, our troops evacuated the town, the western outskirts of which we occupy.

Southeast of Soissons the battle extended to the plateau marked by Belleu, Septmonts, Ambrief, and Chacrise.

In the centre, under the pressure of the enemy, we gave ground in the region of Loupeigne, north of Fère-en-Tardenois. The Franco-British troops further to the east maintained their positions on the line of Brouillet, Savigny, and Tilloy, [Thillois?].

On the right the troops which are covering Rheims have withdrawn behind the Aisne Canal, northwest of the town.

The text of the day report from the War Office reads:

Last night the German advance, assisted by the arrival of fresh divisions, was more powerful, especially on both wings, in the directions of Soissons and Rheims.

On the left French troops, fighting every foot of the way, fell back to the eastern outskirts of Soissons, where the battle continues with violence. On the right Franco-British troops, after an energetic defense of the Massif of St. Thierry, withdrew slowly to the heights south and southeast, where they are holding on between the Vesle River and the Aisne Canal.

In the centre the fighting is continuing with varying results on the southern bank of the Vesle, where our troops are defending the heights with admirable courage.

Spirited artillery fighting continues on both banks of the Meuse. The French fire broke up a number of German raids in the sector of Embermenil, north of Bezonvaux, in the region of Badonvillers and near the Rhone-Rhine Canal.

German Official Report.

BERLIN, (via London,) May 29.—The victorious continuation of the Aisne attack is reported in today's official communication. The heights northeast of Soissons have been taken; Braisne and Fismes, on the Vesle River, have been captured, and the German troops occupy heights to the south of that stream.

The number of prisoners has been increased to 25,000, among whom are one French and one English General, it is said.

The text of the day report follows:

On the battlefronts from the Yser to the Oise the increased fighting activity continued. French local attacks south of Ypres failed.

The armies of Col. Gen. Boehm and General von Below, of the Army of the German Crown Prince, have victoriously continued their attack. French and English reserves rushed up were defeated.

The right wing divisions of General Larisch, after repelling a French counterattack, captured the Terny-Sorny Ridge and the heights northeast of Soissons.

After hard fighting the troops of General Wichura also broke the resistance of the enemy on the plateau of Condé. Fort Condé was taken by storm. Vregny and Missy also were taken.

On the southern bank of the Aisne and the Vesle, heights to the west of Ciry were occupied.

The corps of General von Winkler, General von Conta, and General Schmetow have crossed the Vesle. Braisne and Fismes have been captured, and we are standing on the heights due south of the Vesle.

The troops of General Ilse have taken the hills northeast of Prouilly by storm and have captured Villers-Franqueux and Courcy, and now are fighting for the heights of Thierry.

The indefatigable advancing infantry, artillery, and mine-thrower detachments are being closely followed by balloons, anti-aircraft guns, and dispatch riders.

The energetic labors of the pioneers and railway equipment and construction troops have rendered possible the conquest of the field of attack and the bringing up of fighting men by columns uninterruptedly. In self-sacrificing activity doctors and stretcher-bearers are looking after the wounded on the battlefields.

In spite of the changing weather, our aerial forces are attacking the enemy again and again with bombs and machine guns, while aviators have surveyed without interruption our progressing attacks and effect of our artillery fire.

The number of prisoners has increased to 25,000, including one French and one English General.

The official report from Army Headquarters tonight says:

Near Soissons and between Soissons and Rheims we made fresh progress.

A Third German Army Engaged.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, May 29, (Associated Press.)—The Germans advanced against the French lines again today after throwing further masses of troops into the battle. Both flanks of the battle line were the scene of very heavy fighting, by inferior numbers against superior, with the result that the Allies were obliged again to cede ground at several points.

Besides von Boehm's and von Below's armies, many divisions of von Hutier's troops were engaged. These especially trained units had participated in the first rush on March 21, and had since then been reconstituted.

An enormous number of light machine guns was employed by the Germans, as well as a large fleet of tanks and much heavy and light artillery, while the German aviators were extremely active.

From the plain toward Juvincourt, Ville-au-Bois, Pontavert, and Berry-au-Bac numerous tanks came into action. For a considerable time the thin allied line held out, but as the enemy debouched, wave after wave, the French and British, almost submerged, fell back slowly, getting across the river. Several British officers afterward sacrificed their lives in destroying the bridges.

Almost simultaneously overpowering enemy forces made their way to the top of the Chemin des Dames Ridge and also to the western end of this road, in the neighborhood of Chavignon and Malmaison, and the troops holding these points were obliged to recede.

The allied movement to the rear was executed with the greatest precision, there was no disorder, and all the units kept in constant touch.

To the east other British divisions, amalgamated with French Colonial troops, held fast and are still firmly sticking to their positions, although they have been compelled to rearrange part of their front in order to keep alignment with their retiring comrades.

In the direction of Soissons a readjustment of the front line also became necessary, in consequence of the falling back of the centre, where the Germans were pushing hardest.

The fighting has been continuous for two days through a country composed of a series of chalky plateaux, with winding valleys, whose slopes are half clothed with trees and contain many caverns. Along the top of one of the principal ridges runs the famous Chemin des Dames, from which valleys run toward the Aisne. The allied possession of this ridge compromised the security of the German southern flank.

The enemy's torrent of divisions, rolling forward, found only the thinnest line of allied troops facing the advance. These fell back before the irresistible pressure, retiring, but struggling valiantly. The torrent as it moved forward became even stronger, for the Germans added new forces to it. Even the Aisne did not stay its rush.

The Germans pushed across the river and at the same time spread along the sides, the Allies having decided that it was useless to sacrifice men in efforts to hold these positions with too few defenders.

The southern slopes of the Aisne Valley offered good ground for a defense by the Allies, had they been in sufficient force. But the Germans were in immensely superior numbers, and the allied commanders chose to retire to the plateaux beyond and thus give an opportunity for the reserves to concentrate. It is probable, before the advancing German torrent weakens, that further territory will fall into the hands of the enemy. That, however, in the opinion of French officers, will not affect the strength of the allied forces, which retain their striking power for the future.

British and French in Close Touch.

The French and British kept in the closest touch throughout the battle, working together as a single unit. The spirit of comradeship was touching. Both in the ranks and along the roads wounded men of both nations, when able to walk, were helping one another toward the dressing stations, while all the soldiers indiscriminately gave aid, when possible, to the civilian refugees.

The reserves are moving, proceeding toward points where they can oppose the German rush. Among the allied troops of whatever nationality, despite their lost positions, confidence is great that the desperate effort of the Germans will not succeed in inflicting more than a glancing blow on the allied forces, and that the present situation is only temporary.

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

The German attack on the Aisne front is still in full swing, and the advance is being continued. As the hours pass we begin to get a clearer idea of the German methods, and in a measure to see the reason for the Allies' defeat.

Let us first see the rapidity of the advance. The German report of the fighting states that it started at daybreak, and toward the afternoon the German lines had been advanced to the Aisne, between Vailly and Berry au Bac. This is an advance of four and a half miles, made in a few hours' fighting. The front of attack was about thirty miles along the river.

In this rapid advance, the French and British, but principally the French, as the British appear to have held their ground until the French retreat forced them to fall back in order to protect their flank, had to retreat with their artillery a distance of over five miles, to take with them as great a store of their supplies as was possible, and to cross the Aisne River. The river is wide at this point and has not a great many crossings, although the permanent crossings were undoubtedly supplemented by pontoons hurriedly thrown across.

The French were, therefore, suddenly thrown back upon the river, with every road to the crossings frightfully congested and with no adequate means of crossing. And yet the number of prisoners taken was not in excess of 25,000, which is the maximum German claim. This is a considerable number, it is true, but it is not a great many as measured by the length of front involved. It was a situation where a very much greater number of captures would have been expected. The reason it was not more was because the line was held with relatively few men.

The Allies had almost certainly anticipated an attack in another quarter and had strengthened that quarter at the expense of the Aisne front. The strength of the Aisne position was thought to be an excellent reason why the Germans would not attack there, and it proved to be one of the very good reasons why they did attack. In short it means, as was stated yesterday, that the Allies were outgeneralled.

The main effort of the Germans was at first directed between Vailly and Berry au Bac. It was on this front that the Aisne was first crossed. In the fighting of yesterday, however, there was an effort to extend the gain westward on a line parallel to the Aisne, while at the same time pushing on toward the south. In both of these efforts the Germans have been successful to date. On the western end of the offensive, after stubborn fighting on the heights of Margival and of Vregny, the French line was forced to fall back to the west as far as the outskirts of Soissons. The entire line of the Aisne was thus lost eastward of that city.

To the south, the French hesitated but a short time on the ridge between the Aisne and the Vesle, and under heavy pressure of German reserves fell back across the latter river to the heights which overlook its southern bank. The Germans were close behind them and crossed the Vesle on the French heels at several points, the villages of Bazoches and of Fismes being mentioned as two points of crossing. The British line to the east was naturally vitally affected by the French retreat, and although it had clung for the first two days to the high ground about St. Thierry, about three miles northwest of Rheims, was finally forced to give this up and withdraw toward the Vesle.

This move is seriously endangering Rheims. Rheims is on the north bank of the Vesle, behind which, some distance to the west, the French have fallen back. If the Germans can press the situation eastward as well as westward, Rheims will be taken in the rear and will have to be evacuated. Indeed, it seems as though Rheims has already fallen, although the reports do not specifically so state. The French report states that the lines have been withdrawn behind the Aisne Canal and that one point on the new line is the village of Thillois, which is about a mile and a half south of the canal and about three miles west of Rheims. If, therefore, Rheims has not fallen, it is inevitable that it should do so in a short time.

Once across the Vesle the Germans lost no time in continuing their advance southward. There has in fact hardly been a pause in their progress. They have, since early Monday morning, when the attack began, advanced fifteen miles due south from the Ailette toward the Marne, from which river they are only eight miles distant. The advance, however, is not toward Paris directly. In fact, there is every reason to doubt that there is any relation between Paris and the present effort. This attack is one with the battle of Picardy and is intended to affect the front before Amiens by widening out the salient at that point, as was stated yesterday. In fact, the object in so far as a specific object may be stated, is the juncture of the Oise and the Aisne. This will open up wide the entire Amiens salient.

Paris indeed is no nearer the German lines than it was before the attack. It seems that the Germans will be successful in their real object in this particular fight. They have created a situation where the Amiens front cannot but be affected. When they reach this point, however, the hardest task still lies ahead of them—that of reaching the sea.

The only other news of interest in the battle zone is a brilliant local attack by the American forces, which resulted in the capture of Cantigny, a few miles northwest of Montdidier. This gain is not without its local importance. Every yard gained here threatens the grip which the Germans have acquired on the west bank of the Avre River. If they can be eventually thrown across this barrier the defensive position of the Allies before Amiens will be materially strengthened.

HAIG'S MEN REPULSE RAIDS IN THE NORTH

Make a Successful Incursion Near Arras—French Check an Attack Near Kemmel.

LONDON, May 29.—German raids on the northern sectors of the British front were repulsed last night, and the French troops north of Kemmel completely repulsed a local attack north of Kemmel. The British made a successful raid southeast of Arras, capturing prisoners and a machine gun.

German artillery has been active north of Albert, east of Arras, south of Lens, and on parts of the Lys front.

As to actions on other parts of his line Field Marshal Haig says tonight that "there is nothing further to report."

Following is the text of the night bulletin:

A hostile raiding party was driven back during the night in the neighborhood of Beaumont-Hamel. [About five miles north of Albert.]

A local attack made by the enemy north of Kemmel was completely repulsed by the French troops.

There is nothing further to report from the British front.

The day report issued by the War Office says:

We carried out a successful raid last night southeast of Arras, and captured prisoners and a machine gun. A few prisoners were taken by us also during the night west of Merville. A raid attempted by the enemy at Givenchy-lâ Bassée was repulsed. A hostile attack upon one of our posts south of the Ypres-Comines Canal also was repulsed after sharp fighting.

The hostile artillery has been active north of Albert, in the neighborhood of Ayette, east of Robecq and northwest of Merville and has shown somewhat increased activity locally east of Arras and south of Lens.

TRYING TO WIN BY WEIGHT.

London Regards Gains Made by Foe as Menacing.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 28.—The battle in the Aisne region continues with the utmost violence, the enemy bringing up a succession of fresh divisions and endeavoring by sheer weight to push the advantage of his initial attack. His tactics are the same as they were around St. Quentin and on the Lys, except that he is reported to have made in the opening stages large use of tanks.

The allied line has been forced back a considerable distance. Even if the German attack in this region is not the enemy's main effort, as many experts here hold, it is a very serious one, on a broad front stretching from Vaux-sur-Aillon to the west of Rheims, a distance of about thirty miles.

The number of prisoners claimed by the Germans is large, but not larger than might be expected when it is borne in mind to what a depth they penetrated and the length of their line of attack. Particularly in view of the fact that this initial success is the German Crown Prince's, it is probable that the enemy will make strong efforts to develop his attacks, though the general direction of this effort does not lead to anything vital.

CONFIDENT DESPITE LOSSES.

Paris Military Critic Says Germans Cannot Win Decisive Victory.

PARIS, May 29.—A noteworthy point in connection with the present great battle is the freedom allowed the military critics in their articles. Henri Bidou, for instance, is allowed to say in the Journal this morning that it was "certainly distressing that the enemy succeeded in recapturing in one day our conquests of 1917;" an admission which it is considered virtually certain the previous censorship would not have passed.

M. Bidou, who has established himself as one of the soundest and most conservative of the military writers in France, insists, however, that the only true point of view in the present circumstances is one taking a general, wide outlook, and his article inspires confidence in the final result, which he forecasts will be a repetition of that incident to Germany's last two great efforts.

The German success, this writer declares, is due to the enemy's ability to manoeuvre his reserves within the arc of the front in a way which admits of a crushing mass being suddenly thrown against any weak point. But the enemy's object, he points out, is not to recapture territory, but to obtain such a victory as will end the war.

The Germans, M. Bidou recalls, found their violent effort in Picardy checked after they had engaged 111 divisions, while their second effort in Flanders cost the services of fifty divisions. He argues that if the enemy has not pursued the logical course of following up these two partial successes it is certainly because he is unable to do so owing to the terrific cost in men, which is forcing him to place in line recruits born in the first half of the year 1900.

"It is a duel to the death," he concludes, "and every hour in which Germany fails to obtain the decision increases the imminence of her defeat."

SOISSONS WAS UNTENABLE.

Loss of the Chemin des Dames Made Its Evacuation Imperative.

Soissons, in the Aisne Valley, twenty miles southwest of Laon, lies on the left bank of the river as it flows westward from Bourg to meet the Oise at Compiègne. Evidently the valley, from one to three miles in width and from 150 to [illegible] feet deep, once formed the bed of a large prehistoric river, or possibly was made by a glacier.

The Germans swept over this terrain in early September, 1914, on their way to the Marne; in their subsequent retreat they were thrown across the river, but tenaciously held the northern bank which rises to form the plateau of the Aisne, whose highest ridge contains the road known as the Chemin des Dames.

From the middle of September, 1914, until in the following Summer, when the Germans were driven far north over the plateau, severe fighting took place across the valley. The town of Soissons, famous for its mediaeval cathedral of Notre Dame and its Abbey of St. Jean des Vignes, was saved by the British engineers in September. It had a population of 12,000.

At Soissons the valley railway coming east from Compiègne sends off a branch northward through a dead valley and tunnel in the plateau to Maubeuge, via Braye, and then proceeds east to Rheims.

It took the English and French nearly a year to drive the Germans away from the north bank, and two years to force them over the plateau and beyond the Chemin des Dames, fifteen miles north. The Germans have undone this work in three days. Yet, with the Chemin des Dames and the Craonne positions lost, it would have been contrary to all strategy for the Allies to attempt to hold the northern bank with the river at their back. The taking of the town in the valley, although it is on the southern bank, is of little strategic importance on account of the fact that the valley itself is better commanded from the higher southern bank than it is from the north and the plateau of the Aisne.

BRITISH PEOPLE CALMLY CONFIDENT

Believe Allied Reserves Will Turn Tables on Foe at Foch's Chosen Time.

LONDON, May 29.—The British people have received the serious events in France with their characteristic quiet and confidence. Their morale appears not to have been affected, and there is not the slightest semblance of excitement in London.

After digesting the late editions of the morning newspapers the people went quietly about business as usual. Their grave and solemn manner, however, indicated that they appreciated the seriousness of the battle situation. Wherever the latest developments were discussed the predominant view was that the allied reserves would turn the tables on the enemy at General Foch's chosen time, and that there was no reason for alarm, especially as the ever-growing American Army had not yet made itself felt.

The afternoon newspapers, while not seeking to minimize the seriousness of the German blow on the Aisne, assure the public that the Allies' reserves are coming into action. They feature the success of the Americans near Montdidier, publishing long accounts from British correspondents, who credit the Americans with brilliant fighting.

The Daily Chronicle fears that the advance has involved a big loss in guns, but thinks that in other respects it need not cause undue alarm. The paper adds:

"The country is so difficult that General Foch's reserves should have time to intervene before the stategic situation is altered seriously to the detriment of the Allies. The Germans, however, probably have done rather better than they expected, although their achievement thus far does not go much beyond undoing the effects of last year's French victories."

"If the German successes had been won two months ago," says The Daily Graphic, "they would have created a widespread feeling of alarm. Experience, however, has shown that initial successes frequently are followed by long pauses of impotence. Consequently, we are able, without making light of the new German advance, to regard it calmly."

The Times sees indications that the whole line which the Germans assaulted was manned rather lightly and thinks it clear that the retirement was a deliberate outcome of a definite resolution made swiftly in view of the formidable character of the onslaught. It adds:

"The significance of the German advance cannot be minimized, and the advance to the Vesle converts the attack into an operation of great importance and some menace. The loss of the positions which the Allies have sacrificed so much to maintain is a regrettable development, and we fear that many heavy guns may have fallen into the hands of the enemy."

"The enemy's achievement," says The Daily News, "is formidable, and brings them further south than they have been in this sector since trench war began in 1914. But there ought to be no occasion for serious alarm. We have grown familiar with the course of these great thrusts which achieve a startling success in the first rush and lose their impetus just as the defense brings its reserves into action. This is what we may anticipate in the present case. We must not look for any dramatic reversal of fortune, but may reasonably expect the equilibrium to be re-established."

Evacuation of Noncombatants Began as German Shelling Started.

PARIS, May 29.—Soissons, which the Germans began to bombard heavily on Monday, was evacuated by the civilian population under the advice of the military authorities, the correspondent of The Intransigéant reports.

More than 1,200 shells fell in Soissons on Monday, the correspondent's message shows, and the patients in the hospitals there were hastily removed by American light cars to places of safety, the evacuation beginning as soon as the shelling started. The nursing and medical staffs remained in the town until Tuesday, however. The population got away as best it could.

To Naturalize Drafted Men.

ALBANY, May 29.—An extraordinary term of the Supreme Court to naturalize drafted men selected for service in the National Army was ordered by Governor Whitman today, to be held at West Point, beginning June 8. Supreme Court Justice Morschauser was named as Presiding Justice.

Philip Gibbs's Dispatches from the Battlefront

After all, there had been a lot of people in that town which seemed so deserted.

This is a little scene which happens in many places and on many a night out here. It belongs to the normal life of the women and children who live in the war zone, and it is not amusing, though they are very brave.

It was not amusing the other night for the Waacs in their camps, but they, too, showed great pluck and spirit. When the raid began they were ordered by their officers to march quietly into some shelters that had been dug for them near their camps, and they obeyed this command with discipline and cheerful courage.

"The Superintendent has the wind up," said one of them, poohpoohing danger with a girlish swagger to comfort others, but it was a wise precaution, that of taking to cover, for it was a bad raid, and when it was over the Waacs who returned to one camp found that many of their huts had been destroyed, and there was a fine mess to clear up in the morning, but not a single girl, or hardly a girl, was late for the morning roll call, though they had had no sleep all night. There were no casualties among them, and now they have good shelters near at hand, so that their risks are not very great—not greater than among their sisters in London during one of these raids.

There is no doubt that all this night bombing has added much to the terrors of war, and we may get what consolation there is in the thought that our enemy is now having a far worse time from the same process.

they were going to have the hardest time in their lives.

Fierce hand-to-hand fighting occurred in Cantigny, which contained a large tunnel and a number of caves. The tunnel sheltered 100 Germans. The Americans hurled hand grenades like baseballs into these shelters.

An officer told the correspondent that the Americans went forward smilingly, but that at the same time their faces reflected the traditional American grit and determination.

The American line now runs 150 to 200 yards east of Cantigny, as a result of the successful attack yesterday. The nearest German trench is several hundred yards east of where the Americans have dug in. The Germans, it has been found, had many outposts and machine gun emplacements in Cantigny.

Angle Straightened Out.

The old German lines formed an angle which has now been straightened out. The Americans have obtained high ground commanding a section of plateau-like country.

American aerial observers assisted the French in directing the artillery fire.

America's first offensive blow was struck in a mist. The French tanks apparently did not have much to do, as the American artillery already had prepared the way. A bright sun came out and shone on the Americans as they dug in in their new positions.

As the Americans started out across No Man's Land there were many jokes about "eating boche for breakfast." The Americans fought as though they were veterans, and there was no hesitation when the officers sprang forward and shouted:

"Come on, boys!"

Troops Absolutely Confident.

Several officers, describing the scene, agreed that the outstanding feature in their minds was the wonderful morale of the men and their absolute confidence in themselves. The Germans poured machine-gun bullets all around the Americans as they were digging in, but no attention was paid to them, as jokes and quips were handed back and forth.

The demeanor of the men wounded in the action was found similarly cheerful when the correspondent visited the field hospitals in the afternoon. He saw stretched out on their cots a number of these Americans, for the most part only slightly wounded, who acted like schoolboys returned from a great day of sport, smoking cigarettes, eagerly relating their personal experiences and laughing loudly at the humorous incidents.

Lieutenant George E. Butler, formerly an attorney in Indianapolis, who was slightly wounded in the leg, said that going over the top was like a manoeuvre in the training camp back home. The men were eager for it, he said, and some of them remained up in the trenches all night talking about the approaching adventure with cheerful anticipation.

"When we reached Cantigny," he added, "it was only a pile of bricks and stones. Our artillery had leveled the town. The German machine-gun bullets were buzzing about like bumble bees, but our fellows didn't pay any more attention to them than if they had been confetti.

Cracked Jokes and Sang.

"It was the finest example of team work I ever saw. There was not a hitch anywhere. The men cracked jokes and sang, but they were business like in their work."

Lieutenant Albert E. Billing of Brooklyn, N. Y., who also was slightly wounded, was brought to the hospital and placed on a cot adjoining that of Lieutenant Butler. As soon as their eyes met they clasped hands and greeted each other like long-lost brothers.

"It was a great show, wasn't it?" Billings said. "Gee, I wish the folks at home could have seen it. I wouldn't have missed it for the world."

Lieutenant Irving W. Wood of Oakland, Cal., said he did not see one American fall during yesterday's attack.

"It was more exciting than a football game," he added. "We have got the Huns on the run. All we need is more Americans and then we shall lick them."

Isolated with Prisoners.

Many of the American soldiers who took part in the successful attack also participated in the repulse of the German raid against the American lines Monday. One participant in Monday's affair is said to have been found yesterday in a shellhole in No Man's Land with two wounded Germans as his prisoners. He was unable to get back to the American lines Monday night, so he stood guard over them until the attack yesterday liberated him and secured the prisoners to the Americans.

The German prisoners include men from a Bavarian and a Silesian regiment, some of them as young as 17 or 18, and others between 45 and 50. All are poorly clothed and appeared to be underfed.

The Germans trooped out of their dugouts when they saw the futility of resistance, their hands held up, shouting "Kamerad." Apparently they were glad to surrender. One of them said he did not want to fight, but had been compelled to do so.

The garrison at Cantigny was all accounted for. The men either surrendered or were killed. Many German dead were strewn over the ground.

Waves of Attackers Repulsed.

LONDON, May 29.—German troops who counterattacked last night against the Americans who captured Cantigny, west of Montdidier, were repulsed with heavy losses, Reuter's correspondent at the British Army Headquarters in France reports today.

The enemy counterattack on the new American positions was met by the allied gunners with a hurricane of fire. Waves of German infantrymen were stopped dead and thrown back, leaving large numbers of killed or wounded on the ground.

German Report on Cantigny.

BERLIN, May 29, (via London.)—The German official statement today contains this statement:

West of Montdidier the enemy during a local advance penetrated into Cantigny yesterday.

PARIS, May 29.—The official day report says:

West of Montdidier the Americans broke up two successive German attacks which were directed against Cantigny.

AMERICANS KILL 9, CAPTURE 4.

Angered by Gas Attack, They Repulse Raid Near Luneville.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 29, (Associated Press.)—The enemy launched another heavy gas attack against our troops in the Luneville sector early this morning and attempted to reach out first at three places. They were repulsed, with comparatively heavy losses.

The first attack, made two kilometers southwest of Premenil, broke down under the hot machine gun fire from the American trenches, the Germans retreating. Both the Americans and the Germans fought in gas masks.

Soon afterward the enemy put down a heavy barrage a kilometer to the west, and fourteen Germans managed to penetrate a trench in which were Americans who on Monday were subjected to a gas attack, and who were fighting mad.

The Americans emerged from their dugouts, and hand-to-hand fighting, which was bloody for the Germans, ensued, the Americans going for the enemy with knives and bayonets.

The Germans had been ordered to take prisoners at any cost, but they failed to get any.

The American losses were insignificant. The enemy lost all the fourteen men who penetrated the American position, nine having been killed, one having died of wounds, and four having been made prisoner.

OUR MEN WON ALL OBJECTIVES

Artillery Did Good Service in Backing the Advance.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 28.—American troops serving with the French Army this morning captured Cantigny, northwest of Montdidier. Our forces gained all their objectives and consolidated them.

American infantry was assisted by our own artillery and French heavy guns. We took 145 prisoners, including two officers. The American casualties were comparatively light.

The American attack was preceded by a heavy artillery preparation, the effectiveness of which may be measured by the fact that the German resistance was very slight. Our troops which made the successful attack in Picardy were sent there a month ago after General Pershing offered the French the use of all the American resources in France to help hold the Germans. They have held their position under comparatively heavy shelling for four weeks.

Increased artillery activity continued last night and this morning on all the American sectors. It is evidently the game of the boche to keep our troops occupied in order to prevent the removal of more forces to the French and British lines.

In reply to a heavy German bombardment of our lines on the Luneville sector Sunday night and yesterday morning the Americans sent over an artillery attack for eleven hours, ending early this morning. We used high explosives and much gas. It is believed our gun work was very effective, because the German retaliatory fire was very weak.

Air observers reported heavy use of German ambulances back of their lines this morning. Patrols were active during the night in several localities.

AMERICANS FIGHT 4,500 METRES IN AIR

Spectacular Combat Is Won by Campbell and Rickenbacker on Toul Front.

DOWN 2 ENEMY MACHINES

Another Bold Aviator Attacks Two of Foe All Alone and Gets Back Safely.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 28.—Two American airmen were 4,500 meters in the air today when they sighted six boche machines—four monoplane fighters and two observation biplanes. The Americans dived down, whereupon the four fast German machines took flight, leaving the observation machines they were supposed to protect.

The Americans, Lieutenant Douglas Campbell and Lieutenant Eddie Rickenbacher, went after the two observation machines. One fell into the woods and the other was driven down out of control.

The spirit of the American aviators is shown in the case of one young man who was sent out yesterday on patrol duty. He left his patrol and, sweeping low over the German trenches, poured bullets on to the boches there. Then, seeing two big boche airplanes, he attacked them until his ammunition gave out, 150 yards away, and then came home. Probably he will be mildly disciplined for disobeying orders. An American observation machine had a narrow escape while directing artillery fire. He directed shells to the left, when one fell on a camouflaged ammunition dump and a flying shell took off his propeller. He got back to our lines safely. An exploding shell also overturned another American observation machine, but it was righted. An excellent bit of work was done yesterday when four American machines, going up on the alert, sighted two Germans, and a minute later the four Americans were on all sides of one of the Germans.

WOUNDED AT CANTIGNY.

Lieut. A. E. Billing of Brooklyn Is a Plattsburg Graduate.

Lieutenant Albert E. Billing, reported slightly wounded when the American forces captured the village of Cantigny from the Germans on Monday, is a son of Dr. A. W. Billing of 7,401 Ridge Boulevard, Brooklyn. He is 25 years old and was formerly a private in the 23d Regiment of the National Guard.

After attending the first Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg, he won a commission as Second Lieutenant of infantry and was assigned to Camp Wadsworth, Spartanburg, S. C. He was later assigned to one of the National Army regiments.

Lieutenant Billing was married in September, 1917. He is a member of the Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn.

WAR DEPARTMENT PLEASED

Officials Gratified at Our Troops' Hard Blow at Cantigny.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—War Department officials were highly pleased today at the conduct of the American troops in their first offensive against the Germans in Picardy. The attack that brought the capture of Cantigny, they pointed out, was delivered with speed and precision, testifying to the hard-hitting quality of the American.

The quick consolidation of the ground won, noted by both foreign and American correspondents, officers said, gave satisfactory proof of the aptitude of American officers and men in learning the methods of modern warfare.

Some officers believe the American attack may forecast the launching of a counteroffensive of large scope by General Foch. They regard the time and place of the operations as right for a feeling-out thrust as a preliminary to a counterassault in force.

An addition to General Pershing's communiqué for yesterday, given out by the War Department today, follows:

Section B—Yesterday morning three of our planes encountered four hostile planes flying at 3,000 meters in the region of Montsec. In the fighting which ensued Lieutenant Douglas Campbell successfully attacked two of the German machines. Of these one lost both wings and fell. This was referred to in yesterday's communiqué. In the same encounter one of our aviators was wounded, but succeeded in making a normal landing within our lines.

Yesterday morning in a sector recently taken over by our troops an American Sergeant encountered a German patrol of four men, who had entered one of the trenches during the night. In fighting which ensued our Sergeant, although receiving three wounds, succeeded in driving out the hostile patrol, which left grenades and wire cutters behind.

In Lorraine, on the evening of May 28, a hostile patrol attempted to penetrate our lines. It was driven off with loss to the enemy of five killed. Of these one was brought into our lines. One of our men was wounded.

This morning Lieutenant Rickenbacher and Lieutenant Campbell attacked a group of six enemy planes and brought one down out of control.

Spaniards Believe the U-Boats Brought Widespread Epidemic

MADRID, May 29.—The grippelike epidemic continues to spread. There are 120,000 victims in Madrid. King Alfonso is still in bed with the malady, but his condition is not dangerous.

The disease is affecting horses, cases among which are reported from the cavalry and the public services.

The population are of the belief that the disease was brought to Spain by German submarines, as there are cases among crews of interned underwater boats. Some persons are of the opinion that it had been spread by microbes blown by the winds from the battlefronts.

The authorities have taken precautions to prevent an increase in the price of medicines as the result of the extraordinary demand due to the epidemic.

FIRST OF OUR TROOPS IN BRITISH TRENCHES

Officers and Men Have Suffered Slight Losses, but Stand the Test Well

HEADQUARTERS OF THE AMERICANS WITH THE BRITISH ARMY, May 26, (Associated Press.) — Some junior officers and men, having reached the last stage in their training, are taking a turn in the British trenches, where they have already come into contact with the enemy's fire, suffering slight losses. Every man has stood the test well, and all are eager to have their chance in a more extensive engagement, although time is not allowed to hang heavily on their hands.

Few American boys are seen idling anywhere, except between drills in the villages. They have been quick to learn their way about this country of winding roads, and sometimes give better directions to motor car drivers than do the peasants.

The dispatch riders appear to have mastered the difficult road system, judging from the speed with which they cover the highways. They are seen at all hours of the day, and are heard at all hours of the night rushing along at top speed, rarely stopped by an obstacle, slipping in and out, and squeezing through seemingly impossible spaces in the congested traffic. Yet few accidents are reported.

252 PLANES IN A WEEK.

That Was the Total "Bag" of Allied Aviators Up to May 23.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Two hundred and fifty-two German airplanes were brought down on the Western front by allied aviators in the week ending May 23, according to advices received today by the British Military Mission.

LONDON, May 29.—British aerial operations are described in an official communication tonight as follows:

Our airplanes dropped twenty-five tons of bombs during the day on hostile billets, dumps, and railways behind the enemy's lines on all parts of the British front.

Thirteen German machines were destroyed in air fighting, and four others were brought down out of control. Five of ours are missing.

Bombing was continued on the night of Tuesday. Five tons of bombs were dropped on various targets, including billets at Armentières and the Valenciennes Railway Station. One of our night bombing machines failed to return.

On Wednesday a number of long-distance day bombing machines attacked Thionville. They dropped a ton of bombs with good effect on the station and sidings. At the same time other machines bombed the railway and barracks at Mets-Sablons. In spite of hostile attacks from the air and ground all the machine returned.

French Soldiers on Leave Made Unsuspecting Agents of Espionage Till They Were Barred.

By JULIUS WEST.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company. Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, May 29.—A leading citizen of Geneva told me today of some of the difficulties encountered in maintaining Swiss neutrality in the face of German encroachments. Germany has spared no pains to make Switzerland a base of operations, military, commercial, and political, and an example of each type may be instructive.

French soldiers often used to spend their leave with relatives in Geneva, where there is an important French colony. German agents used to ask these soldiers, under various pretexts, to take letters through into French territory where they were posted. Similarly, soldiers coming to spend their leave here were often asked to bring letters across the frontier. In this way unsuspecting soldiers were frequently the bearers of apparently perfectly innocent epistles which were really communications of German agents. The Swiss naturally objected to their territory being used as a base for espionage, and now decline to admit men on leave.

Enemy agents also used Switzerland as a base for distributing German goods in allied countries. These goods were sometimes marked with imitations of British and French trademarks. In some cases Germans established fictitious Swiss companies to act as a cover for the distribution of German goods by acquiring the right to use Swiss trademarks. This now is also prohibited.

The most subtle and difficult to fight of all her methods of propaganda is Germany's attempt to control the Swiss press. This is especially dangerous in view of the fact that many French-Swiss papers are widely read in France. An organization has been formed with headquarters at Zurich with this object. A favorite method is to place advertisements of German firms, offering generous rates of payment, but on condition that the paper receiving these advertisements shall also print articles supplied by the organization which are naturally pro-German in tone.

Papers which once allow themselves to step into the spider's parlor struggle in vain to get back their independence. By some occult means, they find, the German organization gradually acquires ever a stronger hold upon their advertisement revenues. The organization puts forward useful suggestions, all tending to save money. It will supply news copy of everything, and every bit of assistance so liberally forthcoming means the surrender of the papers' political independence more completely into the hands of Germany.

Papers which resist find themselves hindered at every step, especially if they are at all influential. Germans buy up any shares which happen to come on the market. They buy up the printers. They stop German sales by forbidding the paper to enter Germany. They may subsidize, or even establish, rival organs, and they manage in one way or another very effectively to interfere with the advertisement revenue. The struggle which pro-ally papers, such as the Journal de Genève, have maintained during nearly four years to preserve their independence can easily be described as heroic.

SWISS DEMAND REPARATION.

U-Boat Commander Ordered to Report on Sardinero Sinking.

BERNE, May 29.—The German submarine which sank the steamer Sardinero last February has returned to a German base, and her commander has been ordered to make a full report of the occurrence.

Switzerland demands restitution in kind of the cargo of wheat which went down with the ship.

The Sardinero was a Spanish steamer which was probably chartered by the Swiss Government for the transport of food supplies.

TURKS OCCUPY KIRKUK.

Report British Column in Mesopotamia Withdrawing Southward.

LONDON, May 29.—A Turkish official communication received here today says:

"On the Irak front the Turkish left wing has occupied Kirkuk, the British withdrawing southward."

A Reuter dispatch from Moscow says that, previous to occupying Alexandropol, Armenia, from which they are moving toward Julfa, a suburb of Ispahan, the Turks asked the Transcaucasian Government to permit the passage of troops to Persia to be employed against the British. The Government refused the request.

The Armenians suffered heavily in the fighting at Alexandropol, says the dispatch, which adds that the Turks are also reported to have occupied Erivan.

NEW GUNS BOMBARD PARIS.

Shells Are Slightly Larger Than in Previous Attacks.

PARIS, May 29.—The long-range bombardment of Paris began again early this morning.

Examination of the shells discharged by the Germans since the resumption of the bombardment indicates that new guns are being used. Larger shells are being employed than formerly, the calibre of the guns being 24 centimeters (9½ inches) instead of 21.

The powder charge is greater and the detonation louder, but the force of the explosion does not seem to have increased. A shell exploded yesterday only a dozen yards from a man seated on a bench and did not injure him.

BROOKLYN SOLDIER DEAD.

D. S. Thompson Succumbs in France to Spinal Meningitis.

Mrs. Margaret F. Thompson of 821 Putnam Avenue, Brooklyn, has received word that her son, Douglas S. Thompson, a private in Company H, 305th Infantry, has died in France of spinal meningitis. Thompson, who was formerly employed as a bookkeeper by the National City Bank, Manhattan, was a graduate of the Commercial High School, Brooklyn. He went to Camp Upton in December, and left for France in April.

Private Louis Epstein, mentioned in yesterday's casualty list as having returned to his company, after being reported missing, is 23 years old and a son of Morris Epstein of 125 Siegel Street, Brooklyn. He is a member of the motor truck force. The father received a letter from his son three weeks ago, which, he thinks, explains why Louis was at first reported missing. The writer stated that when operating his truck on a lonely road there was a breakdown, and he remained with the truck for thirty-six hours. When he was picked up by a detachment of Americans, the officers thought that he was a German. It was four days before he succeeded in establishing his identity and was returned to his company.

FLUSHING MAN DECORATED.

A. E. MacDougall's Bravery Won the French War Cross.

Edward E. MacDougall of 21 Broadway, Flushing, L. I., Vice President of the Queensboro Corporation, has received a letter from his son, Sergeant Albert E. MacDougall, telling how he won the Croix de Guerre. The citation, as translated, reads:

"MacDougall, Albert E., Sergeant, first class, having accomplished with energy and admirable self-sacrifice, without rest, day and night, from the 25th to 30th March, 1918, having directed the ambulance drivers in his command on these missions under bombardment and the heavy fire of machine guns."

The Sergeant served with the French Army at Verdun and in the Aisne and Chemin des Dames sectors. He went to France as a volunteer member of the Harvard unit of the American Field Service, and when the Government took it over, volunteered as a member of the new Unit 642.

FIGHT FOR LOYAL CONGRESS

Security League to Scrutinize Records of Candidates.

Details of the country-wide prosecution of its campaign to insure the election of a loyal "War Congress" this Fall were discussed yesterday by the Executive Committee of the National Security League at a meeting held at the Bankers' Club. It was decided that all of the 281 branches in the country, with a membership of 100,000, be immediately instructed to exert every effort to bring about the nomination of men for Congress who will give assurance of active support in the aggressive prosecution of the war.

Franklin Remington, Secretary of the league, was authorized to lay before a list of selected men the proposition of creating support of the campaign outside the league by an active propaganda in every State of the Union.

A resolution was passed urging the Committee on Privileges and Elections to act speedily on the case of Senator La Follette. Dr. Robert M. McElroy, Educational Director of the league, reported that he had enlisted the co-operation of 200 of the leading educators of the country for the conduct of the "Teachers' Plattsburgs" at the principal Summer schools in the country in the Summer months. The plan, it is said, will provide practical instruction in patriotic education to approximately 200,000 public school teachers.

HUNT FOR MORE SLACKERS.

District Attorney Raids Pool Rooms on the East Side.

Under directions of District Attorney Swann, Assistant District Attorney James E. Smith and Frederick W. Whitin, Secretary of the Committee of Fourteen, started at 10 o'clock last night to make a roundup of draft slackers. The group proceeded to the lower east side and stopped at the Clinton Street Police Station, where they were joined by Lieutenant Bolger and a squad of detectives.

They went to a poolroom at 102 Rivington Street, where twenty young men were congregated, and twelve received subpoenas to appear in the District Attorney's office next Tuesday morning. They visited another poolroom at 112 Rivington Street, where fifteen got subpoenas out of thirty persons. Then they went to another poolroom at 124 Rivington Street and issued twenty papers.

The raids attracted a large crowd and many young men were noticed among them. Mr. Smith ordered the police to round up all of them and bring them back to the poolroom at 124 Rivington Street, where, after an examination, many were subpoenaed.

The raiding party then proceeded to another poolroom at 185 Chrystie Street, where twenty young men were gathered, and ten of them were given subpoenas. It was expected that hundreds of young men will be given subpoenas to appear before the District Attorney on next Tuesday for examination.

WANT GUARD UNIT INTACT.

Minnesota, Iowa, and Nebraska Object to Splitting 34th Division.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Governors of Minnesota, Nebraska, and Iowa called on Secretary Baker today to protest against orders for the transfer of 5,000 National Guardsmen from the 34th Division to fill up another organization about to go overseas. They urged that the State units in the 34th be allowed to remain intact.

The Governors said they did not want to interfere if military exigencies demanded the transfer, but suggested that, if possible, the men needed be drawn from the National Army or from new organizations of regulars. Mr. Baker instructed General March, Chief of Staff, to comply with the request if possible.

Inquires About "Free Energy."

WASHINGTON, May 29.—An inquiry was directed today from Secretary Lane's office to Garabed T. K. Giragossian of Boston to determine what progress he was making in the demonstration of his "free energy" invention to experts, as authorized by Congress.

PROMISES TO THE GERMANS

Will Protect Their "Rights and Development"—Fear of Outbreaks in Vienna.

By JULIUS WEST.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company. Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, May 29.—Reports received from Vienna indicate that Emperor Charles, in spite of his desire for peace, is not prepared to allow any change in the internal policy of Austria in regard to the subject nationalities.

On Sunday the Emperor received, in the presence of the Premier, several deputations from the Western provinces of Austria. Members of the deputation told the Emperor that the future of Austria was inextricably bound up with the Trieste trade, which is in German hands. Other speakers deprecated the Southern Slav movement.

In replying the Emperor said:

"My Government will always be on the side of those who wish to keep intact the sacred heritage of our glorious past and preserve it intact for future generations."

Other points in his speech laid emphasis on Austria's obligations to Germany.

"Within our national frontiers," he said, "a great and important duty has devolved upon the German people of Austria worthy of the high achievements which they have shown during this war and of which they may be proud in the future. I rely upon the faithful and precious collaboration of the Germans for the development of the interests of the State. Be fully assured that never in any manner whatever will the rights and development of the German inhabitants of Austria be checked."

Perhaps not unconnected with this touching surrender is the news that disturbances have broken out in districts whence came members of these deputations. At Graz and Laibach there have been serious disorders, and it appears that troops have been employed to disperse the crowds. At the same time the disturbances at Prague were renewed, although details are vague.

Persons in Switzerland regarded as being in close touch with Austria are distinctly disturbed by these reports, and are said to regard the spread of the disorders to Vienna as highly probable.

AMERICA FOR SLAV LIBERTY.

Lansing Indorses Aspiration of the Rome Congress.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The United States Government views "with earnest sympathy" the nationalistic aspirations of the Czecho-Slovaks and the Jugo-Slavs, Secretary Lansing said today.

"The Secretary of State desires to announce," said the Secretary in a statement, "that the proceedings of the Congress of Oppressed Races of Austria-Hungary, which was held in Rome in April, have been followed with great interest by the Government of the United States, and that the nationalistic aspirations of the Czecho-Slovaks and the Jugo-Slavs for freedom have the earnest sympathy of this Government."

The announcement was taken as an indorsement of the resolutions adopted by the congress which met in Rome to discuss the liberation of "the oppressed nationalities of Austria-Hungary." These resolutions set forth that each of the peoples proclaimed its right to establish its own nationality and state unity, that each recognized in the Austro-Hungarian monarchy "the instrument of German domination," and that each also recognized the necessity for "a common struggle against the common oppressor."

Another session of the congress will be held in Paris in June.

Welcomed by Colony Here.

The declaration of Secretary Lansing in favor of the nationalistic aspirations of the Czecho-Slovaks and Jugoslavs was received with great satisfaction last night by the New York colonies of naturalized citizens of Czech, Slovak, Slovene, Serb, and Croatian ancestry, who have worked hard and contributed heavily to support the national movements.

These two races have contributed many thousands of soldiers to the armies of the Allies, practically every one of whom is an Austrian subject liable to death for treason, and thousands of their number, it is said, have been put to death by the Austrian and Hungarian military authorities.

The Czecho-Slovaks, including the eight million Czechs under Austrian rule in Bohemia, Moravia, and Austrian Silesia, and the three million Slovaks in the northern part of Hungary, have been the most bitter antagonists of the Austrian Government. An army composed partly of Czecho-Slovak regiments which went over to Russia and partly of Czechs and Slovaks living in Russia when the war broke out did brilliant fighting in the Russian campaigns, and numbered at one time more than 100,000 men.

There is another Czecho-Slovak army in France, and still another has recently been organized in Italy. The political supervision over these troops is in the hands of the Czecho-Slovak National Committee, a revolutionary government of exiles at whose head is Dr. Thomas G. Masaryk, who was in New York last week.

One of the problems of the Allies was the antagonism between the Jugoslavs, inhabiting the Adriatic provinces of Austria, and the Italians, who in their original war aims claimed a large area of Jugoslav territory. This dispute was adjusted at the Congress held in Rome early in April, to which Mr. Lansing alludes, and it had the result of putting Italy at the head of the oppressed nations striving for freedom from Austria. Meanwhile the Poles, who hitherto had usually supported the Germans in Austria, had been driven by German aggression to join the Czechs and Jugoslavs, and with the Italians of Istria and the Rumanians of Transylvania co-operating all the oppressed nations of the Dual Monarchy were for the first time acting together.

SLAVS STARVING GERMANS.

Food Boycott in Austria Critical, Says Stuttgart Paper.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Famine among the Germans of Austria, with the Czechs and Jugo-Slavs keeping their food supplies to themselves, has reached such proportions that the Stuttgart Neues Tageblatt says that the Teutonic Alliance will be threatened unless a remedy is found. An official dispatch from France today quoted that paper as follows:

"Heartrending appeals from our brothers have been reaching us for two weeks. They are starving not only in Western Bohemia, but in Carinthia, Styria, and Tyrol. The fate of the unfortunate Germans in Austria does not arouse enough sympathy in Germany. Many of our compatriots go so far as to say that if the Austrians are starving it is their own fault.

"This policy, which seemed justified at first, is no less dangerous if one considers that Hungary is tightly closed and does not allow anything to go into Austria. On the other hand, the Czechs and Jugo-Slavs keep their food supplies to themselves and refuse to share with the Germans.

"If Germany does not find some remedy for the situation the alliance itself will be threatened."

101 LOST WHEN U-BOAT SINKS A TRANSPORT

The Leasowe Castle Torpedoed in the Mediterranean—Many Officers Drown.

LONDON, May 29.—The transport Leasowe Castle has been sunk by an enemy submarine, the British Admiralty announced tonight. One hundred and one persons were drowned.

The Admiralty statement reads:

"The transport Leasowe Castle was torpedoed and sunk by an enemy submarine May 26 in the Mediterranean. Thirteen military officers and seventy-nine of other ranks, and of the ship's company the Captain, two wireless operators and six of other ratings are missing. It is presumed that all were drowned."

The Leasowe Castle was built in 1917 at Birkenhead and was owned by the Union Castle Mail Steamship Company of London. She was of 9,737 tons gross.

CAPTURE MOUNTAIN 12,000 FEET HIGH

Italians Scale Formidable Barrier Amid Melting Snows and Storm Austrian Defenses.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, May 28, (Associated Press.)—One of the most brilliant mountain operations since the beginning of the war was carried out by the Italians in the Tonale region, northwest of Trent, early this week, particulars regarding which are now being received. The basin of Presena Lake was captured by Italian Alpini after forty hours of fierce fighting against a numerically superior enemy.

The Austrians were well entrenched, having at their disposal strong fortifications built before the beginning of the war and greatly strengthened since then. The great Presena Mountain was reached by the Alpini after attacking four times under a heavy fire. The enemy was finally overwhelmed by a bayonet drive.

The fight was rendered more difficult by the condition of the ground, which was hard and slippery with late Spring snow. The Italians advanced up steep ascents, down precipices and over glaciers.

ROME, May 27.—The brilliant victory of the Italians in the Tonale region was won in fighting on ground about 12,000 feet above the sea, amid melting snows and everlasting glaciers. The battle was remarkable on account of the highly specialized troops engaged and the mechanical devices applied.

The vast wastes of Tonale Mountain, dominating the Camonica Plateau and the approaches to Paradise Pass, had been neglected by both sides as a field for offensive operations, but now becomes more important.

Among the results of the Italian attack were the blowing up by artillery fire of an important Austrian munitions depot and the capture of two telegraph lines which ran through Paradise Pass. The Italians were assisted greatly by a violent artillery fire. It required heroic efforts by the Alpini to carry the guns to the mountain tops.

ROME, May 29.—"At Capo Sile, Monday night, two hostile attacks were broken up in front of our new positions," says the official report from headquarters today. "In the Resena Valley we captured a patrol of thirteen. Other prisoners were taken in the Col Caprille area.

"Enemy detachments were repulsed at Mont Como and Mont Asalone."

VIENNA, May 29, (via London.)—Austrian Headquarters reports today as follows:

In the Tonale region the fighting revived Tuesday. Two Italian attacks, supported by strong artillery and mine fire, against Monticello, south of the pass, broke down. The enemy artillery fire against our positions on the lower course of the Piave continues.

ENGLAND'S CROPS THRIVING.

Highest Acreage of Wheat, Barley, and Oats Ever Recorded.

LONDON, May 29.—The present condition of crops in the United Kingdom is very promising, speaking generally, and gives reasonable hope of at least an average yield, according to an interim report published by the Director General of Food Production today.

It is indicated that the total tillage area in the United Kingdom for the year 1917-1918 will be well over 4,000,000 acres with the highest acreage under wheat, barley, and oats ever recorded in the history of British agriculture. The acreage under potatoes will be the greatest since 1872.

Assuming that after deducting seed and light corn, the entire wheat and barley crop, one-fifth of the oats crop and one-quarter of the potato crop could be made available for bread flour in case of need, these figures mean that the harvest of the United Kingdom in 1918 could provide a forty weeks' supply for the entire population at the present scale of consumption and on the existing basis of milling.

Reckoned in tonnage the net saving in shipping resulting from increased production of corn and potatoes in England and Wales alone should amount in the coming year to 1,500,000 tons.

In the year 1918-1919 the United Kingdom, it is added, will be self-supporting in breadstuffs for four-fifths of the year, as compared with one-quarter of the year in 1917-1918, and only one-fifth of the year in 1916-1917.

THINK ALLIES SURPRISED.

German Observers Believe Foch's Reserves Were Far Away.

COPENHAGEN, May 29.—Military critics in the Berlin press admit they were surprised by the choice of the Chemin des Dames for the new German offensive on the western front and they say it is obvious that the Entente commanders likewise were surprised.

The critics assert that exhausted English divisions recently were assigned to the Champagne positions, obviously to permit them to have needed rest, and the commentators are jubilant over the assumption that the reserves of General Foch are far away. The German newspapers give alleged statements of British and French prisoners, admitting their surprise was complete.

Berlin newspapers seem to have been given orders to tone down their war enthusiasm, says the Amsterdam correspondent of The Daily Express, reporting on German comment. The Kölnische Volkszeitung says of the fighting:

"Our new success shows us again how justified is our confidence in our great leaders. It would be premature to draw final conclusions, but it is enough for the German people to know that its confidence in the spirit of the troops can never be disappointed."

DECRY ALLIED AID IN RUSSIAN PRESS

Intervention Might Turn Out Ill for Russia, and Would Not Hurt Germany.

BOLSHEVIST ORGAN'S VIEW

No Help Desired Which Would Result in Russia Re-entering the War, Says Izvestia.

MOSCOW, May 25—(Associated Press.)—The press is giving a great deal of attention to the suggestion of allied intervention in Russia, and bourgeois as well as Bolshevist newspapers are unanimous in expressing opposition. They say the occupation of a part of Siberia would not be disadvantageous for the Germans and might turn out badly for Russia.

The Svoboda Rossii, a Constitutional Democratic newspaper, reiterates its declaration of some time ago that intervention is undesirable and that foreign assistance for Russia in this form would run counter to the normal national sense. It adds:

"We are still opposed in principle to foreign intervention and all that it would be bound to involve, just as we are opposed to intervention by the Germans."

Other newspapers speak in similar vein. The Zaria Rossii, also Constitutional Democratic, says in discussing the military agreement concluded between Japan and China:

"It would be short-sighted not to perceive that here are new dangers for us, and it would be failing to perform our duty to the country to pass by these dangers in silence."

Russia is fully aware of the dangers threatening her from German imperialism, says the Bolshevist organ Izvestia in an article in which it asserts that no allied help is desired of a nature which would result in Russia re-entering the European conflict. It adds, however:

"Let some power honestly help us combat successfully the threatening danger. Russia would appreciate in the highest degree any assistance toward the improvement of transportation and communication facilities and the cleansing of her economic life. * * * If the Allies really wish, rather than to drag Russia into the war for purely strategic reasons, to give her practical help in her tragic situation, let them discuss, to the exclusion of every other subject, her urgent need of economic aid."

OFFICERS QUIT FINN ARMY.

General Mannerheim and Others Object to Its Germanization.

STOCKHOLM, May 29.—The new Finnish Cabinet formed by former Senator Paaskivi indicates increased German influence in the Finnish Government, and has resulted in a further request by General Mannerheim, commander of the Finnish troops, demanding that his resignation be accepted. The General is opposed to German intervention and the Germanization of the Finnish army.

Colonel Vostesieff, the new War Minister, is working in close connection with German headquarters. It is believed that a number of Swedish officers now serving in the Finnish army will follow General Mannerheim into retirement.

Finnish White Guards are now pressing the Murman Railway hard at many points with German support, but have been successively repulsed by Red Guards. The Finnish Government is strongly urging that the Karelia Government, in which Murman is situated, be annexed to Finland.

The Soviet Government declares that it is not willing that Russia should be wholly at Germany's mercy.

MOSCOW, May 24, (Associated Press.)—The Germans are laying a railway from the Finnish frontier to Petchenga Bay on the Mourmansk coast, according to an Archangel dispatch to the Nashe Slovo.

WANT JOFFE EXPELLED.

German Papers Don't Like Russian Envoy's Undiplomatic Methods.

LONDON, May 29.—A dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph from Amsterdam says:

"Although he explained to Dr. Richard von Kühlmann, the German Foreign Secretary, that the handing of a Russian official memorandum, destined for the Foreign Office, to the Socialist newspaper Vorwärts before it reached the Foreign Office was due to the error of a secretary, who was dismissed, it is understood that Adolf Joffe, Russian Ambassador to Germany, intends always to hand documents to the press when he believes it is to the interest of the German Government to keep them secret.

"The German newspapers are demanding that his passports be handed to M. Joffe."

CHINA PROTESTS TO JAPAN.

Objects to Transfer by Russia of Part of Eastern Railway.

PEKING, May 24, (Associated Press.)—The Chinese Ambassador at Tokio has been instructed to protest to the Japanese Government against the transfer to Japan by Russia of a section of the Chinese Eastern Railway near the Sungari River.

An official announcement from Tokio received in Washington last Nov. 3 said Japan and the Russian Government, then under control of Premier Kerensky, had agreed to the purchase by Japan of a section of the Chinese Eastern Railway, between Kwan Chengtse, near Chang Chun, in Manchuria, and the Sungari River.

40 Victims in Russian Explosion.

MOSCOW, May 27, (Associated Press.)—Forty persons were killed or injured and damage amounting to 30,000,000 rubles was done through an explosion and fire on a munition train at Kazan Station, in the Volga region, recently. The train, filled with munitions for the southern front, blew up with a series of detonations after it had caught fire. Seven warehouses and 350 railway cars, many of them loaded with merchandise, were burned.

Mme. Botchkarova in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Mme Maria Botchkarova, former commander of the Russian regiment of women known as the "Battalion of Death," was in Washington today. She called on Secretaries Lansing and Baker. At the State Department it was said she was seeking aid for Russia, but officials did not say what kind of aid, whether military, political, or financial.

FINNS STOP SWEDISH SHIPS.

Vessels Held Up at Helsingfors for Search by Germans.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

COPENHAGEN, May 28. — Swedish steamers leaving Stockholm on Wednesday for Petrograd, after a long interruption of direct traffic between Sweden and Russia, were stopped at Helsingfors by the Finnish authorities.

A special dispatch to the Berlingske Tidende now discloses that the reason for their detention is that the Germans wanted to search the steamers.

JAPAN READY TO HELP IN SIBERIAN POLICY

Compensation Depends on Circumstances, Says Goto—He Denies Pro-German Leanings.

LONDON, Thursday, May 30.—The Daily Mail today publishes from its Tokio correspondent an interview with the Japanese Foreign Minister, Baron Shimpei Goto, which discusses Japan's good faith toward the Allies and the pro-Germanism attributed to Baron Goto in some quarters.

The interview is mainly concerned with the prospects of Japanese intervention in Siberia. Baron Goto said that the Allies had made no formal proposal to Japan for such intervention, but that any suggestions by the Allies would receive sympathetic consideration.

Asked what compensation Japan would demand for intervention, Baron Goto replied that this would depend on varying circumstances—the size of the army, the extent of the theatre of operations, and the like.

"But at the present moment," the Foreign Minister said, "we are not thinking of compensation, but only of everything for the allied cause, which we have faithfully made our own."

Concerning the relations of Japan with the United States, Baron Goto said that since the steel difficulty had been settled Japan no longer had any cause for complaint.

Coming to the question of accusations of his alleged pro-Germanism, Baron Goto spoke as follows:

"I stayed in Germany for many years and studied there, and people may think me pro-German. I am not pro-German at all. I am not anti-English. I am Japanese, sharing the national views regarding our international relationship."

Baron Goto expressed the fear that the war might be protracted, but he was confident of an allied victory. He said that the Allies never had asked Japan to send troops to the western front.

BIG TREASON TRIAL STARTS IN ROME

Cotton Manufacturers and Others Accused of Selling Materials to Germany.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

MILAN, May 29.—The high treason case against the Como and Cornigliano cotton factories opened before the Rome court-martial today. That a serious view of the matter is taken by the Italian Government is shown by the fact that the State constituted itself civil prosecutor for damages to its patrimony. This may mean the wholesale confiscation of the property of the accused if they are found guilty.

Karl Bianchi, proprietor of the Como establishment, was acquitted at the earlier stage of the proceedings on the ground of insufficient proof, but his wife, Rosa, a woman of German origin, stands in the dock, as does also Commendatore Attilio Pirotta, the co-proprietor. Other prisoners are Arthur Schweiger, Rodolf Durst, a Swiss, and Managing Director of the Cornigliano works; Giovanni Verga, the firm's commercial traveler, and Captain Robert Frigerio, an Italian infantry officer, who appeared in court in uniform and bearing on his breast the silver medal for merit won during the present war. The seventh defendant, a Swiss named Braum, escaped to Zurich.

All were charged with having combined in offering and selling to the Central Empires immense quantities of cotton goods and shredded waste, via Switzerland, and with having persisted in this traffic from the very outbreak of the Italian war right down to the end of last year, in full knowledge that the material supplied was intended to be used in the manufacture of munitions. The indictment occupied nearly two hours in reading.

RUSHING LIBERTY MOTORS.

1,000th Is Shipped by Detroit Company on Anniversary.

DETROIT, May 29.—The one thousandth Liberty airplane engine produced by a local motor company was shipped from the factory here today, just a year from the day when the blueprints of the parts which form the Liberty motor design were sent to Washington. Production of the Liberty engine, it was announced, is going forward rapidly.

The Packard Company, first to get into production, is turning out twenty-five motors a day. The Lincoln Motor Company is completing ten a day, with a much larger output immediately in sight. The Ford Motor Company, which has made thousands of the cylinders for both Packard and Lincoln, is on the eve of producing motors in quantity. The Marmon Company also is about to enter production.

KAISER PREDICTS FURTHER PROGRESS

Telegraphs Kaiserin It Was a Splendid Victory—Gives Credit to Crown Prince.

AMSTERDAM, May 29.—Emperor William, who is on the field of battle south of Laon, on the Aisne front, has sent the following telegram to the Empress, at Potsdam:

"William [apparently Crown Prince Frederick William] has today attacked the British and French on the Chemin des Dames. The strongly consolidated height, after being subjected to mighty artillery fire, has been stormed by our glorious infantry. We have crossed the Aisne and are approaching the Vesle.

"Fritz, with the First Guards Infantry Division, was one of the first to reach the Aisne. [Possibly referring to another Prince.] The Twenty-eighth Division also has again distinguished itself. The British and French were completely surprised. Our losses are small. Tomorrow we shall make further progress.

"God has granted us a splendid victory and will help further. Greetings."

MOVE FOR COMPROMISE ON PRUSSIAN REFORM

Plural Vote for Men Over 40 and Owners of Businesses Reported to be Agreed On.

COPENHAGEN, May 29.—The Berlin Tägliche Rundschau says it learns from a reliable source that a compromise has been reached on the Prussian franchise reform measure after a conference of the Conservatives, Free Conservatives, and National Liberals.

The compromise, the newspaper says, contemplates general direct and equal franchise, except that one additional vote is to be granted to electors over 40 years of age and a second additional vote to electors having their own businesses—that is to say, excluding all persons who are employed by others.

The newspaper asserts that the passage of the measure in this form is believed to be assured.

TEUTON HOPES IN AFRICA.

Colonies There Essential to Prosperity, Says Westphalian Paper.

LONDON, May 29.—The Westphalia Gazette, according to the Amsterdam correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company, urges that Germany begin a campaign in favor of colonial expansion in which Austria-Hungary will benefit, especially by acquisitions of territory in northern Africa. The newspaper is quoted as saying:

"Unless Germany and Austria acquire large colonies as the result of this war their future will depend solely on the good pleasure of England and America."

Protest Bavarian Suffrage Action.

AMSTERDAM, May 29.—Advices received here say that the Socialist Deputies from Bavaria absented themselves from the court functions held in connection with the celebration of the centennial of the Bavarian Constitution, as a rebuke for the failure to pass the equal suffrage measure.

A Problem!!

RECENTLY we advertised Norfolk Suits for Boys, at $9.75, as being all wool.

A few days later a competitor contended that they were not all wool, for which we thank him.

Under date of May 17th, the American Woolen Company advised us that the fabrics in question are all wool.

A leading laboratory in this city, after an exhaustive test, reported they are 98% wool and silk, and about 2% cotton.

If any patron who bought one of these suits is dissatisfied, we will gladly take it back and refund in full.

CONGRESS PLANS VACATION IN JULY

Hopes to Take a Recess While House Committee Is Framing War Revenue Bill.

KITCHIN SETS TAX HEARING

Committee to Begin Its Work on June 6 and Will Welcome All Testimony on Increases.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Adjournment of Congress for a Summer vacation from the latter end of June to Aug. 1 seemed, today, to be probable. Leaders in the House and Senate favor the scheme, which comprehends having the House Ways and Means Committee, during the holiday period, draft the War Revenue bill so as to have it ready for debate in the House not later than Aug. 1.

There is no legislation pending to interfere with a recess toward the end of June. The only war measures now before the House are the General Deficiency, the Sundry Civil, and the Fortifications Appropriation bills. These, it is calculated, can be put through within the next two weeks. The General Deficiency bill, the most important of the three measures, presents no perplexing legislative problems, the Deficiency bill, recently passed by both branches having cleared up difficulties that otherwise would have weighted the former measure.

The Senate has ahead of it, besides the three measures pending in the House, the Army Appropriation bill and the District of Columbia Appropriation bill, both of which are ready for action.

Unless the Administration has other measures, of which Congressional leaders have not been apprised, all the war legislation in sight, it is believed, can be disposed of easily by June 25, or even earlier. In that event nothing would stand in the way of a recess adjournment of both Houses by the latter part of next month. This would give Congress four or five weeks of rest.

The Senate might remain in recess until the middle of August to allow the House to consider the War Revenue bill. It is believed the revenue measure could be disposed of by Oct. 1, in which event Congress could have another holiday, running past the November election. But of this there is no certainty and leaders are not counting on it.

Senator Martin, Chairman of the Appropriations Committee, conferred today with various leaders on the proposal for adjournment toward the end of June. The idea met with support.

"I think Congress will get at least a month off before Aug. 1," said Senator Martin, after his conference. "A little respite, if it can be arranged, might expedite passage of the Revenue bill later on."

Chairman Kitchin of the House Ways and Means Committee made known today the rule under which interested persons would be allowed to appear for or against items in the Revenue bill. They indicate an intention to give force to President Wilson's remark that the light of publicity will fall on men who seek private advantage in the framing of the act.

Agents for industrial concerns and groups will be welcomed by the committee, but they must be prepared, said Mr. Kitchin, to present their case to Congress in an entirely aboveboard manner.

"The Committee on Ways and Means wishes to announce to all concerned that it will hold public hearings at Washington, beginning June 6, 1918.

"It is deemed necessary largely to increase the revenue from taxation. It seems to the committee that it will be necessary to raise the necessary revenue chiefly from taxes upon incomes, luxuries, and semi-luxuries.

"In the preparation of the new war tax the committee will give careful consideration to all suggestions with reference to the measure, together with suggestions of other revenue sources.

"In order to avoid duplication of argument and suggestions, it is requested that persons having the same problem to present will agree upon one representative to present their views.

"The hearings will be conducted in the Hearing Room of the committee, 301 House Office Building. Persons desiring to be heard should, if possible, apply to the clerk of the committee previous to the date set for the hearings, for an assignment of time. In making such application, the following information should be given:

"Name business address, temporary address in Washington, business or occupation, and the person, firm, corporation, or association represented, subject concerning which testimony will be given and the amount of time desired.

"All briefs filed with the committee should have indorsed on them the name and address of the person submitting them, his business or occupation, and the name of the person, firm, corporation or association he represents."

Mr. Kitchin gave the impression that his committee would want to know all about the men who appeared either before it or who sought the support of members of Congress privately in pressing their views of taxation. Mr. Kitchin was asked if there were any possibility of the so-called Congressional Lobby Committee being revived, but he said he thought that the information furnished in response to the questions contained in his statement would be sufficient.

CURB ON PRICE OF ICE.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Federal Food Administrators for States and their aids concluded a two days' conference at the Food Administration offices tonight, and most of them left for home to resume their task of enforcing food conservation regulations in the light of explanations of disputed points by Administration officials.

Among other things the State officers were cautioned particularly to permit no increase in ice prices this Summer unless the producer can prove beyond question that an advance is necessary. They were told that the new rule permitting manufacturers of essential food products, including ice cream, to buy 100 per cent. of their sugar requirements should be interpreted to mean that all sugar legitimately needed may be purchased without regard to the amount used in 1917.

Administrators of the Southeastern States and Porto Rico will meet tomorrow to discuss the molasses and syrup situation.

CORPUS CHRISTI AIR TRUCE.

Britain Accedes to Cologne Cardinal's Request Through Vatican.

LONDON, May 29.—The British Government has consented, on religious and humane grounds, that so far as it is concerned there shall be no air raids on cities not in the vicinity of the battlefront during the daytime tomorrow, the Feast of Corpus Christi.

This decision followed the receipt through the Vatican of the request recently made by the Archbishop of Cologne, Cardinal von Hartmann, that, in view of the serious damage done lately by British air raids in that city, there should be no bombing there during the time of the Corpus Christi procession.

WAR BILL THIS MONTH ABOVE $1,500,000,000

Takes a Jump of $300,000,000 —Cost Between July 1 and End of Year Put at $11,000,000,000.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Government war expenses, including loans to the Allies, will run above $1,500,000,000 this month and set a new high record for any belligerent nation. Expenditures reported today by the Treasury show that the Government's outlays in the last month have taken a jump of more than $300,000,000 above the normal rate in the past, and they promise to go steadily higher in the next six months.

Tentative estimates now are that $11,000,000,000 will be spent between July 1, the opening of the new fiscal year, and Dec. 31, and the greater part of this must be raised by the Fourth Liberty Loan in October or November, which President Wilson in his revenue address before Congress, explained would be bigger than any of the others. More than $23,000,000,000 will be spent by the Government in the next fiscal year, nearly twice as much as in the year ending a month from Friday. This figure is based on the belief that after monthly expenditures reach $2,000,000,000 they will be limited by the output of American industries and the carrying capacity of available ocean tonnage.

These calculations may be modified from time to time. Treasury officials explain, in keeping with the progress in the industrial development of the country and the shipping program, but in providing in advance for revenue to meet the huge war expenses Congress will be called on to consider the maximum obligations that the Government may be required to meet.

Examination today of recent expenses showed that so-called ordinary expenditures for May, including practically all outlays of the Government except loans to Allies, would be above $1,100,000,000 for the first time in history, running to approximately $1,067,000,000. Actual payments to the Allies during the month are set at about $450,000,000, about $100,000,000 more than in any previous month this year, but somewhat less than most of the Fall and Winter months last year. The increase was interpreted as an indication that shipping facilities were becoming better, since the sum which the Allies can spend in this country is limited largely by the amount of war materials they can export. Payments are made only to meet actual needs from time to time.

Another record has been made this month in revenue receipts which will amount to about $650,000,000 by the end of the week, more than in any previous month. About $350,000,000 of this sum came from advance payments of income and excess profits taxes, due on June 15.

LODGE CHAMPIONS CONGRESS INQUIRIES

Object Is Solely to Speed Up War Work, He Says at Brown Commencement.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 29.—"Conditions revealed by the aircraft investigation would not have been so deplorable had it not been for the publishing of information alleged to have been a statement of what had really been accomplished, when the information was only what was hoped to be done," said Senator Lodge of Massachusetts, in addressing the Brown commencement gathering this afternoon. The Senator declared that the work of the various inquiries was not to block progress, but solely to speed up the carrying on of the war.

Senator Lodge told how hard Congress was working on war measures and what the strain was on its members. But, he added, members of Congress felt it was better to wear out than rust out.

"There has been no politics in Congress over any war measure since the country went into the struggle," said Senator Lodge, and added, "there will be none."

Regarding the war revenue legislation the Senator said:

"The President has advanced strong arguments as to why the new measure should be taken up at once. The great responsibility of the war rests upon the Executive. No other individual has so large a share of it. But Congress as a body has equal responsibility with the Executive."

Senator Lodge spoke in defense of the investigations which Congress had made into the ordnance, aircraft, and shipbuilding departments of the Government.

"Have you heard of any investigations or criticisms of our navy?" the Senator asked. "I have heard none. The navy has done extremely well. Secretary Daniels has made no statements to the public of what he hoped to do. He has not said in 1917 what he is going to do in 1918.

"There is no disposition on the part of any one in Congress to do anything but uphold the President and speed the war to a victorious conclusion.

"We must win this war. If we don't life is not worth living."

12TH N. Y. WANTS RECRUITS

Call for Men Over Draft Age to Do Regular Guard Duty.

Colonel H. Rogers Winthrop, commanding the 12th Infantry Regiment, has sent out a call for men over the draft age to enlist in the regiment for active duty in New York State. These men are wanted to fill the ranks of Companies A and B, which have been serving for nearly a year in protecting New York's water supply. With detachments of other regiments these companies have been formed into the 1st Provisional Regiment, which is protecting the water supply and other strategic points in the State.

Many of the men of these companies have been sent over to France, and others are soon going over, leaving gaps in the ranks which it is sought to fill with active and sturdy men over the draft age to fill these important military duties in the State. Men who enlist will be paid $1.25 a day, with good prospects of advancement and higher pay, and will be well fed, clothed, and housed. Applicants for enlistment should report on Monday night at 7:30 at the armory at Sixty-second Street and Columbus Avenue.

ASSAILS OUR GERMAN PRESS

R. G. Paterson Says von Kuhlmann Boasted of Its Value to Germany.

A patriotic meeting under the auspices of the American Defense Society, 44 East Twenty-third Street, will be held tonight in the Flushing High School, Flushing, L. I. Music will be furnished by the Community Chorus, and the principal speakers will be Cleveland Moffett and Robert G. Paterson, Field Secretary of the Y. M. C. A., who has been invalided home to recover from a gas attack which swept over the American first line trenches a month ago.

Mr. Paterson, who is a cousin of Ambassador Sharpe, discussing the work of the German language press, urged its suppression in this country. He said that more than ten years ago von Kühlmann, German Foreign Minister, declared that he could control America through the relations of the Berlin press and German-American newspapers. The George Huntsman Post, G. A. R., will attend the meeting in a body.

KITCHIN'S CHARGES SCOUTED BY GLASS

President of Publishers Association Denies That Newspapers Maintained a Lobby.

McANENY ISSUES REPLY

Both Assert That Association's Arguments Were Made Openly Before Senate Committee.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Frank P. Glass, President of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, issued a statement here tonight answering and emphatically denying the assertion in the House yesterday by Representative Kitchin of North Carolina that a newspaper lobby, seeking modification or repeal of the new second class postage zone rates, was responsible for the Administration's insistence that Congress remain in session this Summer to enact revenue legislation.

"The newspapers of the country have not maintained a lobby here," Mr. Glass said. "The American Newspaper Publishers Association, for which I may speak, did not reconcile the differences among its members on this second class postage oppression until the last week of April. I then appointed a committee of representative publishers to come here and to work for relief. A number came early in this month and left after a few days.

"That committee went openly to the Senate, where a Post Office Appropriation bill was pending, and obtained open hearings from the Post Office Committee, when they presented their arguments frankly and forcefully in the presence of the First Assistant Postmaster General. They made a plea, either for amendment of the new law so that it would be just, fair and workable, or in case there was not time for investigation before July 1, for a suspension of the law until such a new measure could be matured. They made a favorable impression upon that committee, and I believe that the Senate is willing today to undo the injustice for which the Chairman of the Senate Committee on Finance, Mr. Simmons, made a sort of apology last Fall when he made the Conference Committee report.

"Neither the Chairman of the Publishers' Postal Committee nor I has ever asked Mr. Kitchin or the Post Office Committee for any hearing in the House, and so far as I know no member of the committee has approached the House leader in any official way. When the proper time should come, it has been the plan to ask the House Post Office or Ways and Means Committee for the same sort of open hearing obtained in the Senate.

"It is interesting to see how frantic Mr. Kitchin's zeal is in this matter. However, he is in a poor position to cry out against secrecy or undue influence, when it is a matter of record that one of the most oppressive portions of the new second-class postage law, viz., that providing a special tax on the advertising sections of newspapers and magazines, was not in the original Revenue bill as passed by either house. It was sneaked into the Conference Committee's report, without a hearing from those whom it is to repress, and without discussion in either house. It is well understood that Mr. Kitchin had a large hand in that indefensible course.

"I have not seen Secretary McAdoo about this matter, nor President Wilson, but I have faith in the great ability of both of them, and in their spirit of justice, and I also have faith in the majority of the very House to which Mr. Kitchin made his hysteric appeal. I am confident that all the true representatives of the people of this country do not want to see the publications unfairly taxed at any time, nor have they any patience with innovations at this juncture, as the people of the country must maintain its highest efficiency in news quality and in circulation, to the end that the morale of the American people be developed to the highest degree."

M'ANENY ANSWERS KITCHIN'S ASSERTION

Chairman of Publishers' Postal Committee Explains Appeal on Zone Law.

George McAneny, Chairman of the Postal Committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, gave out the following statement yesterday in reference to the remarks of Representative Kitchin in the House on Tuesday:

Aside from Mr. Kitchin's intimation that the President and the Secretary of the Treasury, in urging the new Revenue bill, have not been proceeding in good faith, and have actually been serving a 'publishers' plot, and aside from the threat to watch and to discipline the members of the House who may vote for the modification or repeal of the second class postage rates to which the publishers have taken exception, there is a most unwarranted attack on the newspaper publishers themselves. The facts are these:

The postal clause in the War Revenue act of Oct. 3, to which the publishers object, was passed without any public hearing or notice whatsoever and without any other opportunity to the publishing industry of the country to say a word in its own behalf or to discuss the effect of the plan either upon their business or upon newspaper circulation generally. The Senate, in considering the Revenue bill, had rejected all amendments opposing the second class increase. The House passed a bill quite different in form from that eventually enacted. The present scheme was worked out in the conference of the committees of the two houses. There continued to be, however, no outside discussion of the radical changes the bill proposed until the Conference Committee reported. In presenting the Revenue bill in the Senate, Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Finance Committee, referring to the unsatisfactory methods of preparation of the second class postage rates, added that the date of putting them into effect had been deferred until July 1, in order that the matter might be more carefully considered in the interim and a proper bill substituted. That certainly was the implication of his statement, which follows:

"I do not believe that we ought to tax these facilities for the purpose of defraying the expenses of the war. That has been my view all the time. Entertaining that opinion about it, I felt that the adjustment of postal rates was not a matter for the Finance Committee but was a matter for the Post Office Committee. I was glad, therefore, when in conference we were able to write into the compromise a provision now under discussion—the provision that the tax now imposed should not take effect until July, 1918. I trust, Mr. President, that before that time arrives the Post Office Committee will work this matter out in a more satisfactory way than your committee or the conferees have been able to work it out."

Protest by Publishers.

As a matter of fact, the crowding of other things prevented any further consideration of the postal matter in the Senate and permitted very little of it in the House until three or four weeks ago.

The members of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, at their convention in New York City on April 25, after a very full consideration of the situation adopted the following resolution:

"Whereas, the postal provisions of Section 1,101 of the act of Congress, approved Oct. 3, 1917, and which is to take effect July 1, 1918, will be unworkable in practice and most unfair and oppressive to the newspapers of the country and to the reading public;

"Be it Resolved, by the American Newspaper Publishers Association, that Congress, if insistent upon legislation of this character, be urgently requested to modify said law in so far as it applies to newspapers along the general lines as proposed by the McKellar amendment; or if the time be considered by Congress too short to do this, that Congress be urgently requested to suspend the provision of said law, in so far as it applies to newspapers, until a complete and intelligent investigation can be made of the subject of newspaper postage."

This was concurred in the same day by the Southern Publishers Association and the Inland Association, so that it became practically the unanimous expression of the daily press of the country.

A committee of the association went to Washington immediately afterward to ask that the matter be taken up again in Congress, and particularly to ask that hearings be granted before both the Senate and House Postal Committees. The Senate committee held such hearings on April 30 and May 1, opening the way for a very full discussion of the whole subject, the substance of which was printed in the public press. The Publishers Association was represented by its President and by members of its Postal Committee. Apparently the hearings converted the committee, which prepared report an amendment to the Post Office Appropriation bill suspending the operation of the new rates for a year pending further inquiry both as to their fairness and necessity, but which was halted in its purpose on learning that, for both constitutional and parliamentary reasons, such an amendment could be passed only after original passage in the House. In a discussion in the open Senate on May 15 Senator Watson of Indiana said:

"I violate no committee secrets when I say that the majority of the members favor postponing the operation of the law for one year."

It has been the understanding since that further measures for bringing the proposed suspension to a vote would be urged in both the Senate and the House; they naturally will be.

Maintained No Lobby.

Except for the casual presence of their President and committee, for the purposes of the Senate hearings, and the discussion immediately following them, the newspaper publishers have had practically nothing to do with the Congressional situation. They have not "maintained a lobby" or anything in any degree approaching that definition. They have, so far as I know, had nothing whatever to say to Mr. Kitchin. They have endeavored to get the sort of a hearing they were denied in the Fall, and they have secured such hearings in the Senate, as well as the promise of a hearing before the Postal Committee of the House as soon as the Senate had acted. Mr. Kitchin's statements are, in short, in so far as they refer to newspaper publishers, absolutely without truth. If he is objecting to the appearances of their representatives before the Senate Committee and their purpose to submit their views, so far as possible, in the same manner, to the House, his position amounts practically to a denial of the commonest rights of petition possessed by those ordinarily approach Congress in a matter of public interest.

The cry of "subsidies" to newspapers is, of course, raised whenever the matter is mentioned. It has been made clear in the Senate that there is no such subsidy; that the newspapers are merely passing on to their subscribers a part of the postal rate that the Government fixes—in a sense, collecting it for the Government—and that if the rates are raised on the prohibitive scale that the act of Oct. 3 fixes, the increases must also be passed to the subscribers. If there be a loss in the Government's operation that loss would represent the cost of a Government service to the people, and not a subsidy to the newspapers. There is, however, no such loss. The Post Office Department showed a profit over all costs for the last fiscal year of $12,229,000. The business of the department is, of course, developed through the interworking of all classes. The second and third develop business for the first and fourth. Those who pay the so-called "profit" on first-class mail are users of the second, and are, therefore, themselves covering the cost of the service the second-class gives them.

The result of the imposition of the higher rates, as they become gradually effective, can only be the reduction of circulation through the loss of subscribers who cannot pay the mail prices the newspapers would be required to charge. One hesitates to believe that this is a purpose of the supporters of the plan. But, certainly, they can expect no added revenue.

The Post Office Department has estimated that the added revenue from the new scheme during the first year will be $4,900,000, and that of this amount $2,000,000 only will come from the newspapers, or about one-two thousandth of the revenue raised by the act of Oct. 3. And this increase, such as it is, would be offset in turn by added cost of the administration of the new scheme, which is mechanically very much involved and will cost the department a lot, to say nothing of the reduction in gross income due to circulation losses.

It is recognized, in short, in and out of Congress, that the postal clauses of the bill do not belong in a war revenue bill; that they are not going to yield either war revenue or, in the net, any substantial revenue of any sort; that they frankly change the permanent postal system, and that they are intended to cut down the Government's postal business rather than to increase its returns. The Postmaster General, in the Fall, in letters addressed publicly to the Senate and House leaders, objected to the incorporation of the plan in the War Revenue bill on the ground that it should be considered as a permanent measure by the Postal Committees, and passed only after further deliberation.

The present request of the newspaper publishers has been, in effect, that the measure be held until the Postmaster General's original plan may be met, and actual discussion permitted. They have protested, and are still protesting, against the methods and the argument that produced the scheme scheduled to go into effect on July 1; but their representations to members of Congress have been, and will continue to be, made through the legitimate channels Congress has provided.

EXPECT McADOO TO REPLY.

Secretary's Friends Amazed at Kitchin's Implied Reflection.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The statement yesterday of Representative Kitchin, charging that Secretary McAdoo's decision to have a new war revenue bill passed at the current session of Congress was in the interest of publishers who aimed to put an amendment in the bill repealing the zone system of higher postage rates on publications, was not dealt with by Mr. McAdoo today, the Secretary being at White Sulphur Springs recuperating from a recent illness.

Mr. McAdoo met Mr. Kitchin and other Democratic leaders in Congress last week and discussed the matter of preparing a new war revenue measure, but so far as can be learned here nothing passed between them in regard to the motive for the new tax measure such as Mr. Kitchin now suggests. It was said today that Mr. Kitchin's statement was regarded by Mr. McAdoo's friends as a distinct charge against his integrity of purpose in the administration of his office and would be dealt with as susceptible of no other interpretation.

Friends of the Secretary were represented today as saying that they could not understand what Mr. Kitchin was thinking of in making such a statement. They regard it as absurd. THE NEW YORK TIMES was told, that the publishers should conceive a plan of forcing the Administration to enact a new revenue law in order to get the chance to repeal the zone system law by means of a rider on the revenue bill. They also point out that if Mr. Kitchin's charge is true, or has any foundation so far as Mr. McAdoo is concerned, President Wilson is involved also, as he espoused Mr. McAdoo's cause by going to Congress and urging the necessity of passing a new revenue bill—the precise thing that, according to Mr. Kitchin, the designing "publishers' lobby" wants.

A high official of the Treasury Department predicted tonight that the mystery surrounding the Kitchin statement would be cleared within a few days, either by a resounding denial from Mr. McAdoo or more likely by a qualifying statement by Mr. Kitchin. This official took the view that there was no hostility between Secretary McAdoo and the House leader, and the whole matter would be smoothed out satisfactorily to all public interest in it.

FIRST FABRICATED SHIP.

The Agawam, Forerunner of Standardized Fleet, to be Launched Today.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The first standardized fabricated ship built under the direction of the Fleet Corporation will be launched by the Submarine Boat Company at Newark Bay tomorrow. The vessel bears the name Agawam, meaning "great salt meadows," which was selected by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

The ship will have a deadweight carrying capacity of 5,500 tons, and is 343 feet long, beam 46 feet, and tests are expected to show an average speed of 10½ knots. Fuel oil will be used to generate steam to drive a turbine operating 3,600 revolutions a minute. The oil will be carried in compartments of the double bottom of the ship in sufficient quantity for more than a round trip to Europe.

Approximately 27 steel mills, 56 fabricating plants, and 200 foundries and equipment shops were drawn upon to construct the ship. The various steel parts of the vessel's hull and superstructure were fabricated as completely as practicable in structural steel shops throughout the country and then were assembled at the Newark Bay shipyard.

The program of the Submarine Corporation, as outlined by the Emergency Fleet Corporation, calls for 150 vessels of the size and type of the Agawam. It is expected the others of the class will be constructed in even shorter time than was the one to leave the ways tomorrow. Twenty-eight shipways have been completed at the Newark Bay plant.

ROTTERDAM, May 29.—The Dutch liner Nieuw Amsterdam will soon sail for the United States with a contingent of Dutch passengers for the Dutch East Indies.

Passage has been booked by a score of American citizens, whose sailing has been a subject of protracted negotiations with Germany. Late last night it was still uncertain whether the Americans would be permitted to embark.

NAVY MAN INDICTED FOR FOOD HOARDING

Medical Director Nash Had Tons of Food Supplies Stored in His Home.

WIFE IS ACCUSED ALSO

She Inherited a Legacy and Couple Invested Heavily to Forestall Any Food Shortage.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Indictments were returned by a Federal Grand Jury here today against Medical Director Francis Smith Nash, U. S. N., and his wife, Caroline Nash, charging them with violation of Section 6 of the Food Control act in having large quantities of flour, sugar, and other foodstuffs in their possession, to the value of $1,-923.36.

In a statement issued by the Food Administration it was alleged that the food hoarded was sufficient to maintain the family for more than a year and hence far in excess of the requirements for thirty days, the period recognized by Food Administrator Hoover as a "reasonable one" for residents of cities.

This is the first indictment for individual food hoarding, it was said at the Food Administration, that has been brought since the food control law was enacted.

The case attracted much interest here because of the prominence of Dr. and Mrs. Nash in naval and social circles. The only comment of the Food Administration was that its officers were ready at all times to proceed against hoarders, regardless of their social standing, and that the charge would be followed to the end. It is understood that bail in the case of Dr. and Mrs. Nash will be fixed at $3,000 each. They will appear in court tomorrow morning to answer to the charge, it was said tonight.

Dr. and Mrs. Nash have a beautiful home at 1723 Q Street, Northwest. It was said that when officials of the Food Administration visited it they found conditions which seemed to indicate that it had been turned into a storehouse for many foodstuffs which Food Administrator Hoover had believed might run short because of the war conditions.

Among other things, it was alleged that Dr. and Mrs. Nash had stored at their home and in a garage 10 barrels and 375 pounds of flour; 2,200 pounds, or more than a ton, of granulated sugar; 595 pounds of brown sugar, 637 pounds of Domino sugar, 122 pounds of ham, 185 pounds of strip bacon, 387 tins of sliced bacon, 67 tins of roast beef, 58 tins of corned beef, large quantities of olive oil, 138 cans of sardines, 77 cans of salmon, 35 cans of molasses, 5 cans of German sausage, hundreds of cans of soup and baked beans, 176 cans of asparagus, a number of bottles of anchovies and Russian caviar, 188 pounds of coffee, 353 pounds of rice, jelly sufficient for many months, about 200 pounds of salt, 30 pounds of gumdrops and 20 pounds of chocolates, 34 dozen jars of orange marmalade, and many other supplies.

Two bottles of cordial, a case of champagne, a case of Italian wines, six quarts of whisky, forty-eight quarts of California brandy, and eighty-four quarts of sherry also were found along with more than ample supplies of tea and coffee.

In connection with the raid, which was conducted by local Administrator Wilson, the Food Administrator issued an official statement which said:

"The Medical Director has admitted his violation. He said that in 1914 his wife inherited a legacy. With his knowledge of probable conditions that would follow a prolonged war, he foresaw a scarcity of food. So, since the outbreak of war, he has been investing his own and Mrs. Nash's money in foodstuffs, storing them in his house against possible years of great food shortage.

"Dr. Nash endeavored to dispose of part of his hoard after reading on the front page of a Washington newspaper a warning against hoarding, issued some time ago by Mr. Wilson. He told Mr. Wilson that he had sent several barrels of flour to a Washington grocer, selling one and instructing the grocer to hold the remainder until he should give instructions to distribute it among the poor. When Mr. Wilson asked for an explanation, Dr. Nash said he was holding it for charitable purposes. When asked if he had additional supplies in his home, Dr. Nash admitted that he had.

It is understood that Mr. Wilson was informed by a friend that he could tell him where ten barrels of flour were being stored. Mr. Wilson demanded evidence, and Dr. Nash's name was given to him.

ARGUE AGAINST ZONE PLAN.

Publishers and Labor Leaders Meet New York Congressmen.

WASHINGTON May 29.—Suspension of the new zone system of increased second class postage rates until a year after the war was urged at a conference today of representatives of publishing associations and labor leaders with the New York State delegation in Congress.

John Adams Thayer, for the Periodical Publishers' Association, said the zone plan, unless repealed or suspended, would defeat its own purpose of collecting additional revenue by putting thousands of magazines, periodicals, and farm papers out of business and increasing the subscription prices of those that survived. He said it would enlarge advertising costs, deprive many advertising agents, authors, artists, and printers of their livelihood, tend to denationalize the country, and stifle the great propaganda machine which has supported the Government in the war. He presented a memorial to Congress, signed by the editors of the principal American periodicals, against the zone plan.

Frank Morrison, Secretary of the American Federation of Labor, said that organization favored repeal of the Postal Zone plan. Other labor spokesmen made similar statements.

Jesse H. Neal, speaking for 200 trades, technical and scientific papers of New York, declared the law would destroy many publications and cripple others. He said that in the Chicago Federal Reserve district alone the space these publications gave the Government free for the last Liberty Loan was worth $5,000,000, and that the total additional revenue the new postal rates would produce was less than $4,000,000 for the entire country.

Charles Johnson Post, Director of the Publishers' Advisory Board, representing organizations of publications totaling 35,000,000 copies an issue, declared the zone plan gave preferential treatment to Canadian publishers in the field west of the Mississippi River. Publications issued anywhere in Canada, he said, would deliver to their readers west of the Mississippi in the United States at a postage rate of 4 cents a pound, while identically the same publications if printed in New York State would have to pay from 5 to 9 cents a pound.

John A. Sleicher of New York told how the zone plan embarrassed the handling of his publications.

PRESIDENT ACTS TO CURB PACKERS

Approves Hoover Plan Requiring Full Publicity of Wholesale Prices and Profits.

MAY TAKE PLANTS OVER

But That Will Come Only if Revised Scheme of Regulation Proves Ineffective.

LOOKS TO RETAIL CONTROL

Legislation Giving Administration Full Authority Over Food Trade May Be Sought.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Recommendations for the regulation of the meat packers by the Food Administration on a basis that will give full publicity to wholesale prices and profits, made recently by a committee appointed at the suggestion of Herbert C. Hoover, were approved today by President Wilson.

As a result, the Government will not take over the packing industry, but it will take decisive steps to put an end to all private dealings and understandings. The books of the industry will, in effect, be made public records and the facts ascertained made known from time to time.

The action of the President also gave official approbation to a policy which may have far-reaching results in the regulation of retail dealers, not only in meats, but also in other food commodities. The report submitted to the President stated that the Food Administration had no actual regulatory powers to control the prices charged by retailers. One of the recommendations made by the committee, which was approved by the President, contained, however, this significant statement:

"It is desirable that an investigation should be made of the conditions of the retail trade with a view to determination of some constructive effort that may be made in retail distribution, and it is recommended that a committee should be created for thorough investigation of and recommendation upon the subject."

May Lead to Legislation.

Retail prices being charged in some sections are openly a sore spot with the Food Administration, and there were some who predicted tonight that the approval by the President of this paragraph of the report might have the effect of bringing about a request for the consideration by Congress of legislation which would shortly extend the powers of the Food Administration and give it authority to act promptly where unfair conditions in the retail trade were alleged to exist.

It can be stated that the Food Administration did not believe from the first that the best method to attack the problem of meat prices, wholesale and retail, was by Government operation of packing plants. It was felt that more effective results would be obtained by the adoption of another course, which would end secret understandings, let the public know what was going on, and then, if it was believed necessary, seek authority from Congress to regulate retail prices on the basis of wholesale schedules.

Delay in the publication of the Government policy has been caused in part by a difference of opinion as to the method to be employed. It is said that some of the members of the Federal Trade Commission, headed by Victor Murdock, were in favor of Government operation of the packing plants. The Food Administration members were opposed to such a course.

The official statement by the Food Administration, made tonight after the President had approved the recommendations, read:

"The President has approved the recommendations of the committee which he appointed to report upon the policies to be pursued by the Government with regard to the meat and packing industry. The matter was raised by a letter from Mr. Hoover to the President on March 26. The committee making the report consisted of Secretary of Agriculture Houston, Secretary of Labor Wilson, Chairman of the Tariff Commission Dr. Taussig, Commissioner Fort of the Federal Trade Commission, and Food Administrator Hoover."

Among the committee's recommendations the statement quoted the following:

For Complete Regulation.

"Regulation.—We recommend the continuation of the regulation of the meat packing industry by the Food Administration, and do not favor governmental operation of the industry unless it should be found impossible to enforce regulatory measures.

"The auditing of the packers' bi-monthly profit returns to the Food Administration and the installation of uniform bases of accounts by the Federal Trade Commission should proceed as already settled between the Federal Trade Commission and the Food Administration. The present regulation by the Food Administration as to maximum profits should be continued to July 1. In the meantime, the Federal Trade Commission should report upon the reasonableness of these maximums. If found reasonable, they should continue in effect until further notice. If found unreasonable, such maximums should be made effective as facts warrant.

"The packers should be required to report wholesale prices received for meat products, and the transfer value of the principal by-products from their meat departments should be furnished by the packers to the Department of Agriculture for publication in their market reports as the department may require.

"The reports showing the wholesale prices of food dealers, now being made to the Food Administration, which include the wholesale prices made by packers' branch houses, should be given local publicity to consumers.

"The stockyards should be placed under license and regulation by the Department of Agriculture, which should also establish a governmental system of animal grading under suitable regulations and methods of price reporting of actual transactions. Daily reports should be made on distribution and destinations of livestock, meats, and other products from principal packing points.

"Government and Allied Purchases.—The Food Purchase Board established last November by the Food Administrator and the Secretaries of War and of the Navy, with the approval of the President, for the co-ordination of policies in purchases of official governmental agencies of certain food commodities, should extend its activites to the co-ordination of the purchase of packing house products by all official agencies.

"It must be recognized that the purchases thus co-ordinated through the Food Purchase Board during periods of sparse marketing or during periods of extreme production broadly influence market levels in meat and in animals, and, at such times as they do influence prices, they should be made in accordance with economic conditions as they affect both producers and consumers and at prices on one hand sufficiently stimulative to insure production at a point necessary to furnish supplies of meat during the war period, and, on the other hand, at such ranges as will prevent extortionate prices to the consumer. The packers' profits should be controlled so as to prevent excessive charges and so that the policy already declared by the President in cases where war buying dominates the market, that we must make the prices to the public the same as the prices to the Government, may be effectuated.

"The private-owned cars of the packing industry should continue to be controlled by the Director General of Railroads."

FOUR ADVISERS QUIT JUNIOR NAVAL RESERVE

James A. Farrell, Frederic R. Coudert, William H. Douglas, and Murray Hulbert Have Resigned.

Four additional members of the Advisory Board of the United States Junior Naval Reserve have resigned, it was learned yesterday. The reserve, which has no official connection with the Government, has national headquarters at 218 West Fifty-eighth Street, and about a month ago lost as members of the Advisory Board Felix M. Warburg of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and William S. Kies, Vice President of the American International Corporation.

The members whose resignations were disclosed yesterday are James A. Farrell, President of the United States Steel Corporation; Frederick R. Coudert, the lawyer; William Harris Douglas, President of Arkell, Douglas & Co., 44 Whitehall Street, and Murray Hulbert, Dock Commissioner.

With the exception of Mr. Farrell, the resigning members declared that other interests prevented them from actually participating in the direction of the affairs of the reserve and that, therefore, they felt they should sever relations with it. At the office of the United States Steel Corporation it was stated that Mr. Farrell had quit the reserve, but no further announcement was made.

A report that the entire board had resigned could not be verified in full because of the absence from town of many of the members. Those who are listed on the reserve's letterheads as members of the board are Charles E. Bedford, Vice President of the Vacuum Oil Company, 61 Broadway; Major August Belmont; Reginald Fay, Chairman of the Alumni Association of the New York School Ship; Colgate Hoyt of Colgate Hoyt & Co.; Parkman T. Mason, Harvard Club; Edgar E. Lethbridge, President of the Maritime Exchange; William H. Pleasants, President of the Ocean Steamship Company; J. Frederick Tams of Tams, Lemoine & Crane, yacht brokers, at 52 Pine Street, and Richard C. Veit, Secretary of the Standard Oil Company of New York.

C. Oliver Iselin of A. Iselin & Co., bankers, at 78 Broad Street, and Arthur W. MacCray, Secretary of the Neptune Association, 17 Whitehall Street, are also members of the board. Both said yesterday that they had not resigned.

Dr. William T. Hornaday, Director of the New York Zoological Park, is President of the Junior aval Reserve, but hopes soon to be relieved. He said:

"I want them to elect my successor because I am so occupied with other work that I cannot give the reserve the attention and encouragement it deserves. I want them to get some one who can give all his time to the work and push it along. The United States Junior Naval Reserve is doing a great work and will accomplish much if it gets the right kind of support."

Dr. Hornaday said he knew that resignations had taken place in the board, but added that the vacancies were being filled and that in two weeks or so the board would again be full.

Alabama Watsonites, Armed, Take Refuge in Mountains.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 29.—Hiding in the mountains near Rockford, Coosa County, are nine slackers and one army deserter, who, armed with rifles said to have been shipped to them in a coffin box, are defying arrest.

These men are not pro-Germans. They are Watsonites, their parents having been followers of Tom Watson and his paper, The Jeffersonian, which several months ago was suppressed by the Government. Their creed is "We'd rather be shot at home than in Europe."

The deserter is Ira Culver, a drafted man, whose aged father said he would rather have his son shot at home than die of pneumonia at Camp Gordon. The son was sick at Camp Gordon, and when he recovered he deserted and took refuge with the slackers in caves near his home.

Six of the slackers were called in the April 27 draft. They are Robert A. Mooney, James D. Pody, Homer Culver, Alvin Tipett, Thomas B. Owen, Elbert B. Dennis.

Two other men, in order to show the right spirit, voluntarily took the place of two of the slackers when the train left with drafted men yesterday.

ARMY STARTS A GAS SCHOOL

Officers Being Trained in This Line of Defense at Camp Humphreys.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29. — Secretary Baker announced today that instructors in gas defense w[illegible] to be trained at Camp Hupmp[illegible] Virginia, the new camp of the I[illegible]er Corps, south of Washington. [illegible]struction will cover about a month, after which the graduates will become division gas officers, taking charge of the work of preparing soldiers for defense against gas attacks. About thirty officers will be trained at a time.

The gas officers now on duty with the various divisions received their training at the camp at American University, in this city. These completed their training last November and were assigned to duty at the different National Army and National Guard camps in this country. The new school has been established to meet the need for additional officers.—A knowledge of chemistry is essential for entrance into the school.

The troops which are going to France now are well posted on the methods on combating gas attacks. No American troops have been sent to the front without practical experience in defending themselves against gas. The field training section of the gas defense service formerly was under the Sanitary Corps, but now is under the Engineers.

15,000 New Men at Camp Dix.

CAMP DIX, Burlington, N. J., May 29.—Within five days 15,000 National Army recruits have arrived here. At times the task of handling these men was stupendous, necessitating the recording of as many as two a minute over a period of several hours. Many of the soldiers, anxious to spend Memorial Day with their families, received forty-eight hours' furlough today. Major W. Cole Davis of New York, in charge of the Base Hospital here, was today promoted to be a Lieutenant Colonel.

OFFICIALS SILENT ON GENERAL WOOD

His Transfer from Foreign Service Remains Unexplained Despite Wide Comment.

MAY TRAIN MORE TROOPS

Friends Doubt, However, That He Will Be Sent Overseas—Case in March's Hands.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The detachment of Major Gen. Leonard Wood from the command of the National Army Division which he trained for overseas service remains unexplained, no official having advanced any reason for it. Secretary Baker stands by his position that the War Department is not called on to explain an order issued to an army officer. The White House is silent as to what passed between President Wilson and General Wood at their interview yesterday when the General appealed to the President to restore him to duty with troops and not relegate him to a purely administrative office.

In the meantime the Chief of the Army General Staff, General Peyton C. March, is said to be giving consideration to the application of General Wood for service with troops. From all that is understood here, there is no prospect that General Wood will get any command in the expeditionary forces. The most that he may expect, it is believed, is to be assigned to command another National Army division for training purposes. He is not under consideration for commanding troops in Italy and there is nothing to show that the War Department has any other purpose than to keep him in the United States.

As General Wood's case stands the failure to send him to Europe is apparently based on the omission of his name from a preference list submitted by General Pershing of general officers who would be acceptable to him as commanders. The War Department, according to the prevailing understanding, has construed this omission to mean that General Pershing does not want General Wood as one of his subordinate officers. There is no explanation, however, of the action of the War Department in permitting General Wood to make all his personal preparations for overseas service and even to proceed under orders to a port of embarkation, before notifying him that he was to be deprived of his command and sent to San Francisco for administrative work.

The fact that Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, second to General Wood among the highest ranking officers of the regular army, was deprived of overseas service, although he had been found physically fit for foreign duty, is being cited as a reason for showing that there was no specific discrimination against General Wood. The sequel to this statement is found in the suggestion that General Bell's name was also omitted from the list of general officers acceptable to General Pershing. It is the understanding that Major Gen. Hugh L. Scott, who commanded the division at Camp Dix, was another omission.

Considerable comment has been caused by this set of circumstances, because all three of these officers who were withheld from overseas service have held the office of Chief of the General Staff of the army. In General Scott's case the comment is intensified because, as Chief of Staff, he had recommended the selection of General Pershing as commander of the Expeditionary Forces. And it was General Scott who recommended that the rule be adopted that no general officer unacceptable to General Pershing be assigned to General Pershing's command. The omission of the name of General Scott from General Pershing's preference list is cited as the reason for keeping him at home. General Scott's case differs somewhat from those of Generals Wood and Bell in that he is past the age limit of active service, 64 years. Generals Wood and Bell are still well within the age limit.

To what extent the alleged negative attitude of General Pershing will be utilized as a reason for placing upon him the full responsibility for the displacement of General Wood and other high ranking officers of the line has not developed, although there are signs that this will be the idea advanced when the demand becomes widespread for some explanation of the cause of the revocation of his orders for overseas service.

WASHINGTON, May 29, (Associated Press.)—A plea that Major Gen. Leonard Wood be permitted to go to France was made in the House today by Representative McKenzie of Illinois, Republican.

"One of the most inspiring instances of the war," said he, "is the sight of that grizzled warrior standing at the White House door begging for a chance to go and fight."

RECREATES BARUCH BOARD.

Now a Separate Administrative Agency Under President's Order.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Under an executive order announced tonight President Wilson formally created the War Industries Board as a separate administrative agency to act for him and under his direction, with all the duties and powers informally conferred by the President last March in a letter to Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman of the board.

Many of the powers delegated are vested in Chairman Baruch, who is the President's right arm for war production. The board, originally a great division of the Council of National Defense, has been exercising its wide powers for three months, but its creation as a distinct branch of the Government under the President has awaited the enactment of the Overman bill, authorizing the President to reorganize Government agencies.

Besides exercising supervision over virtually the entire industrial fabric of the nation, with power to commandeer plants or take other drastic steps to assure adequacy of war supplies and speed up production, the board directs purchase for the Allies, eliminates competition for supplies between the various departments of the Government, has power to allocate materials and contracts and curtail the output of non-essentials, and fixes prices to be paid by the Government. Not the least important effect of the board's work is its influence in obtaining for the public the same prices on necessaries that the Government pays.

450 ENSIGNS GRADUATED.

Complete 15 Weeks' Course at Annapolis and Soon Will Join Navy.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 29.—A material addition to the trained force of officers of the navy was made here today when 450 young Ensigns of the reserve force received their certificates after having completed a course of fifteen weeks of intensive training at the Naval Academy. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, presented the certificates and made an address to the class.

The new officers will be temporarily commissioned, and after a week's leave will report at the stations to which they have been assigned.

A new class of reserve officers, consisting of 700 members, will be formed here on June 11.

FIND BROWNING GUNS EFFECTIVE IN BARRAGE

35 of Them, Firing 500 Shots Each a Minute, Cover "Advance" at Camp Meade.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 29.—Two hundred thousand rounds of ammunition were fired from the new heavy Browning machine guns in a manoeuvre at Camp Meade this morning. The object was to demonstrate the ability of the machine gunners to drop a barrage to protect advancing forces. The experiment was one of the most interesting staged here, and was seen by the members of the French and British Missions and officers of the division, among them Majors S. Stuart Janney, Andrew W. Smith, P. W. Smith, and Charles Dupuy, and Captain Frank J. Battles.

Dummies were used to represent the advancing Americans. The machine gunners kept their bullets raining on the "town" which was being attacked and directly in front of the "men" they were protecting. It would have been possible to substitute real soldiers for the dummies, as the fire of the gunners was so accurate that not one of the dummies was struck by the barrage. The manoeuvre was staged on the machine gun range, south of the Base Hospital.

All who were present today were more than pleased with the manner in which the Browning guns performed. Five hundred shots a minute were fired from each of the thirty-five guns which were in use.

Registrants Unfit for Army to be Put at Other Work—Want 9,000 in Spruce Forests.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Two hundred thousand men of draft age who, because of minor physical defects, have been held by examining surgeons over the country for limited military service, are to be employed in producing or handling equipment for the army. Provost Marshal General Crowder announced tonight that the Army Staff Corps would utilize the services of these registrants and thus release fighting men for the front line.

General Crowder issued the first call today under the new plan. Orders went forth to Governors of States for upward of 9,000 men for service in spruce production for airplanes. The men will be allowed to volunteer until June 6. After that date a report will be made to the Provost Marshal General, and if there are not sufficient volunteers allotments will be assigned to the various States to be filled by draft.

Some 10,000 men of the army now are engaged in getting out spruce timber in the Northwest and the Signal Corps is constantly increasing this number. Consequently, sending the new men to this field will constitute no new policy, and it is understood that it has no relation to complaints that Industrial Workers of the World there have retarded the output of spruce.

Some twenty-four trades or classes, including railroad, transport and construction men, office workers and laborers are desired for the spruce division When this division has been filled, men will be called to fill other staff services of the army until the 200,000 total has been exhausted.

In a statement announcing the new plan, General Crowder said the solution of the question of what to do with these men had been "one of the great problems of the draft." Some of the men, it was explained, have a thumb, a toe, or eye missing, but almost every one of them is engaged in active business and is held to be of some use in the military establishment. After months of study it was decided to call them into branches of the army engaged in producing equipment for the fighting men.

5,334 MORE DRAFT MEN GO.

Many Boards Now Depleted of Those in Class 1—A.

New York City yesterday gave 5,334 additional drafted men to the colors. The men left for Camp Upton, Camp Wadsworth, Camp Sevier, and Camp Hancock.

With the exodus of the quota yesterday many of the draft boards were depleted of their men in Class 1-A, and it was said that the next drafts from these boards would consist of the men newly registered on June 5. The contingent which left yesterday was the largest in size leaving in a single day.

There was considerable confusion attending the departure of the men for the South. This was due to the fact that when the New York men reached Jersey City railroad stations they found large numbers of New Jersey men leaving for Camp Dix. About 10,000 relatives and friends gathered to speed the 1,700 New Jersey boys, and the large crowds proved a difficult job for the police.

Martin Conboy, director of the draft for the city, said yesterday that registrants of Class 1 classified as eligible for military service subject to necessary surgical operation or medical treatment, will not be compelled to undergo treatment. It will be voluntary, he said, with the men whether they want to undergo the operation or treatment. The Government will see to it that they get adequate medical attention free of charge.

All men who have or who will become 21 years of age between June 5, 1917, and June 5, 1918, must register on June 5, 1918, under the selective service law. Any one who will not be home on that day should go to the nearest local board, fill out the registration card, and mail it, with a stamped self-addressed envelope, to the local board having jurisdiction over his home address. Registration will take place between 7 A. M. and 9 P. M. at the local boards covering the registrant's address.

FORM NEW TIE WITH ITALY.

Americans Join in Movement for a University Union.

ROME, May 28.—A meeting has been held here under the auspices of the American University Union in Europe for the purpose of forming an Italo-American university union. The United States was represented by Ambassador Page, Professor George H. Nettleton of Yale, and Professor Paul van Dyke of Princeton, and Italy by Signor Barenini, Minister of Education; Professor Alberto Tonelli, rector of Rome University, and Senator William Marconi.

Patriotic speeches were delivered by several of the conferees, predicting that the organization in process of formation would be another link in the chain of friendship binding American and Italy.

SENDS BERNSTORFF CUP TO THE METAL MARKET

Golf Prize at Lenox Tournament Now Will Be Exchanged for War Savings Stamps.

Among the interesting acquisitions of plate and metal ware at the War Savings Metal Market at Fifth Avenue and Fortieth Street yesterday was a solid silver cup which the former German Ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, had presented to the winner of a golf tournament at Lenox, Mass., in 1897. The cup was won by the late David W. Bishop and was sent to the War Savings Metal Market to be exchanged for its value in War Savings Stamps by Mr. Bishop's widow, who is now Mrs. John E. Parsons of 853 Fifth Avenue. The cup was not appraised yesterday, but, according to Mrs. Joseph Griswold Deane, it is about as expensive a piece of metal as has been brought into the market.

The market continued to do a flourishing business yesterday, more than $2,200 worth of plate being sold for War Savings Stamps. Among the visitors yesterday was Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the Governor, who came to get $3 worth of Thrift Stamps in exchange for a silver coffee pot which she had sent to the market on Monday.

With the Metal War Savings Market calling to the housewife to deliver her silver plate for War Savings Stamps, the Metalware Club of 280 Madison Avenue also issued an appeal to the housewife yesterday urging upon her the necessity of conserving her household utensils as a protection against a shortage of such materials in the future. The appeal says:

"Save your pots and pans, Madam Housewife; the outlook is that for sometime to come these useful household utensils will be both scarce in quantity and high in price. This is the warning given on the authority of some of the largest manufacturers of enameled and galvanized household wares in the country, who point out that the situation is due solely to wartime conditions."

Is He Your Boy?

Mother—you've watched him grow from the time he first gave evidence of his boyishness by wearing a real pair of breeches "with legs," until now, when he keeps you always at wits' ends with pranks and mischievousness.

You've watched him at his studies, and you've watched him at his play. You've watched him develop those characteristics and peculiarities that make him so exclusively YOUR boy.

And now, when he drops into bed at night, too tired to wash his dirty face or smooth his tousled hair, you watch him and wonder how you can buy him clothes as fast as he can wear them out.

We watched him, too. We had to know all boys as part of our sixty years of learning how to clothe Young America. And we know

Red, who rubs his clothes out at the knees and elbows,—

Pete, who is springing up so fast he outgrows his clothes faster than he outwears them,—

Jimmie, who scorns "civilians" for a baseball "rigout,"—

Dick, whose idea of a "swell" costume is Uncle Harry's uniform,—

Eddie, who is fastidious about his neckties, regardless of the rest of his attire,—

And we know Fred and Tommie and George and the rest of them, who are, oh so different from every other boy.

Now the Boys' Section is going to help you solve some of the perplexities of appareling YOUR boy.

These Boys' Talks Will Appear from Time to Time, the Next To-morrow, Friday.

PRESIDENT ACTS TO CURB PACKERS

Approves Hoover Plan Requiring Full Publicity of Wholesale Prices and Profits.

MAY TAKE PLANTS OVER

But That Will Come Only if Revised Scheme of Regulation Proves Ineffective.

LOOKS TO RETAIL CONTROL

Legislation Giving Administration Full Authority Over Food Trade May Be Sought.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Recommendations for the regulation of the meat packers by the Food Administration on a basis that will give full publicity to wholesale prices and profits, made recently by a committee appointed at the suggestion of Herbert C. Hoover, were approved today by President Wilson.

As a result, the Government will not take over the packing industry, but it will take decisive steps to put an end to all private dealings and understandings. The books of the industry will, in effect, be made public records and the facts ascertained made known from time to time.

The action of the President also gave official approbation to a policy which may have far-reaching results in the regulation of retail dealers, not only in meats, but also in other food commodities. The report submitted to the President stated that the Food Administration had no actual regulatory powers to control the prices charged by retailers. One of the recommendations made by the committee, which was approved by the President, contained, however, this significant statement:

"It is desirable that an investigation should be made of the conditions of the retail trade with a view to determination of some constructive effort that may be made in retail distribution, and it is recommended that a committee should be created for thorough investigation of and recommendation upon the subject."

May Lead to Legislation.

Retail prices being charged in some sections are openly a sore spot with the Food Administration, and there were some who predicted tonight that the approval by the President of this paragraph of the report might have the effect of bringing about a request for the consideration by Congress of legislation which would shortly extend the powers of the Food Administration and give it authority to act promptly where unfair conditions in the retail trade were alleged to exist.

It can be stated that the Food Administration did not believe from the first that the best method to attack the problem of meat prices, wholesale and retail, was by Government operation of packing plants. It was felt that more effective results would be obtained by the adoption of another course, which would end secret understandings, let the public know what was going on, and then, if it was believed necessary, seek authority from Congress to regulate retail prices on the basis of wholesale schedules.

Delay in the publication of the Government policy has been caused in part by a difference of opinion as to the method to be employed. It is said that some of the members of the Federal Trade Commission, headed by Victor Murdock, were in favor of Government operation of the packing plants. The Food Administration members were opposed to such a course.

The official statement by the Food Administration, made tonight after the President had approved the recommendations, read:

"The President has approved the recommendations of the committee which he appointed to report upon the policies to be pursued by the Government with regard to the meat and packing industry. The matter was raised by a letter from Mr. Hoover to the President on March 28. The committee making the report consisted of Secretary of Agriculture Houston, Secretary of Labor Wilson, Chairman of the Tariff Commission Dr. Taussig, Commissioner Fort of the Federal Trade Commission, and Food Administrator Hoover."

Among the committee's recommendations the statement quoted the following:

For Complete Regulation.

"Regulation.—We recommend the continuation of the regulation of the meat packing industry by the Food Administration, and do not favor governmental operation of the industry unless it should be found impossible to enforce regulatory measures.

"The auditing of the packers' bimonthly profit returns to the Food Administration and the installation of uniform bases of accounts by the Federal Trade Commission should proceed as already settled between the Federal Trade Commission and the Food Administration. The present regulation by the Food Administration as to maximum profits should be continued to July 1. In the meantime, the Federal Trade Commission should report upon the reasonableness of these maximums. If found reasonable, they should continue in effect until further notice. If found unreasonable, such maximums should be made effective as facts warrant.

"The packers should be required to report wholesale prices received for meat products, and the transfer value of the principal by-products from their meat departments should be furnished by the packers to the Department of Agriculture for publication in their market reports as the department may require.

"The reports showing the wholesale prices of food dealers, now being made to the Food Administration, which include the wholesale prices made by packers' branch houses, should be given local publicity to consumers.

"The stockyards should be placed under license and regulation by the Department of Agriculture, which should also establish a governmental system of animal grading under suitable regulations and methods of price reporting of actual transactions. Daily reports should be made on distribution and destinations of livestock, meats, and other products from principal packing points.

"Government and Allied Purchases.—The Food Purchase Board established last November by the Food Administrator and the Secretaries of War and of the Navy, with the approval of the President, for the co-ordination of policies in purchases of official governmental agencies of certain food commodities, should extend its activites to the co-ordination of the purchase of packing house products by all official agencies.

"It must be recognized that the purchases thus co-ordinated through the Food Purchase Board during periods of sparse marketing or during periods of extreme production broadly influence market levels in meat and in animals, and, at such times as they do influence prices, they should be made in accordance with economic conditions as they affect both producers and consumers and at prices on one hand sufficiently stimulative to insure production at a point necessary to furnish supplies of meat during the war period, and, on the other hand, at such ranges as will prevent extortionate prices to the consumer. The packers' profits should be controlled so as to prevent excessive charges and so that the policy already declared by the President in cases where war buying dominates the market, that 'we must make the prices to the public the same as the prices to the Government,' may be effectuated.

"The private-owned cars of the packing industry should continue to be controlled by the Director General of Railroads."

FOUR ADVISERS QUIT JUNIOR NAVAL RESERVE

James A. Farrell, Frederic R. Coudert, William H. Douglas, and Murray Hulbert Have Resigned.

Four additional members of the Advisory Board of the United States Junior Naval Reserve have resigned, it was learned yesterday. The reserve, which has no official connection with the Government, has national headquarters at 218 West Fifty-eighth Street, and about a month ago lost as members of the Advisory Board Felix M. Warburg of Kuhn, Loeb & Co, and William S. Kies, Vice President of the American International Corporation.

The members whose resignations were disclosed yesterday are James A. Farrell, President of the United States Steel Corporation; Frederick R. Coudert, the lawyer; William Harris Douglas, President of Arkell, Douglas & Co., 44 Whitehall Street, and Murray Hulbert, Dock Commissioner.

With the exception of Mr. Farrell, the resigning members declared that other interests prevented them from actually participating in the direction of the affairs of the reserve and that, therefore, they felt they should sever relations with it. At the office of the United States Steel Corporation it was stated that Mr. Farrell had quit the reserve, but no further announcement was made.

A report that the entire board had resigned could not be verified in full because of the absence from town of many of the members. Those who are listed on the reserve's letterheads as members of the board are Charles E. Bedford, Vice President of the Vacuum Oil Company, 61 Broadway; Major August Belmont; Reginald Fay, Chairman of the Alumni Association of the New York School of Law; Colgate Hoyt of Colgate Hoyt & Co.; Parkman T. Mason, Harvard Club; Edgar E. Lethridge, President of the Maritime Exchange; William H. Pleasants, President of the Ocean Steamship Company; J. Frederick Tams of Tams, Lemoine & Crane, yacht brokers, at 52 Pine Street, and Richard C. Veit, Secretary of the Standard Oil Company of New York.

C. Oliver Iselin of A. Iselin & Co., bankers, at 78 Broad Street, and Arthur W. MacGray, Secretary of the Neptune Association, 15 Whitehall Street, are also members of the board. Both said yesterday that they had not resigned.

Dr. William T. Hornaday, Director of the New York Zoological Park, is President of the Junior aval Reserve, but hopes soon to be relieved. He said:

"I want them to elect my successor because I am so occupied with other work that cannot give the reserve the attention and encouragement it deserves. I want them to get some one who can give all his time to the work and push it along. The United States Junior Naval Reserve is doing a great work and will accomplish much if it gets the right kind of support."

Dr. Hornaday said he knew that resignations had taken place in the board, but added that the vacancies were being filled and that in two weeks or so the board would again be full.

SLACKERS DEFY ARREST.

ARMY STARTS A GAS SCHOOL

Officers Being Trained in This Line of Defense at Camp Humphreys.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29. — Secretary Baker announced today that instructors in gas defense were to be trained at Camp Hupmphreys, Virginia, the new camp of the Engineer Corps, south of Washington. The instruction will cover about a month, after which the graduates will become division gas officers, taking charge of the work of preparing soldiers for defense against gas attacks. About thirty officers will be trained at a time.

The gas officers now on duty with the various divisions received their training at the camp at American University, in this city. These completed their training last November and were assigned to duty at the different National Army and National Guard camps in this country. The new school has been established to meet the need for additional officers. A knowledge of chemistry is essential for entrance into the school.

The troops which are going to France now are well posted on the methods on combating gas attacks. No American troops have been sent to the front without practical experience in defending themselves against gas. The field training section of the gas defense service formerly was under the Sanitary Corps, but now is under the Engineers.

15,000 New Men at Camp Dix.

CAMP DIX, Burlington, N. J., May 29.—Within five days 15,000 National Army recruits have arrived here. At times the task of handling these men was stupendous, necessitating the recording of as many as two a minute over a period of several hours. Many of the soldiers, anxious to spend Memorial Day with their families, received forty-eight hours' furlough today. Major W. Cole Davis of New York, in charge of the Base Hospital here, was today promoted to be a Lieutenant Colonel.

OFFICIALS SILENT ON GENERAL WOOD

His Transfer from Foreign Service Remains Unexplained Despite Wide Comment.

MAY TRAIN MORE TROOPS

Friends Doubt, However, That He Will Be Sent Overseas—Case in March's Hands.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The detachment of Major Gen. Leonard Wood from the command of the National Army Division which he trained for overseas service remains unexplained, no official having advanced any reason for it. Secretary Baker stands by his position that the War Department is not called on to explain an order issued to an army officer. The White House is silent as to what passed between President Wilson and General Wood at their interview yesterday when the General appealed to the President to restore him to duty with troops and not relegate him to a purely administrative office.

In the meantime the Chief of the Army General Staff, General Peyton C. March, is said to be giving consideration to the application of General Wood for service with troops. From all that is understood here, there is no prospect that General Wood will get any command in the expeditionary forces. The most that he may expect, it is believed, is to be assigned to command another National Army division for training purposes. He is not under consideration for commanding troops in Italy and there is nothing to show that the War Department has any other purpose than to keep him in the United States.

As General Wood's case stands the failure to send him to Europe is apparently based on the omission of his name from a preference list submitted by General Pershing of general officers who would be acceptable to him as commanders. The War Department, according to the prevailing understanding, has construed this omission to mean that General Pershing does not want General Wood as one of his subordinate officers. There is no explanation, however, of the action of the War Department in permitting General Wood to make all his personal preparations for overseas service and even to proceed under orders to a port of embarkation, before notifying him that he was to be deprived of his command and sent to San Francisco for administrative work.

The fact that Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, second to General Wood among the highest ranking officers of the regular army, was deprived of overseas service, although he had been found physically fit for foreign duty, is being cited as a reason for showing that there was no specific discrimination against General Wood. The sequel to this statement is found in the suggestion that General Bell's name was also omitted from the list of general officers acceptable to General Pershing. It is the understanding that Major Gen. Hugh L. Scott, who commanded the division at Camp Dix, was another omission.

Considerable comment has been caused by this set of circumstances, because all three of these officers who were withheld from overseas service have held the office of Chief of the General Staff of the army. In General Scott's case the comment is intensified because, as Chief of Staff, he had recommended the selection of General Pershing as commander of the Expeditionary Forces. And it was General Scott who recommended that the rule be adopted that no general officer unacceptable to General Pershing be assigned to General Pershing's command. The omission of the name of General Scott from General Pershing's preference list is cited as the reason for keeping him at home. General Scott's case differs somewhat from those of Generals Wood and Bell in that he is past the age limit of active service, 64 years. Generals Wood and Bell are still well within the age limit.

To what extent the alleged negative attitude of General Pershing will be utilized as a reason for placing upon him the full responsibility for the displacement of General Wood and other high ranking officers of the line has not developed, although there are signs that this will be the idea advanced when the demand becomes widespread for some explanation of the cause of the revocation of his orders for overseas service.

WASHINGTON, May 29. (Associated Press.)—A plea that Major Gen. Leonard Wood be permitted to go to France was made in the House today by Representative McKenzie of Illinois, Republican.

"One of the most inspiring instances of the war," said he, "is the sight of that grizzled warrior standing at the White House door begging for a chance to go and fight."

RECREATES BARUCH BOARD.

Now a Separate Administrative Agency Under President's Order.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Under an executive order announced tonight President Wilson formally created the War Industries Board as a separate administrative agency to act for him and under his direction, with all the duties and powers informally conferred by the President last March in a letter to Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman of the board.

Many of the powers delegated are vested in Chairman Baruch, who is the President's right arm for war production. The board, originally a great division of the Council of National Defense, has been exercising its wide powers for three months, but its creation as a distinct branch of the Government under the President has awaited the enactment of the Overman bill, authorizing the President to reorganize Government agencies.

Besides exercising supervision over virtually the entire industrial fabric of the nation, with power to commandeer plants or take other drastic steps to assure adequacy of war supplies and speed up production, the board directs purchase for the Allies, eliminates competition for supplies between the various departments of the Government, has power to allocate materials and contracts and curtail the output of non-essentials, and fixes prices to be paid by the Government. Not the least important effect of the board's work is its influence in obtaining for the public the same prices on necessaries that the Government pays.

450 ENSIGNS GRADUATED.

Complete 15 Weeks' Course at Annapolis and Soon Will Join Navy.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 29.—A material addition to the trained force of officers of the navy was made here today when 450 young Ensigns of the reserve force received their certificates after having completed a course of fifteen weeks of intensive training at the Naval Academy. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, presented the certificates and made an address to the class.

The new officers will be temporarily commissioned and after a week's leave will report at the stations to which they have been assigned.

A new class of reserve officers, consisting of 700 members, will be formed here on June 11.

FIND BROWNING GUNS EFFECTIVE IN BARRAGE

35 of Them, Firing 500 Shots Each a Minute, Cover "Advance" at Camp Meade.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 29.—Two hundred thousand rounds of ammunition were fired from the new heavy Browning machine guns in a manoeuvre at Camp Meade this morning. The object was to demonstrate the ability of the machine gunners to drop a barrage to protect advancing forces. The experiment was one of the most interesting staged here, and was seen by the members of the French and British Missions and officers of the division, among them Majors S. Stuart Janney, Andrew W. Smith, P. W. Smith, and Charles Dupuy, and Captain Frank J. Battles.

Dummies were used to represent the advancing Americans. The machine gunners kept their bullets raining on the "town" which was being attacked and directly in front of the "men" they were protecting. It would have been possible to substitute real soldiers for the dummies, as the fire of the gunners was so accurate that not one of the dummies was struck by the barrage. The manoeuvre was staged on the machine gun range, south of the Base Hospital.

All who were present today were more than pleased with the manner in which the Browning guns performed. Five hundred shots a minute were fired from each of the thirty-five guns which were in use.

Registrants Unfit for Army to be Put at Other Work—Want 9,000 in Spruce Forests.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Two hundred thousand men of draft age who, because of minor physical defects, have been held by examining surgeons over the country for limited military service, are to be employed in producing or handling equipment for the army. Provost Marshal General Crowder announced tonight that the Army Staff Corps would utilize the services of these registrants and thus release fighting men for the front line.

General Crowder issued the first call today under the new plan. Orders went forth to Governors of States for upward of 9,000 men for service in spruce production for airplanes. The men will be allowed to volunteer until June 6. After that date a report will be made to the Provost Marshal General, and if there are not sufficient volunteers allotments will be assigned to the various States to be filled by draft.

Some 10,000 men of the army now are engaged in getting out spruce timber in the Northwest and the Signal Corps is constantly increasing this number. Consequently, sending the new men to this field will constitute no new policy, and it is understood that it has no relation to complaints that Industrial Workers of the World there have retarded the output of spruce.

Some twenty-four trades or classes, including railroad, transport and construction men, office workers and laborers are desired for the spruce division When this division has been filled, men will be called to fill other staff services of the army until the 200,000 total has been exhausted.

In a statement announcing the new plan, General Crowder said the solution of the question of what to do with these men had been "one of the great problems of the draft." Some of the men, it was explained, have a thumb, a toe, or eye missing, but almost every one of them is engaged in active business and is held to be of some use in the military establishment. After months of study it was decided to call them into branches of the army engaged in producing equipment for the fighting men.

5,334 MORE DRAFT MEN GO.

Many Boards Now Depleted of Those in Class 1—A.

New York City yesterday gave 5,334 additional drafted men to the colors. The men left for Camp Upton, Camp Wadsworth, Camp Sevier, and Camp Hancock.

With the exodus of the quota yesterday many of the draft boards were depleted of their men in Class 1-A, and it was said that the next drafts from these boards would consist of the men newly registered on June 5. The contingent which left yesterday was the largest in size leaving in a single day.

There was considerable confusion attending the departure of the men for the South. This was due to the fact that when the New York men reached Jersey City railroad stations they found large numbers of New Jersey men leaving for Camp Dix. About 10,000 relatives and friends gathered to speed the 1,700 New Jersey boys, and the large crowds proved a difficult job for the police.

Martin Conboy, director of the draft for the city, said yesterday that registrants of Class 1 classified as eligible for military service subject to necessary surgical operation or medical treatment, will not be compelled to undergo treatment. It will be voluntary, he said, with the men whether they want to undergo the operation or treatment. The Government will see to it that they get adequate medical attention free of charge.

All men who have or who will become 21 years of age between June 5, 1917, and June 5, 1918, must register on June 5, 1918, under the selective service law. Any one who will not be home on that day should go to the nearest local board, fill out the registration card, and mail it, with a stamped self-addressed envelope, to the local board having jurisdiction over his home address. Registration will take place between 7 A. M. and 9 P. M. at the local boards covering the registrant's address.

FORM NEW TIE WITH ITALY.

Americans Join in Movement for a University Union.

ROME, May 28.—A meeting has been held here under the auspices of the American University Union in Europe for the purpose of forming an Italo-American university union. The United States was represented by Ambassador Page, Professor George H. Nettleton of Yale, and Professor Paul van Dyke of Princeton, and Italy by Signor Barenini, Minister of Education; Professor Alberto Tonelli, rector of Rome University, and Senator William Marconi.

Patriotic speeches were delivered by several of the conferees, predicting that the organization in process of formation would be another link in the chain of friendship binding American and Italy.

SENDS BERNSTORFF CUP TO THE METAL MARKET

Golf Prize at Lenox Tournament Now Will Be Exchanged for War Savings Stamps.

Among the interesting acquisitions of plate and metal ware at the War Savings Metal Market at Fifth Avenue and Fortieth Street yesterday was a solid silver cup which the former German Ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, had presented to the winner of a golf tournament at Lenox, Mass., in 1897. The cup was won by the late David W. Bishop and was sent to the War Savings Metal Market to be exchanged for its value in War Savings Stamps by Mr. Bishop's widow, who is now Mrs. John E. Parsons of 853 Fifth Avenue. The cup was not appraised yesterday, but, according to Mrs. Joseph Griswold Deane, it is about as expensive a piece of metal as has been brought into the market.

The market continued to do a flourishing business yesterday, more than $2,200 worth of plate being sold for War Savings Stamps. Among the visitors yesterday was Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the Governor, who came to get $3 worth of Thrift Stamps in exchange for a silver coffee pot which she had sent to the market on Monday.

With the Metal War Savings Market calling to the housewife to deliver her silver plate for War Savings Stamps, the Metalware Club of 280 Madison Avenue also issued an appeal to the housewife yesterday urging upon her the necessity of conserving her household utensils as a protection against a shortage of such materials in the future. The appeal says:

"Save your pots and pans, Madam Housewife; the outlook is that for some time to come these useful household utensils will be both scarce in quantity and high in price. This is the warning given on the authority of some of the largest manufacturers of enameled and galvanized household wares in the country, who point out that the situation is due solely to wartime conditions."

Is He Your Boy?

Mother—you've watched him grow from the time he first gave evidence of his boyishness by wearing a real pair of breeches "with legs," until now, when he keeps you always at wits' ends with pranks and mischievousness.

You've watched him at his studies, and you've watched him at his play. You've watched him develop those characteristics and peculiarities that make him so exclusively YOUR boy.

And now, when he drops into bed at night, too tired to wash his dirty face or smooth his tousled hair, you watch him and wonder how you can buy him clothes as fast as he can wear them out.

We watched him, too. We had to know all boys as part of our sixty years of learning how to clothe Young America. And we know

Jimmie, who scorns "civilians" for a baseball "rigout,"—

Dick, whose idea of a "swell" costume is Uncle Harry's uniform,—

Eddie, who is fastidious about his neckties, regardless of the rest of his attire,—

And we know Fred and Tommie and George and the rest of them, who are, oh so different from every other boy.

Now the Boys' Section is going to help you solve some of the perplexities of appareling YOUR boy.

These Boys' Talks Will Appear from Time to Time, the Next To-morrow, Friday.

PRESIDENT ACTS TO CURB PACKERS

Approves Hoover Plan Requiring Full Publicity of Wholesale Prices and Profits.

MAY TAKE PLANTS OVER

But That Will Come Only if Revised Scheme of Regulation Proves Ineffective.

LOOKS TO RETAIL CONTROL

Legislation Giving Administration Full Authority Over Food Trade May Be Sought.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Recommendations for the regulation of the meat packers by the Food Administration on a basis that will give full publicity to wholesale prices and profits, made recently by a committee appointed at the suggestion of Herbert C. Hoover, were approved today by President Wilson.

As a result, the Government will not take over the packing industry, but it will take decisive steps to put an end to all private dealings and understandings. The books of the industry will, in effect, be made public records and the facts ascertained made known from time to time.

The action of the President also gave official approbation to a policy which may have far-reaching results in the regulation of retail dealers, not only in meats, but also in other food commodities. The report submitted to the President stated that the Food Administration had no actual regulatory powers to control the prices charged by retailers. One of the recommendations made by the committee, which was approved by the President, contained, however, this significant statement:

"It is desirable that an investigation should be made of the conditions of the retail trade with a view to determination of some constructive effort that may be made in retail distribution, and it is recommended that a committee should be created for thorough investigation of and recommendation upon the subject."

May Lead to Legislation.

Retail prices being charged in some sections are openly a sore spot with the Food Administration, and there were some who predicted tonight that the approval by the President of this paragraph of the report might have the effect of bringing about a request for the consideration by Congress of legislation which would shortly extend the powers of the Food Administration and give it authority to act promptly where unfair conditions in the retail trade were alleged to exist.

It can be stated that the Food Administration did not believe from the first that the best method to attack the problem of meat prices, wholesale and retail, was by Government operation of packing plants. It was felt that more effective results would be obtained by the adoption of another course, which would end secret understandings, let the public know what was going on, and then, if it was believed necessary, seek authority from Congress to regulate retail prices on the basis of wholesale schedules.

Delay in the publication of the Government policy has been caused in part by a difference of opinion as to the method to be employed. It is said that some of the members of the Federal Trade Commission, headed by Victor Murdock, were in favor of Government operation of the packing plants. The Food Administration members were opposed to such a course.

The official statement by the Food Administration, made tonight after the President had approved the recommendations, read:

"The President has approved the recommendations of the committee which he appointed to report upon the policies to be pursued by the Government with regard to the meat and packing industry. The matter was raised by a letter from Mr. Hoover to the President on March 28. The committee making the report consisted of Secretary of Agriculture Houston, Secretary of Labor Wilson, Chairman of the Tariff Commission Dr. Taussig, Commissioner Fort of the Federal Trade Commission, and Food Administrator Hoover."

Among the committee's recommendations the statement quoted the following:

For Complete Regulation.

"Regulation.—We recommend the continuation of the regulation of the meat packing industry by the Food Administration, and do not favor governmental operation of the industry unless it should be found impossible to enforce regulatory measures.

"The auditing of the packers' bi-monthly profit returns to the Food Administration and the installation of uniform bases of accounts by the Federal Trade Commission should proceed as already settled between the Federal Trade Commission and the Food Administration. The present regulation by the Food Administration as to maximum profits should be continued to July 1. In the meantime, the Federal Trade Commission should report upon the reasonableness of these maximums. If found reasonable, they should continue in effect until further notice. If found unreasonable, such maximums should be made effective as facts warrant.

"The packers should be required to report wholesale prices received for meat products, and the transfer value of the principal by-products from their meat departments should be furnished by the packers to the Department of Agriculture for publication in their market reports as the department may require.

"The reports showing the wholesale prices of food dealers, now being made to the Food Administration, which include the wholesale prices made by packers' branch houses, should be given local publicity to consumers.

"The stockyards should be placed under license and regulation by the Department of Agriculture, which should also establish a governmental system of animal grading under suitable regulations and methods of price reporting of actual transactions. Daily reports should be made on distribution and destinations of livestock, meats, and other products from principal packing points.

"Government and Allied Purchases.—The Food Purchase Board established last November by the Food Administrator and the Secretaries of War and of the Navy, with the approval of the President, for the coördination of policies in purchases of official governmental agencies of certain food commodities, should extend its activites to the co-ordination of the purchase of packing house products by all official agencies.

"It must be recognized that the purchases thus co-ordinated through the Food Purchase Board during periods of sparse marketing or during periods of extreme production broadly influence market levels in meat and in animals, and, at such times as they do influence prices, they should be made in accordance with economic conditions as they affect both producers and consumers and at prices on one hand sufficiently stimulative to insure production at a point necessary to furnish supplies of meat during the war period, and, on the other hand, at such ranges as will prevent extortionate prices to the consumer. The packers' profits should be controlled so as to prevent excessive charges and so that the policy already declared by the President in cases where war buying dominates the market, that 'we must make the prices to the public the same as the prices to the Government,' may be effectuated.

"The private-owned cars of the packing industry should continue to be controlled by the Director General of Railroads."

FOUR ADVISERS QUIT JUNIOR NAVAL RESERVE

James A. Farrell, Frederic R. Coudert, William H. Douglas, and Murray Hulbert Have Resigned.

Four additional members of the Advisory Board of the United States Junior Naval Reserve have resigned, it was learned yesterday. The reserve, which has no official connection with the Government, has national headquarters at 218 West Fifty-eighth Street, and about a month ago lost as members of the Advisory Board Felix M. Warburg of Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and William S. Kies, Vice President of the American International Corporation.

The members whose resignations were disclosed yesterday are James A. Farrell, President of the United States Steel Corporation; Frederick R. Coudert, the lawyer; William Harris Douglas, President of Arkell, Douglas & Co., 44 Whitehall Street, and Murray Hulbert, Dock Commissioner.

With the exception of Mr. Farrell, the resigning members declared that other interests prevented them from actually participating in the direction of the affairs of the reserve and that, therefore, they felt they should sever relations with it. At the office of the United States Steel Corporation it was stated that Mr. Farrell had quit the reserve, but no further announcement was made.

A report that the entire board had resigned could not be verified in full because of the absence from town of many of the members. Those who are listed on the reserve's letterheads as members of the board are Charles E. Bedford, Vice President of the Vacuum Oil Company, 61 Broadway; Major August Belmont; Reginald Fay, Chairman of the Alumni Association of the New York School Ship; Colgate Hoyt of Colgate Hoyt & Co.; Parkman T. Mason, Harvard Club; Edgar E. Lethridge, President of the Maritime Exchange; William H. Pleasants, President of the Ocean Steamship Company; J. Frederick Tams of Tams, Lemoine & Crane, yacht brokers, at 52 Pine Street, and Richard C. Veit, Secretary of the Standard Oil Company of New York.

C. Oliver Iselin of A. Iselin & Co., bankers, at 78 Broad Street, and Arthur W. MacGray, Secretary of the Neptune Association, 15 Whitehall Street, are also members of the board. Both said yesterday that they had not resigned.

Dr. William T. Hornaday, Director of the New York Zoological Park, is President of the Junior aval Reserve, but hopes soon to be relieved. He said:

"I want them to elect my successor because I am too occupied with other work that I cannot give the reserve the attention and encouragement it deserves. I want them to get some one who can give all his time to the work and push it along. The United States Junior Naval Reserve is doing a great work and will accomplish much if it gets the right kind of support."

Dr. Hornaday said he knew that resignations had taken place in the board, but added that the vacancies were being filled and that in two weeks or so the board would again be full.

SLACKERS DEFY ARREST.

Alabama Watsonites, Armed, Take Refuge in Mountains.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., May 29.—Hiding in the mountains near Rockford, Coosa County, are nine slackers and one army deserter, who, armed with rifles said to have been shipped to them in a coffin box, are defying arrest.

These men are not pro-Germans. They are Watsonites, their parents having been followers of Tom Watson and his paper, The Jeffersonian, which several months ago was suppressed by the Government. Their creed is "We'd rather be shot at home than in Europe."

The deserter is Ira Culver, a drafted man, whose aged father said he would rather have his son shot at home than die of pneumonia at Camp Gordon. The son was sick at Camp Gordon, and when he recovered he deserted and took refuge with the slackers in caves near his home.

Six of the slackers were called in the April 27 draft. They are Robert A. Mooney, James D. Pody, Homer Culver, Alvin Tipett, Thomas B. Owen, Elbert B. Dennis.

Two other men, in order to show the right spirit, voluntarily took the place of two of the slackers when the train left with drafted men yesterday.

ARMY STARTS A GAS SCHOOL

Officers Being Trained in This Line of Defense at Camp Humphreys.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29. — Secretary Baker announced today that instructors in gas defense were to be trained at Camp Hupmphreys, Virginia, the new camp of the Engineer Corps, south of Washington. The instruction will cover about a month, after which the graduates will become division gas officers, taking charge of the work of preparing soldiers for defense against gas attacks. About thirty officers will be trained at a time.

The gas officers now on duty with the various divisions received their training at the camp at American University, in this city. These completed their training last November and were assigned to duty at the different National Army and National Guard camps in this country. The new school has been established to meet the need for additional officers. A knowledge of chemistry is essential for entrance into the school.

The troops which are going to France now are well posted on the methods on combating gas attacks. No American troops have been sent to the front without practical experience in defending themselves against gas. The field training section of the gas defense service formerly was under the Sanitary Corps, but now is under the Engineers.

15,000 New Men at Camp Dix.

CAMP DIX, Burlington, N. J., May 29.—Within five days 15,000 National Army recruits have arrived here. At times the task of handling these men was stupendous, necessitating the recording of as many as two a minute over a period of several hours. Many of the soldiers, anxious to spend Memorial Day with their families, received forty-eight hours' furlough today. Major W. Cole Davis of New York, in charge of the Base Hospital here, was today promoted to be a Lieutenant Colonel.

OFFICIALS SILENT ON GENERAL WOOD

His Transfer from Foreign Service Remains Unexplained Despite Wide Comment.

MAY TRAIN MORE TROOPS

Friends Doubt, However, That He Will Be Sent Overseas—Case in March's Hands.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The detachment of Major Gen. Leonard Wood from the command of the National Army Division which he trained for oversea service remains unexplained, no official having advanced any reason for it. Secretary Baker stands by his position that the War Department is not called on to explain an order issued to an army officer. The White House is silent as to what passed between President Wilson and General Wood at their interview yesterday when the General appealed to the President to restore him to duty with troops and not relegate him to a purely administrative office.

In the meantime the Chief of the Army General Staff, General Peyton C. March, is said to be giving consideration to the application of General Wood for service with troops. From all that is understood here, there is no prospect that General Wood will get any command in the expeditionary forces. The most that he may expect, it is believed, is to be assigned to command another National Army division for training purposes. He is not under consideration for commanding troops in Italy and there is nothing to show that the War Department has any other purpose than to keep him in the United States.

As General Wood's case stands the failure to send him to Europe is apparently based on the omission of his name from a preference list submitted by General Pershing of general officers who would be acceptable to him as commanders. The War Department, according to the prevailing understanding, has construed this omission to mean that General Pershing does not want General Wood as one of his subordinate officers. There is no explanation, however, of the action of the War Department in permitting General Wood to make all his personal preparations for overseas service and even to proceed under orders to a port of embarkation, before notifying him that he was to be deprived of his command and sent to San Francisco for administrative work.

The fact that Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, second to General Wood among the highest ranking officers of the regular army, was deprived of overseas service, although he had been found physically fit for foreign duty, is being cited as a reason for showing that there was no specific discrimination against General Wood. The sequel to this statement is found in the suggestion that General Bell's name was also omitted from the list of general officers acceptable to General Pershing. It is the understanding that Major Gen. Hugh L. Scott, who commanded the division at Camp Dix, was another omission.

Considerable comment has been caused by this set of circumstances, because all three of these officers who were withheld from overseas service have held the office of Chief of the General Staff of the army. In General Scott's case the comment is intensified because, as Chief of Staff, he had recommended the selection of General Pershing as commander of the Expeditionary Forces. And it was General Scott who recommended that the rule be adopted that no general officer unacceptable to General Pershing be assigned to General Pershing's command. The omission of the name of General Scott from General Pershing's preference list is cited as the reason for keeping him at home. General Scott's case differs somewhat from those of Generals Wood and Bell in that he is past the age limit of active service, 64 years. Generals Wood and Bell are still well within the age limit.

To what extent the alleged negative attitude of General Pershing will be utilized as a reason for placing upon him the full responsibility for the displacement of General Wood and other high ranking officers of the line has not developed, although there are signs that this will be the idea advanced when the demand becomes widespread for some explanation of the cause of the revocation of his orders for overseas service.

WASHINGTON, May 29. (Associated Press.)—A plea that Major Gen. Leonard Wood be permitted to go to France was made in the House today by Representative McKenzie of Illinois, Republican.

"One of the most inspiring instances of the war," said he, "is the sight of that grizzled warrior standing at the White House door begging for a chance to go and fight."

RECREATES BARUCH BOARD.

Now a Separate Administrative Agency Under President's Order.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Under an executive order announced tonight President Wilson formally created the War Industries Board as a separate administrative agency to act for him and under his direction, with all the duties and powers informally conferred by the President last March in a letter to Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman of the board.

Many of the powers delegated are vested in Chairman Baruch, who is the President's right arm for war production. The board, originally a great division of the Council of National Defense, has been exercising its wide powers for three months, but its creation as a distinct branch of the Government under the President has awaited the enactment of the Overman bill, authorizing the President to reorganize Government agencies.

Besides exercising supervision over virtually the entire industrial fabric of the nation, with power to commandeer plants or take other drastic steps to assure adequacy of war supplies and speed up production, the board directs purchase for the Allies, eliminates competition for supplies between the various departments of the Government, has power to allocate materials and contracts and curtail the output of non-essentials, and fixes prices to be paid by the Government. Not the least important effect of the board's work is its influence in obtaining for the public the same prices on necessaries that the Government pays.

450 ENSIGNS GRADUATED.

Complete 15 Weeks' Course at Annapolis and Soon Will Join Navy.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 29.—A material addition to the trained force of officers of the navy was made here today when 450 young Ensigns of the reserve force received their certificates after having completed a course of fifteen weeks of intensive training at the Naval Academy. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, presented the certificates and made an address to the class.

The new officers will be temporarily commissioned and after a week's leave will report at the stations to which they have been assigned.

A new class of reserve officers, consisting of 700 members, will be formed here on June 11.

FIND BROWNING GUNS EFFECTIVE IN BARRAGE

35 of Them, Firing 500 Shots Each a Minute, Cover "Advance" at Camp Meade.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 29.—Two hundred thousand rounds of ammunition were fired from the new heavy Browning machine guns in a manoeuvre at Camp Meade this morning. The object was to demonstrate the ability of the machine gunners to drop a barrage to protect advancing forces. The experiment was one of the most interesting staged here, and was seen by the members of the French and British Missions and officers of the division, among them Majors S. Stuart Janney, Andrew W. Smith, P. W. Smith, and Charles Duguy, and Captain Frank J. Battles.

Dummies were used to represent the advancing Americans. The machine gunners kept their bullets raining on the "town" which was being attacked and directly in front of the "men" they were protecting. It would have been possible to substitute real soldiers for the dummies, as the fire of the gunners was so accurate that not one of the dummies was struck by the barrage. The manoeuvre was staged on the machine gun range, south of the Base Hospital.

All who were present today were more than pleased with the manner in which the Browning guns performed. Five hundred shots a minute were fired from each of the thirty-five guns which were in use.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Two hundred thousand men of draft age who, because of minor physical defects, have been held by examining surgeons over the country for limited military service, are to be employed in producing or handling equipment for the army. Provost Marshal General Crowder announced tonight that the Army Staff Corps would utilize the services of these registrants and thus release fighting men for the front line.

General Crowder issued the first call today under the new plan. Orders went forth to Governors of States for upward of 9,000 men for service in spruce production for airplanes. The men will be allowed to volunteer until June 6. After that date a report will be made to the Provost Marshal General, and if there are not sufficient volunteers allotments will be assigned to the various States to be filled by draft.

Some 10,000 men of the army now are engaged in getting out spruce timber in the Northwest and the Signal Corps is constantly increasing this number. Consequently, sending the new men to this field will constitute no new policy, and it is understood that it has no relation to complaints that Industrial Workers of the World there have retarded the output of spruce.

Some twenty-four trades or classes, including railroad, transport and construction men, office workers and laborers are desired for the spruce division When this division has been filled, men will be called to fill other staff services of the army until the 200,000 total has been exhausted.

In a statement announcing the new plan, General Crowder said the solution of the question of what to do with these men had been "one of the great problems of the draft." Some of the men, it was explained, have a thumb, toe, or eye missing, but almost every one of them is engaged in active business and is held to be of some use in the military establishment. After months of study it was decided to call them into branches of the army engaged in producing equipment for the fighting men.

5,334 MORE DRAFT MEN GO.

Many Boards Now Depleted of Those in Class 1—A.

New York City yesterday gave 5,334 additional drafted men to the colors. The men left for Camp Upton, Camp Wadsworth, Camp Sevier, and Camp Hancock.

With the exodus of the quota yesterday many of the draft boards were depleted of their men in Class 1-A, and it was said that the next drafts from these boards would consist of the men newly registered on June 5. The contingent which left yesterday was the largest in size leaving in a single day.

There was considerable confusion attending the departure of the men for the South. This was due to the fact that when the New York men reached Jersey City railroad stations they found large numbers of New Jersey men leaving for Camp Dix. About 10,000 relatives and friends gathered to speed the 1,700 New Jersey boys, and the large crowds proved a difficult job for the police.

Martin Conboy, director of the draft for the city, said yesterday that registrants of Class 1 classified as eligible for military service subject to necessary surgical operation or medical treatment, will not be compelled to undergo treatment. It will be voluntary, he said, with the men whether they want to undergo the operation or treatment. The Government will see to it that they get adequate medical attention free of charge.

All men who have or who will become 21 years of age between June 5, 1917, and June 5, 1918, must register on June 5, 1918, under the selective service law. Any one who will not be home on that day should go to the nearest local board, fill out the registration card, and mail it, with a stamped self-addressed envelope, to the local board having jurisdiction over his home address. Registration will take place between 7 A. M. and 9 P. M. at the local boards covering the registrant's address.

FORM NEW TIE WITH ITALY.

Americans Join in Movement for a University Union.

ROME, May 28.—A meeting has been held here under the auspices of the American University Union in Europe for the purpose of forming an Italo-American university union. The United States was represented by Ambassador Page, Professor George H. Nettleton of Yale, and Professor Paul van Dyke of Princeton, and Italy by Signor Barenini, Minister of Education; Professor Alberto Tonelli, rector of Rome University, and Senator William Marconi.

Patriotic speeches were delivered by several of the conferees, predicting that the organization in process of formation would be another link in the chain of friendship binding American and Italy.

SENDS BERNSTORFF CUP TO THE METAL MARKET

Golf Prize at Lenox Tournament Now Will Be Exchanged for War Savings Stamps.

Among the interesting acquisitions of plate and metal ware at the War Savings Metal Market at Fifth Avenue and Fortieth Street yesterday was a solid silver cup which the former German Ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, had presented to the winner of a golf tournament at Lenox, Mass., in 1897. The cup was won by the late David W. Bishop and was sent to the War Savings Metal Market to be exchanged for its value in War Savings Stamps by Mr. Bishop's widow, who is now Mrs. John E. Parsons of 853 Fifth Avenue. The cup was not appraised yesterday, but, according to Mrs. Joseph Griswold Deane, it is about as expensive a piece of metal as has been brought into the market.

The market continued to do a flourishing business yesterday, more than $2,200 worth of plate being sold for War Savings Stamps. Among the visitors yesterday was Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, wife of the Governor, who came to get $3 worth of Thrift Stamps in exchange for a silver coffee pot which she had sent to the market on Monday.

With the Metal War Savings Market calling to the housewife to deliver her silver plate for War Savings Stamps, the Metalware Club of 280 Madison Avenue also issued an appeal to the housewife yesterday urging upon her the necessity of conserving her household utensils as a protection against a shortage of such materials in the future. The appeal says:

"Save your pots and pans, Madam Housewife; the outlook is that for sometime to come these useful household utensils will be both scarce in quantity and high in price. This is the warning given on the authority of some of the largest manufacturers of enameled and galvanized household wares in the country, who point out that the situation is due solely to wartime conditions."

Is He Your Boy?

Mother—you've watched him grow from the time he first gave evidence of his boyishness by wearing a real pair of breeches "with legs," until now, when he keeps you always at wits' ends with pranks and mischievousness.

You've watched him at his studies, and you've watched him at his play. You've watched him develop those characteristics and peculiarities that make him so exclusively YOUR boy.

And now, when he drops into bed at night, too tired to wash his dirty face or smooth his tousled hair, you watch him and wonder how you can buy him clothes as fast as he can wear them out.

We watched him, too. We had to know all boys as part of our sixty years of learning how to clothe Young America. And we know

Jimmie, who scorns "civilians" for a baseball "rigout,"—

Dick, whose idea of a "swell" costume is Uncle Harry's uniform,—

Eddie, who is fastidious about his neckties, regardless of the rest of his attire,—

And we know Fred and Tommie and George and the rest of them, who are, oh so different from every other boy.

Now the Boys' Section is going to help you solve some of the perplexities of appareling YOUR boy.

These Boys' Talks Will Appear from Time to Time, the Next To-morrow, Friday.

L. I. R. R. TO TRIPLE FARE TO JAMAICA

Will Charge 30 Cents on June 1 Under the 3-Cents-a-Mile Rate.

SERVICE BOARD TO PROTEST

Will Tell Secretary McAdoo Increase Within City Limits Will Seriously Affect Local Service.

Announcement was made yesterday by the Long Island Railroad Company that on June 1 the McAdoo fare rate of three cents a mile would become operative on all the company's lines. No exception will be made for local service, and the fare from Jamaica to this city will be thirty cents instead of ten, the present rate, and a proportionate increase will prevail between intermediate points. Peter H. Woodward, Secretary to Ralph Peters, President of the company, said it was the company's understanding that previous ruling on rates would not affect the new order.

About a year ago the company applied to the Public Service Commission for permission to increase its fare to passengers within the Brooklyn area from five cents to ten and was refused. News of the way in which the company interpreted the recent rate order greatly disturbed the commission. On Tuesday and Wednesday representatives of the National Association of Railway Commissioners are to confer in Washington with Mr. McAdoo to learn whether the new rate is to have effect within municipalities where franchise rights have been granted. James B. Walker, secretary of the local commission and of the national association, will attend the conference with Commissioners Travis H. Whitney, Charles S. Hervey, and the commission's counsel, William L. Ransom, who has prepared a statement on the subject.

Previous to the conference the local representatives will have a talk with Mr. McAdoo concerning the effect the rate order may have on local transportation. It is understood that Mr. McAdoo will be told that within the city limits the Long Island Company is operating a rapid transit service in competition with the purely local service, and that if the increase announced by the company should prevail it might establish grounds for a demand on the part of all of the corporations operating surface and rapid transit lines for a substantial increase in fare.

On July 1 the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company will begin the operation of an extension of its elevated service from Cypress Hills to Jamaica, thus saving the present necessity of a transfer from the elevated to the trolley lines. But even with this addition the service to Jamaica will be inadequate, and many persons will be forced to pay the greatly increased rate in order to make the trip between Manhattan and Jamaica in about thirty minutes instead of the fifty-odd minutes which the cheaper lines require for the journey.

Besides seeking to save a considerable part of the public from being compelled to pay such an advance in fare, the commission is also anxious to protect its jurisdiction over all transportation within the city limits. Mr. Woodward admitted that the company was not fully informed as to the manner in which the rate order was to be applied. Then he said:

"But it seems definite that every ticket we sell, no matter to what point, must be on the basis of 3 cents a mile. We understand that the order applies to the entire Long Island system. There is no doubt that the new order will compel us to charge 30 cents to Jamaica. There will be no differentiation in the charges as between local and express trains."

Mr. Woodward added that the company contemplated making no increase in the commutation tickets for June, but that probably the 10 per cent. increase would be charged for July and that mileage tickets would be discontinued on June 10. Trains carrying passengers to and from the city have been greatly congested during the rush hours for a long time, and it is considered a curious fact that no matter how fast the city increases its rapid transit service to distant points in Queens the passenger income to the Long Island Company for local service remains about the same.

DROPS VON BERNSTORFF.

Brown University Cancels Honorary Degree Conferred on Him.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 29.—Formal announcement that the Board of Fellows of Brown University had canceled the honorary degree of doctor of laws conferred in 1910 upon Count von Bernstorff, former German Ambassador, was made by President William H. P. Faunce at the commencement exercises today. President Faunce said the board had voted to take this action because while Count von Bernstorff "was Ambassador of the Imperial German Government to the United States, and while the nations were still at peace, he was guilty of conduct dishonorable alike in a gentleman and a diplomat."

The vote carried with it a provision that von Bernstorff's name be stricken from the list of honorary alumni and omitted from future publications of the university.

The honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred today upon Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, President William A. Neilson of Smith College, and Elon Rouse Brown, New York. Other honorary degrees were announced as follows:

Doctor of Letters—Charles L. Nichols, Worcester, Mass.

Doctor of Divinity—The Rev. Joseph Taylor, Cheng-tu, West China; the Rev. Edward Holyoke, Providence.

Master of Arts—Inman E. Page, President of the Agricultural and Normal University, Langston, Okla.; William A. Viall, manufacturer, Providence; Miss Mary S. Gardner, Superintendent of the Providence District Nursing Association.

The university awarded a total of 178 degrees.

James Manning scholarships were awarded to Clarence R. Adams, Eden Park, R. I.; R. W. Benton, New Bedford, Mass.; Emery M. Foster, Belmont, Mass.; Reginald G. Harris, Lowell, Mass.; George Julius Heidt of New York, and Sze-Chen Liao of Kating, China.

W. D. ELLIS LEFT $1,000,000.

A Half Brother and Sister Get $300,000 Each and Share Residue.

The will of William D. Ellis, President of the Schenectady Locomotive Works before they were sold, who died at 48 West Fifty-seventh Street on May 23 last, disposed of an estate of more than $1,000,000. The largest charitable bequest is $30,000 to the Hospital Association of Schenectady, while $2,000 goes to the First Presbyterian Church of that city. The Bethesda Protestant Episcopal Church of Saratoga gets $2,000, and $1,000 each goes to the Children's Aid Society, St. John's Guild, and West Side Day Nursery of New York.

Mrs. Ellis gave $300,000 each and the residuary estate to his half-sister, Effie C. Andrews, and half-brother, George D. Cochran, both of 48 West Fifty-seventh Street. James M. Andrews, a nephew, got $170,000, and Lillian Ellis Gilmour, niece, received $100,000. Rose Andrews Cochran received $135,000, and a trust fund of $50,000 went to Edward C. Ellis. Bequests of $10,000 each were left to J. R. P. Cochran of Edinburgh, Scotland, and William E. Gilmour of Schenectady.

HARD COAL SUPPLY TO BE BIGGER HERE

West and South to be Restricted to Bituminous, Philadelphia Convention Is Told.

PHILADELPHIA, May 29.—Members of the National Coal Association, in the closing session of their convention here today, pledged themselves to subordinate all other things to the production of coal; to continue their support of the United States Fuel Administrator in his efforts to increase the output, and to aid the President in the war.

The delegates, who represent the bituminous mine owners of the country, elected J. H. Wheelwright of Baltimore, President; H. N. Taylor, Kansas City; G. H. Barker, Columbus, Ohio, and T. H. Watkins, New York, Vice Presidents; J. D. A. Morrow, Washington, Secretary, and J. J. Tierney, Philadelphia, Treasurer.

The newly elected President told the members that there was no regiment at the front that had a greater duty to perform than the coal producers.

"You represent," Mr. Wheelwright said, "the necessity of necessities, and without your co-operation how can this magnificent bridge that has been built by the United States Shipping Board, consisting of concrete, steel, and wooden ships, exist unless each of us decides today that we will produce more coal?"

A substantial increase in the supply of anthracite to be furnished to the New England and North Atlantic States was promised by Joseph B. Dickson, Chairman of the Anthracite Committee of the United States Fuel Administration, in an address to the convention. To provide this increased supply, he said, anthracite would be barred from States in the trans-Mississippi, Central Western, and Southern territories.

The distribution plans of the Fuel Administration, Mr. Dickson said, would allow an increase of 1,497,621 tons of hard coal to the New England States and 3,538,921 tons to the Atlantic States. He warned domestic consumers in the Middle West and South to make arrangements at once to use bituminous coal in place of anthracite.

During the coal year, which runs until April 1, 1919, Mr. Dickson said, 54,345,783 tons of anthracite of domestic sizes would be available for distribution to consumers, an increase of 2,668,323 tons over the quantity for the coal year 1916-17. He announced the distribution in 1916-17 and the allotment for the current coal year as follows:

New England	8,833,379	10,381,000
Atlantic States	27,878,233	31,417,151
Central States	5,100,024	3,481,945
Northwest	2,710,188	2,380,000
Trans-Mississippi	627,985	.....
Twenty-four other States	137,988	.....
Railroad supply	2,481,754	2,481,754
Canada	3,856,021	3,602,000
Miscellaneous exports	51,930	51,930
Army and navy camps	.....	600,000
Total	51,677,480	54,346,783

Shortage of labor will make it impossible for the bituminous mines of the country to produce more than 590,000,000 tons this year, it was said by A. W. Calloway, Director of Bituminous Coal Distribution, United States Fuel Administration. Adding this to the 80,000,000 tons set as the limit of the production of anthracite, the total production of the country will be 56,000,000 tons less than the needs named at yesterday's meeting by J. D. A. Morrow, General Director of Fuel Distribution for the Government.

Mr. Calloway said that "it will not be possible to secure 100 per cent. from the existing bituminous mines unless radical measures are taken in the very near future to secure and maintain at the mines a sufficiently supply of labor.

JERSEY'S NEW 'PHONE RATES

Company Official Says Receipts Will Be Cut $800,000 a Year.

New toll rates to become effective on July 1 in New Jersey have been filed by the New York Telephone Company with the Public Utility Commission at Trenton, N. J. A statement sent out last night by F. H. Bethell, First Vice President of the company, said that the new rates would mean a reduction in the company's receipts of $800,000 a year. The statement also said:

"While conditions have changed materially since the order was made by the commission last November the company is accepting it in the hope and belief that the effect on revenue will not be too severe to be borne. If results should prove otherwise the company will ask the commission for relief in some form or other, and the company has no doubt that the commission will grant whatever relief may be necessary."

EXPRESS EMPLOYES TO GET HIGHER PAY

Increase for 100,000 Will Accompany Federal Merger, President Taylor Announces.

RISE IN RATES IS SOUGHT

New Concern to be Known as American Railroad Express Company —Merger Pleases Officials.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The new express monopoly created by merging the Adams, American, Wells Fargo, and Southern companies under agreement with Director General McAdoo will have as a foremost policy the fair treatment of shippers and the public, George C. Taylor, President of the combination, announced today. Mr. Taylor also promised wage increases for the 100,000 employes.

"The policy," said Mr. Taylor, "will be close co-operation with all patrons and the public in general in an effort to give better service in every way. The new company will settle up the unadjusted matters, such as claims and other items, of the old companies, so as to give the public the least possible delay or annoyance.

"The new company will take over the pension plans of the old companies, and a new pension plan will be worked out. Plans are already under way for scaling up of many employes toward more uniformity in the various classes.

"New through car rates will be established to cut out the rehandling and to better utilize railroad facilities."

Although the combination of transportation facilities does not occur formally until July 1, the companies will begin immediately to work out actual co-operation by interchangeable use of delivery wagons and other facilities.

The corporate identities of the old companies will not be destroyed, but the names of the old concerns are expected to drop out of general use soon after the merger becomes effective.

Officials and others in the financial district interested in the express companies expressed themselves as pleased with the merger. It had been hoped by officials of some of the companies that they would be taken over by the Government on a basis similar to that of the railroads, but, failing this, the merger plan is considered satisfactory. The hope was expressed by nearly all that the arrangement, whereby the Government becomes in a sense a partner of the companies, would result in an increase in express rates.

The new corporation will be known as the American Railroad Express Company. It was originally planned to call it the Federal Express Company, but it was learned, on investigation, that this name has been copyrighted by a New York company, although never used, and consequently was not available.

It is believed the big and well-equipped building of the American Express Company at 61 Broadway will become the headquarters and downtown distributing office of the new organization, the offices of the Wells Fargo, Adams, and Southern Express Companies, next door, being given up. Any reduction in the total number of employes will be made gradually. This saving will be chiefly in the elimination of competing and duplicating delivery service.

The banking business of the American Express Company, whose travelers' checks are known all over the world, will be continued and may even be expanded, as it is considered by the Government that this service is more valuable, particularly in Europe, at the present time, than ever.

DEFENDS POSTAL SERVICE.

Burleson's Aid Attacks Complaint of New York Merchants.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Delay in transmission of mails is laid to excessive demands on the Post Office Department due to the war and not to a sacrifice of service in the interest of economy, in a statement made to the House Rules Committee today by J. C. Koons, First Assistant Postmaster General. A resolution calling for a general investigation of the Post Office Department is before the committee.

A report on slow mail delivery recently compiled by the Merchants' Association of New York was attacked by Mr. Koons as unfair. Letters from business establishments published by the association were deleted to show that the complaints were more serious than intended, he said.

ELEVATED TRAFFIC HALTED.

Rear Trucks of Car Ran Upon Switch on Sixth Avenue Line.

Traffic on the Sixth Avenue elevated and the Ninth Avenue elevated above 104th Street on Eighth Avenue was tied up from 6:45 o'clock until after 7 o'clock last night when the rear car of a train ran upon a switch that was either defective or carelessly operated at 138th Street.

No one in the train was hurt and no damage was done. After a short delay trains were kept in operation below 104th Street by switching the uptown trains to the downtown tracks when they arrived at that point. Inspectors of the Public Service Commission began an investigation last night to ascertain the cause of the difficulty.

PRESIDENT URGES NATION TO SAVE

People, He Says, Must Be Adjusted Economically and Industrially to War Conditions.

NEXT LOAN HIGHEST YET

Asks Every One to Practice Thrift and Buy Government Securities.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—President Wilson today came to the support of Secretary McAdoo's thrift pledge campaign. Realizing that to wage the war to the achievement of the purposes laid down by the President the American people are faced with a long and serious struggle, possibly testing the resources of wealth and character to the extreme limit of endurance and self-denial, Mr. McAdoo inaugurated a fortnight ago the campaign of pledges by all patriotic persons to do all that lay in their power to conserve food, fuel, labor, and money as a means of winning the war. The first aim of this campaign, as stated by Mr. McAdoo, was to bring about a condition on the part of the American people that would insure the success of the next war loan, which is to be larger than any yet attempted.

To give the pledge campaign the impulse possible only upon executive approval, President Wilson has issued the following signed letter appealing for a nation-wide rally as to the national purpose to win the war by personal sacrifice:

"This war is one of nations—not of armies—and all of our 100,000,000 people must be economically and industrially adjusted to war conditions if this nation is to play its full part in the conflict. The problem before us is not primarily a financial problem, but rather a problem of increased production of war essentials, and the saving of the materials and the labor necessary for the support and equipment of our army and our navy. Thoughtless expenditure of money for nonessentials uses up the labor of men, the products of the farm, mines, and factories, and overburdens transportation, all of which must be used to the utmost and at their best for war purposes.

"The great results which we seek can be obtained only by the participation of every member of the nation, young and old, in a national concerted thrift movement. I therefore urge that our people everywhere pledge themselves, as suggested by the Secretary of the Treasury, to the practice of thrift; to serve the Government to their utmost in increasing production in all fields necessary to the winning of the war; to conserve food and fuel and useful materials of every kind; to devote their labor only to the most necessary tasks; and to buy only those things which are essential to individual health and efficiency; and that the people, as evidence of their loyalty, invest all that they can save in Liberty bonds and war savings stamps.

"The securities issued by the Treasury Department are so many of them within the reach of every one that the door of opportunity in this matter is wide open to all of us. To practice thrift in peace times is a virtue and brings great benefit to the individual at all times; with the desperate need of the civilized world today for materials and labor with which to end the war, the practice of individual thrift is a patriotic duty and a necessity.

"I appeal to all who now own either Liberty bonds or war savings stamps to continue to practice economy and thrift and to appeal to all who do not own Government securities to do likewise and purchase them to the extent of their means. The man who buys Government securities transfers the purchasing power of his money to the United States Government until after this war, and to that same degree does not buy in competition with the Government.

"I earnestly appeal to every man, woman, and child to pledge themselves on or before the 28th of June to save constantly and to buy as regularly as possible the securities of the Government; and to do this, so far as possible, through membership in war savings societies. The 28th of June ends this special period of enlistment in the great volunteer army of production and saving here at home. May there be none unenlisted on that day!

TO RESTRICT LIQUOR SALES.

Rockaway Resort Dealers Have Banished the Flask and the "Growler."

According to notices which were posted yesterday in most of the hotels and public drinking places throughout the entire Rockaway and Rockaway Beach districts the liquor dealers will refuse to sell whisky in flasks, have banished the "growler" for the period of the war, and the price of all classes of drinks has been advanced. This action has been taken just on the eve of the opening of the Rockaway resorts.

Refusal to sell whisky in flasks is to prevent liquor reaching soldiers. Philip Fetner, Secretary of the Rockaway Liquor Dealers Association, said that so far as known every liquor dealer in the district has observed the law forbidding the sale of liquor to men in uniform, but it is known that soldiers and sailors have obtained liquor through civilians who purchased flasks.

To Entertain Wounded Soldiers.

The War Hospital and Entertainment Committee, affiliated with the New York War Camp Community Service, will present a vaudeville program this evening to the sick and wounded soldiers in the United States Marine Hospital, Staten Island. Tomorrow evening an entertainment will be given to the wounded men in the United States General Hospital in the Bronx. The committee was organized to entertain soldiers and sailors in the war hospitals of New York and nearby cities. The professional entertainers give their services. The offices of the committee are at Aeolian Hall, 33 West Forty-second Street. Mrs. Louis S. McClellan is Chairman of the committee and Miss Agnes M. Kommer is Secretary.

HONOR INSIGNIA FOR WAR WORKERS

Flags to be Awarded to Shipyards, Medals and Badges to Individuals.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Shipyard workers and employes in other wartime industries are to receive medals and badges in recognition of their work if they give their best efforts in carrying out the war program.

Announcement of a comprehensive plan was made today by Edward N. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board.

"There will be three methods of rewarding unusual and patriotic performances," said Mr. Hurley.

"The yard that makes the best all-around performance each month, with every factor considered, will be awarded the privilege of flying a flag combining the color blue with the United States Shipping Board flag. Every city having a shipyard will have a chance to help in the blue flag. The yard rated second will be awarded a flag combining the color red with the Shipping Board flag, and the yard rated third, the color white.

"In each instance, where a flag is awarded, it will fly at the masthead for one month, after which it will be removed to the yard of the subsequent record holder. Any yard winning first place three months in succession will be awarded a permanent flag.

"Service badges will be awarded under a plan worked out by the War Badge Board named by Felix Frankfurter, Chairman of the Policies Board of the Labor Administration, and workers in war industries, other than the shipyards, will be eligible. It will be a badge of bronze, and there will be no variance in design in the badges awarded to workers in different branches of Government war service.

"Each civilian worker who for at least four consecutive months has been employed on Government work and performed his work faithfully shall be certified by the employer to the Government official at the plant, or to an official designated for this purpose by the War Badge Board, as entitled to a war industries badge.

"To the holder of a war industries badge who continues in faithful performance of his work for four consecutive months after being awarded the badge a bar shall be given. This bar will be so made that it can be attached to the badge. Other bars signifying four months of continuous and faithful service may be awarded subsequently. On these bars the nature of the work performed by the recipient may be designated."

DUTCH PROTEST TO BERLIN.

Shipping Imperilled by Change in the German Prize Law.

AMSTERDAM, May 29.—Holland has protested against the modification of the German prize law of April 24, according to a statement made by Foreign Minister Loudon in the Chamber. The Minister said that, despite the German offer to make exceptions and provide conditional safeguards in certain cases, the revised rules imperiled Dutch shipping.

A dispatch from Stockholm May 2 quoted the Swedish Legation at Berlin as reporting an amendment, immediately effective, to the German prize regulations. The amendment provided, the dispatch said, that neutral vessels should be considered to have been put into operation in the interest of the warfare of Germany's enemies when the State whose flag vessels were entitled to carry had made a tonnage contract with a country enemy to Germany, or when the principal part of the merchant marine of a neutral State was making voyages for countries at war with Germany.

WARNS AMERICAN TRADERS.

Argentina Needs Ships and Credit, Says Buenos Aires Paper.

BUENOS AIRES, May 29.—A long article on American efforts to win trade in Argentina is published today by La Razon, a leading afternoon newspaper, which says that American business men are endeavoring to replace the Germans in Argentine commerce.

There are obstacles in the way of their success, La Razon says, and it will be necessary for them to make more serious efforts to secure conditions facilitating credit and the supplying of adequate tonnage. Otherwise, it predicts, all their trade propaganda will be futile.

The Argentine market, the paper says, will welcome the Americans if they meet the Argentinians half way. As illustrating the growth of American trade, it points to more than a threefold increase of imports from America in 1917 over 1914, but it asserts that a trade growth of this sort will not continue under present methods.

It is announced that Argentinians have subscribed 130,000,000 francs to the Italian war loan.

Shells Made Good Omen in France for Our Labor Mission.

LONDON, May 18, (Associated Press.)—Members of the American Labor Mission believe they found a good omen in the ruins of the imposing St. Louis Cathedral at Verdun, which they viewed on their recent trip to the fighting fronts in France.

Before the cathedral was subjected to shellfire the word "Louis" stood out in bold relief on one part of the building. A shell, or possibly two or three of them, freakishly tore away the "L," the "O" and the "I," but left intact the "U. S."

In addressing mass meetings in France and England the Americans symbolized the incident with the outstanding part the United States is destined to play in the conflict.

Renewed Report of Oil Fields Plot.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—New reports of a German plot to destroy the Tampico oil wells, from which the American and British navies draw a large part of their oil supplies, reached the State Department today. It was said that an attempt to destroy the wells was to be made tomorrow. Many reports of a similar nature have reached Washington. Officials here are depending on the Mexican authorities to protect the wells.

WOMAN JOINS THE MILITIA.

Head of Motor Corps Will Rank as a Captain.

Adelaide B. Baylis, Captain of the Motor Corps of the National League for Women's Service, was sworn into the service of the New York State Militia yesterday morning at the 71st Regiment Armory, and will take rank as Captain in that body. The oath of allegiance was administered by Major John Ryan.

Captain Baylis will continue at the head of the League Motor Corps, which has more than 100 women motor car drivers. It is expected that later Captain Baylis will be called to service in the woman's emergency ambulance corps which Adjt. Gen. Sherrill has announced is to be formed. The league's motor corps was organized before the United States entered the war and the women members have been giving their time and the use of their cars to serve the army and navy, the Red Cross, and different branches of the Federal and State governments. Captain Baylis will continue to wear the khaki which is the uniform of the corps, but there will be added a band of green to the collar and sleeves.

STOPS RUNAWAY IN 5TH AV.

Patrolman Patrick Walsh of Traffic C was dragged for a block and a half down Fifth Avenue by a runaway team attached to a Knickerbocker ice wagon yesterday morning. He succeeded in stopping the horses at Thirty-third Street after receiving contusions and abrasion of the right leg. Dr. Scaufer, from the New York Hospital, attended him and sent him home.

Patrolman Walsh was at Thirty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue, regulating traffic, when he noticed the team dashing down the avenue, weaving in and out among automobiles. Stopping traffic at his corner the patrolman ran in the direction of the team and grabbed the reins of the horse on the left side. A cheer went up when he finally brought the team to a stop.

According to the police the wagon had been left in front of a building in Fifth Avenue at Thirty-sixth Street while the driver, Albert Nestel of 350 West Forty-seventh Street, was delivering ice.

PERSISTENT YANKS CLING TO HEELS OF RED SOX BY THRASHING WHITE ELEPHANTS TWICE

YANKEES GET BOTH ENDS OF TWIN BILL

Huggins's Clan Disposes of Mackmen Easily by Scores of 7 to 2 and 12 to 2.

TALLOW BALL MAKES BOW

Finneran Makes His Exit After Foreign Substance Is Discovered in Local Pitcher's Glove.

A brand new wrinkle in trick pitching was unearthed at the Polo Grounds yesterday when the Yankees were separating the Athletics from a double victory, winning the first game, 7 to 2; and the second, 12 to 2.

Joe Finneran, the latest addition to the Yanks' staff, started to pitch the second game and the Mackian batters discovered that Joe's shoots were assuming the shape of a pretzel. They began to give the ball microscopic examination and Umpire George Moriarty was called into consultation. After all the evidence was in it was discovered that Finneran had a chunk of tallow in his glove, and thereby added the tallow ball to the long list of tricks for which the umpires have to keep open an eagle eye.

The tallow ball cannot be called a great success, for while Finneran was in the box, in the fourth inning, Walker and Burns both smashed home runs into the left field bleachers. Manager Miller Huggins was afraid that they would have to put a baseball mask on the ball on the fence to save it from destruction if Finneran were kept in the box, so he gave way to Mogridge in the fifth inning.

In the opening game Slim Love came through with another impressive victory, being especially effective with runners on the bases. Slim also donated the batting gem of the first contest by crashing a three-bagger to right field in the second inning, thereby producing a run by sending Walters, his catcher, home on the wallop.

Love is the tallest pitcher at large and Walters is the shortest catcher, and this long and short battery kept Connie Mack's batters in hand all the time. Geary, one of the Athletics' strange pitchers, was on the job for Connie and the Yanks bunched hits on him judiciously.

In the second inning of this first tilt, Pratt walked and went to third on Pipp's single. Ping Bodie rattled a double to right centre scoring Pratt and pushing Pipp to third. Miller died at first, and when Walters rolled to Burns Pipp was nailed at the plate, he and Perkins becoming so badly tangled up in each other's legs that it took some time to unravel them.

Then something happened which will be remembered for a long time by those who were fortunate to witness it Ping crossed the plate on the rapid end of a double steal, Walters dusting down to second. Love sent his pony catcher home with a terrific three-bagger to right center. Slim didn't want to tire himself all out running or he might have crossed the plate in a pinch. He covered ground pretty fast as it was, going from first to second in three steps and from second to third in about two and a half.

The Athletics got a run in the third when Walker got two bases by virtue of Miller's muff of a fly ball and scored on Burns's single. In the Yank's portion of the same stanza, Peck walked, stole second and scored on Pratt's hit. Peck was safe in the fifth on Burns's error, then stole second and was driven home by Pratt. Pratt took second on the throw-in and tallied on Pipp's single.

Singles by Pipp and Bodie came in the eighth, and Pipp scored while the Mackmen were negotiating a double play. In the ninth the Athletics got their last run. Dugan singled, went to second on an out and scored on McAvoy's hit, when that gentleman batted for Geary.

In the second half of the demoralization of the Athletics the Yanks mauled two pitchers, Elmer Myers and Adams, pretty badly. Finneran's tallow ball was discovered and Joe was erased from the picture before the Athletics had a chance to hit the tallow as hard as they started to do. The emery ball, the shine ball, the talcum powder ball, the licorice ball, have all been hit hard, but the debut of the tallow ball, with Walker and Burns hitting home runs in quick succession, received a greater welcome than any of the other styles of trick pitching ever did.

These two home runs, coming in the fourth inning, constituted the only scoring the Mackmen were able to negotiate. Mogridge came into the game with nothing on the ball except his cunning right hand, and he held the Athletics safe after that.

The Yanks had a merry-go-round party with Myers in the third inning. A storm of five hits, all of them singles, by Gilhooley, Peckinpaugh, Baker, Pratt, and Bodie, together with an error in centre by Walker, gave the Yanks five runs.

Adams, who succeeded Myers, did pretty well up to the sixth, when Miller opened with a two-bagger to the left field fence and scored on Truck Hannah's smash to centre.

That brief uprising marked the downfall of Adams, for in the next inning the hit-typhoon broke and hits began to sprinkle all over the lot. Baker walked and scored when Pratt jammed a double to left. Pipp then did some tumbling and got to first after a running broad dive. He rolled the ball to Burns at first and Burns and Adams both tried to pick it up, and got in each other's way. When Pipp arrived he found all traffic blocked, so he went head first over the assemblage and was safe.

Bodie's hit sent him home and Miller laid down a nice sacrifice. Truck Hannah sent both Pipp and Bodie home with a two-base drive to centre. Walker juggled the ball in centre field and Truck went to third, scoring on Mogridge's single. The game was such a cinch that Manager Huggins sent in a flock of substitutes in the last inning.

RED SOX TWICE VICTORS.

Take First Game from Senators, 4 to 2, and Second by 3 to 0.

BOSTON, May 29.—Boston took both games of a double-header from Washington today, winning the first, 4 to 2, and stopping Walter Johnson's winning career in the second game, 3 to 0.

Jones held Washington to five hits in the second game. Sam Rice, on a furlough from Fort Terry until Friday night, played right field for Washington in this game, with Picinich, who arrived today from Atlanta, catching the last inning. It was Jones's first victory for Boston.

GREEN CRUSHES BROWN.

Heavy Hitting Plays Stellar Role in 11 to 2 Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 29.—In one of the poorest games played on Andrews Field this season, Dartmouth today defeated Brown by 11 to 2. Errors by Brunonian players figured largely in the result. Porter, at short, had an off day, while Knight's lapses proved expensive, coming as they did when hits meant runs.

Up to the sixth frame, the game broke fairly even. Dartmouth then solved Knight's twirling and hits and errors came thick and fast. When the smoke cleared seven runs had been chalked up for the Green. The score by innings:

PHILS CLINCH GAME AS TESREAU WAVERS

Heavy Stick Work by Moran's Men in Seventh Crumples Giants' Early Lead.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 29.—For six innings of today's game between the Giants and Phillies Jeff Tesreau pitched gilt-edged ball, but in the seventh he wobbled badly and Moran's men swept away the slender lead compiled by the Giants early in the fray and clinched a victory by a score of 5 to 2. Mike Prendergast, on the other hand, was hit hard in the first two innings, but steadied down after the Giants had registered their second tally and was invincible for the remainder of the game.

Young was an easy out on a roller to Bancroft in the first inning, but Kauff doubled against the right field wall. Burns boosted a fly to Cy Williams and Zimmerman cracked a double to right centre, scoring Kauff. Holke started the Giants off in the second inning with a double to right centre. He took third on McCarty's out and crossed the plate when Niehoff singled to centre.

The Phillies hung up their first tally in the third inning. With two out, Bancroft worked Tesreau for a pass and pilfered second, and Williams's double to right scored him. In the sixth Moran's men loaded the bases with two out, but Eddie Burns lost a chance to drive in some runs by lifting a pop fly to Fletcher. Tesreau, who was somewhat wild in that inning, cracked wide open in the following frame.

Prendergast led off in the seventh and was out on a fly which Fletcher pulled down in short left. Bancroft singled to centre and Tesreau failed to get the ball over the plate for Williams, the lank centrefielder drawing a pass. Jeff got himself into a hole pitching to Stock and had to groove the ball. Stock drove to left for a base, scoring Bancroft and putting Williams on third. Luderus singled over second, scoring Williams, and putting Stock on third. Cravath hit to Tesreau and Stock was run down between third and home, but Meusel banged a double to left on which Luderus and Cravath tallied. Luderus stole second as McGaffigan walked, but the inning came to an abrupt close when Meusel, essaying a double steal with McGaffigan, fell into a trap set for him by McCarty with a bluff throw to second and was picked off third.

FORDHAM DEFEATED AGAIN.

Pelham Bay Naval Reserves Take Maroon Into Camp, 10 to 6.

The nine from the Pelham Bay Naval Reserve Station defeated Fordham in a loosely played game on Fordham Field yesterday afternoon by a score of 10 to 6. It was the fourth consecutive defeat for the collegians. Each team got fourteen safeties, but the sailors had an added advantage in the eight miscues made by the Maroons.

Fordham rushed into a three-run lead in the second inning, but the reserves came from behind in the third and fifth frames and forged into the lead in the sixth. In this inning Davies relieved Hollingsworth on the mound and Fordham was held scoreless for the balance of the fray. The fielding thrill was McPartland's catch of Abbott's liner in the fifth inning.

Cancel Brooklyn Red Cross Game.

The proposed baseball game between the Robins and Giants, which was to have been played for the Red Cross next Sunday at Ebbets Field, has been canceled. The reason given for the cancellation was that the Red Cross drive having ended, there was no reason for the game as a medium through which to raise additional funds.

Yankee Red Cross Fund $1,679.

President Jacob Ruppert of the Yankees yesterday turned over $1,679.78 to the Red Cross, the amount representing 10 per cent. of the receipts of the Cleveland series. At Red Cross day on Monday a sum of $170 was realized from the sale of baseballs and bats autographed by Tris Speaker and Frank Baker.

DODGERS WIN AND LOSE.

Defeat Braves in First Game 5 to 2, and Then Are Beaten 3 to 0.

The Brooklyn Robins returned to their native heath yesterday after their jaunt through the West and split the day's double bill with George Stallings's Braves. In the first the Dodgers hammered out a 5 to 2 victory, but the second conflict resulted in a 3 to 0 defeat.

The program marked the first appearance of Zach Wheat, the Robins' redoubtable outfielder, in the familiar uniform and at the same old familiar position in the left garden. The veteran Larry Cheney started the second fray in his usual reliable way and gave the small crowd present visions of a double victory. In the first three innings he turned the Stallings players back in order. In the fourth Powell interrupted, and thereafter Larry's charm failed.

In the fifth he weakened and Boston's first run was chalked up. Thereafter Larry was in trouble until he was removed from the scene in the eighth frame to make room for Krueger, who went in as pinch-hitter. Burleigh Grimes went to the hillock for the ninth frame and prevented any further damage.

Opposed to Cheney was a twirler by the name of Dana Filligim. With the exception of one inning his work was smooth and held the Robins at bay. Everything just happened in order to displease the patrons of Ebbets Field. Three scanty wallops were all Uncle Wilbert Robinson's protégés obtained from Filligim.

Brooklyn's only chance for a score came in the fourth frame, when Dana became a bit hazy about the location of the plate. He struck both O'Mara and Hickman, the first two batters to face him. Zach Wheat, however, forced O'Mara at third with an easy roller to Filligim. Then, after Myers had singled, a snappy double play on Johnston's grounder, Rawlings to Herzog to Konetchy, retired Wheat and Myers, and Brooklyn's hopes went up in smoke.

The Robins also negotiated a couple of snappy double plays, but, though both accomplishments sparkled brilliantly, they only prevented Boston increasing its lead.

Rehg's double to right opened the way for the first Boston run in the fifth, for the Brave outfielder scampered home immediately after, when Olson let Henry's grounder through him. In the sixth Cheney threw wild to first while handling Buck Herzog's bunt along the first base line. The former Giant moved to second on Powell's sacrifice, and, after Wickland had walked and Red Smith had fanned, Herzog scored on Ed Konetchy's sound single to right. Konetchy's big bat again inserted itself into the pastime in the eighth, when, with Powell on third as a result of a double and a sacrifice, Big Ed rapped out another single, scoring Boston's third run.

Don Carlos Patrick Ragan, a former Robin twirler, was treated to a storm in the opener, but stuck manfully to his task despite a shower of Brooklyn hits. Four of Brooklyn's total of ten smashes were grouped in the fourth frame, and right then and there the Robins sewed up their 5 to 2 triumph. Rube Marquard did the flinging for the Robins, and, while he was hit as often as Don Carlos Patrick, the Braves' raps were not of such wholesome character, and Rube was therefore enabled to emerge triumphant.

Olson was thrown out easily, starting the fourth Robin inning, and O'Mara beat out a hit along the third base line. Hickman scored O'Mara with his triple to right centre, and tallied later himself on Wheat's single past Herzog. Myers singled to right, sending Wheat to third, and, after Johnston had fouled out to Henry, Doolan was passed, filling the bases. Krueger then singled to left, scoring Wheat and Myers, and Marquard was thrown out, Herzog to Konetchy.

In the fifth, with two out, singles by Kelly, Henry, and Ragan manufactured a Boston run, and in the seventh Smith's single and Konetchy's double scored another. The Robins got their fifth tally in the sixth on Hy Myers's triple to centre and Johnston's single to the same place.

SANDS OF PLEASURE IN FRONT BY A NOD

Jockey Peak Brings Gelding Home First in Hollis Selling Stakes at Belmont.

C. E. Mickelwait, a Western owner who is campaigning for the first time on Eastern tracks, was rewarded yesterday for his pluck in coming East when his five-year-old gelding Sands of Pleasure captured the Hollis Selling Stakes, which was the feature of the Belmont Park card. It was a tight fit at the finish, and Western riding talent also played a part in the victory of Sands of Pleasure, which was so ably handled by Peak in the closing drive that he stood off the rush of the Cleveland Stable's Whimsy and of R. F. Carman's Startling, the top weight and favorite for the race.

Cavan Boy flashed in front in the six-furlong dash on the main course until the stretch, when Robinson on Whimsy and Peak on Sands of Pleasure began to urge their mounts and Cavan Boy was quickly swallowed up. Startling was forced wide on the home turn, but in spite of this by a brilliant finish he broke into the race for first place.

Whimsy appeared to be in front a few yards from the finish, but Peak fairly lifted his horse over the line and Sands of Pleasure gained the verdict by a nod. Startling, gaining at every stride, was only a neck further back. The time of 1:13 4-5 equals the record for the event, made by R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, Montresor in 1915.

There were two other close finishes, which had the crowd guessing on the placed horses until the numbers were hoisted. In the five and a half furlong dash for mares, Jyntee, which last year was raced by August Belmont, carried the colors of Lieutenant Raymond Belmont for the first time. The daughter of Fair Play had been well prepared by Trainer Hildreth and was made favorite in the fast field.

James Butler's Empress showed the way to the bend, where Lyke got on even terms. The race had only begun then, for Salvestra and Fairy Wand were fighting for the lead, and Ima Frank was coming with a rush on the outside. It was a drive all the way to the judges, where Jyntee had a margin of a neck over the Meadow Brook Stock Farm's Salvestra, with Ima Frank a head behind and the same distance in front of Fairy Wand.

The skill of Handicapper Vosburgh mads it three close finishes in a row, though the field was not as well bunched in the Mineola Handicap at a miles as in the two previous races. The result was a triumph for a top weight, the Potomac Stable's aged Flittergold, which just got up in time to defeat the Cleveland Stable's Dorcas. Hand Grenade, the early pacemaker, quit in the stretch, while Gloomy Gus, the favorite, never was prominent. The mile was covered in the fair time of 1:39 2-5.

By winning the selling steeplechase from a field of a dozen H. L. Pratt's Superhuman scored his third successive victory over the jumps, with two old favorites, the Greentree Stable's Syosset and Captain Rai Parr's Shannon River, in second and third place. W. R. Coe's Polymelian, the one best bet of the clockers, made good in the last race for maidens. This imported four-year-old galloped home by ten lengths. Jusqui au Bout and Wigstone, which finished in the money, are also imported horses.

TRANSPORT HAS AN A. A.

Overseas Service Organizes for Athletic Competitions.

A United States Naval Overseas Transportation Service Athletic Association was organized recently at a meeting held at 45 Broadway, the headquarters of the above-named naval forces. The U. S. N. O. T. S. A. A., of which Lieutenant G. B. Merrill is the President, will promote athletic activities of every description for the men of the latest branch of Uncle Sam's naval outfit. The association for some time past has had a baseball nine in the field, and it now is perfecting plans for a league among the various departments of the N. O. T. S.

Boxing matches between men in the service, wrestling bouts, aquatic sports, and track events are scheduled for the immediate future. Baseball games are being arranged with some of the best semi-pro. and college nines in Greater New York, including the New York A. C., Federal Rendezvous nine, and teams of similar strength.

Belmont Park Receipts of June 7 Will Be Given to War Fund.

The Westchester Racing Association yesterday announced that Friday, June 7, would be Red Cross Day at the Belmont Park track and that the entire receipts on that day would be given to the Red Cross. Major August Belmont, President of the association, and Mrs. Belmont have been earnest workers for this charity, and it is believed that there will be a larger crowd than usual at the track on that day, when the free list will be suspended.

There will be a special Red Cross handicap at a mile for three-year-olds and upward on the program which should attract some of the best horses in training. Twenty boxes at $25 each will be offered for sale at the office of the Westchester Racing Association, 18 East Forty-second Street, and at the headquarters of the Red Cross.

Among the visitors at Belmont Park yesterday were J. H. Rossiter and John Coleman of California. Mr. Rossiter is the owner of Wikiup Ranch, near Santa Rosa. He was unfortunate enough to lose the splendid stallion Sun Flower and eight superbly bred English mares on the Minnehaha when that steamer was torpedoed.

Later Mr. Rossiter purchased Disguised at the Wickliffe sale and is breeding some of his best mares to him.

MANY TENNIS DEFAULTS.

Metropolitan Handicap Event Lags in Early Rounds.

The metropolitan handicap tennis tournament at the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills was flooded with defaults yesterday, less than a half-dozen matches being actually played. The handicap allotments were so heavy in some cases that the matches were greatly prolonged. Among the victors were F. J. Ross, R. Brown, R. W. Gifford, and E. W. Mecabe. The latter won his way through a third-round match by defeating the West Side President, C. S. Landers.

The summaries:

Second Round—F. J. Ross (minus 15) defeated Julian S. Myrick, (scratch,) 6—4, 8—6; C. S. Landers (scratch) defeated S. Spaeth, (scratch,) 6—0, 2—6, 6—3; R. Brown (scratch) defeated E. H. Hooker, (plus half 15,) 7—5, 6—1; R. W. Gifford (scratch) defeated G. I. Burr, (scratch,) 6—4, 6—4; Harold Swain (minus 15) defeated W. W. Bruce, (plus half 15,) 6—3, 7—5.
Third Round—E. W. Mecabe (minus 15) defeated C. S. Landers, (scratch,) 10—8, 6—2.

SIX YACHT RACES LISTED.

Long Island Sound Body Arranges for Coming Season.

Compared with its pre-war activities the schedule of races for this season, which has just been issued by the Yacht Racing Association of Long Island Sound, bears only a skeleton resemblance. On the other hand, the schedule is more pretentious than that of a year ago, when there was almost no racing at all. This season six events are listed as against, normally, between forty and fifty.

The association at its annual meeting at the Hotel Astor last Winter decided to have racing for small boats and this announcement of a schedule is in line with the action taken then. All six of the club regattas are to be open events and yachts of the Class P type and smaller will be eligible. It is not anticipated, however, that many of the Class P boats will participate. Last year, Stars and the like almost monopolized the racing and there is every indication that a similar condition will prevail this Summer.

The clubs which will hold regattas and the dates are as follows:

May 30, Harlem Yacht Club; July 4, New Rochelle Yacht Club; July 6, Orienta Yacht Club; July 13, Indian Harbor Yacht Club; Aug. 3, Horseshoe Harbor Yacht Club, and Aug. 10, Huguenot Yacht Club.

BOXING STARTS IN JERSEY.

Callahan Scores Knockout in First Bout Under Hurley Law.

Boxing in New Jersey under the Hurley law, permitting bouts between professionals, for a maximum distance of eight rounds, began last night with a series of exhibitions promoted at the Armory Athletic Association of Jersey City. The arena is in the open air, and, probably because of the uncertain weather conditions, only a comparatively small crowd turned out for the inaugural show. The spectators who did attend the bouts, though chilled by the brisk Autumn-like air, witnessed a series of interesting contests.

Frankie Callahan, Brooklyn's lightweight, and Vic Moran of New Orleans were the rivals in the principal bout scheduled for eight rounds, but in the sixth session, when it was perfectly evident that he was outclassed and had no chance against Callahan, Moran's seconds threw a towel into the ring as a token of defeat. The New Orleans lad furnished a worthy display of gameness before the finish came.

He was floored for a slow count of nine with a left hook, followed by a right cross in the second round, and thereafter until the end he was "punch-drunk." In the third and fourth sessions Moran managed to keep his feet, although battered hard, but near the end of the fifth round the Southerner was again floored with a right to the jaw. This time the bell came to his rescue at the count of seven. In the sixth session Moran was floored six times and then his handlers admitted defeat.

The results of the other bouts were: Sammy Terrin outpointed Banty Lewis, six rounds; Jack Diamond knocked out Frank Losey, three rounds; Young Nelson knocked out Young Belmont, one round; Frankie Brown defeated Jack Nelson, four rounds, and Leo Stinger and Steve Morris boxed a four-round draw.

Charles Roden, old-time amateur bantamweight champion, refereed the bouts.

KEEN TENNIS PLAY ON PELHAM COURTS

Miss Bjurstedt and Mrs. Rogge Reach Semi-Final Round in Women's Doubles.

Four teams attained semi-final round brackets in the doubles event of the women's invitation tennis tournament at the Pelham Country Club yesterday. Those who came through the opening clashes in the upper half of the draw were Miss Caroma Winn and Miss Margaret Grove and Mrs. Homer S. Green and Miss Marie Wagner. In the lower half the brackets were taken by Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Mrs. Johan Rogge and Mrs. George Chapman and Miss Marion Chapman.

Doubtless the most unlooked-for happening of the second round was the defeat of Mrs. Rawson L. Wood and Mrs. Spencer Fullerton Weaver, former metropolitan doubles champions, by the team of Norse women, Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Mrs. Johan Rogge. When the defeated pair won their metropolitan title it was against the play of Miss Bjurstedt and Miss Marie Wagner, a team far more formidable than that which opposed them yesterday. A three-set match was necessary before Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Weaver admitted defeat at 4—6, 6—3, 6—2.

By comparison with their work in other tournaments the play of Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Weaver was much below standard. They really had to defeat only Miss Bjurstedt, for Mrs. Rogge was far from being at her best during any period of the contest; yet the Norse girl, carrying not only the burden of the play in her own territory but sustaining that in Mrs. Rogge's court as well, was able to force her way through to victory.

Several adverse line decisions served to disconcert the defeated players, but this was only incidental in causing the reversal, for it was the lack of coordinated team play that counted largely in the result. Yet, for all that they lost, Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Weaver did some brilliant individual playing at times. Mrs. Weaver was especially strong at the net, with her sharply cut off volleys working well, and from the base line Mrs. Wood was aggressive with her deep driving game that frequently placed the rival pair on the defensive.

In the first round Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Weaver defeated Mrs. L. G. Morris and Mrs. Alfred Thurber at 6—4, 6—3, while Miss Bjurstedt and Mrs. Rogge won from Mrs. W. H. Pritchard and Mrs. Ernest Eberhardt at 6—2, 6—3.

Two other strong contenders who went down to defeat in the second round were Mrs. Edward Raymond and Mrs. Benjamin F. Briggs. They were forced to bow to the supremacy of Mrs. Homer S. Green and Miss Marie Wagner at 6—3, 4—6, 6—2. Mrs. Green once again showed her remarkable ability to make gets, and her stroking was severe and steady enough to cause much confusion to the rival players.

The summaries:

Doubles, First Round.—Mrs. Benjamin F. Briggs and Mrs. Edward Raymond defeated Miss Elizabeth Holden and Mrs. Albert Humphries, 6—2, 6—4; Miss Marie Wagner and Mrs. Homer S. Green defeated Miss Elizabeth Moore and Miss Edith Handy, 6—2, 6—2; Mrs. Rawson L. Wood and Mrs. Spencer F. Weaver, defeated Mrs. L. G. Morris and Mrs. Alfred Thurber, 6—4, 6—3; Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Mrs. Johan Rogge defeated Mrs. W. H. Pritchard and Mrs. Ernest Eberhardt, 6—2, 6—3.
Second Round—Mrs. George Chapman and Miss Marion Chapman defeated Mrs. R. S. Leachman and Mrs. E. V. Lynch, 6—4, 2—6, 6—4; Miss Caroma Winn and Miss Margaret Grove won from Miss Clare Cassel and Miss Helene Pollock by default; Miss Marie Wagner and Mrs. Homer S. Green defeated Mrs. B. F. Briggs and Mrs. Edward Raymond, 6—3, 4—6, 6—2; Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Mrs. Johan Rogge defeated Mrs. Rawson L. Wood and Mrs. Spencer F. Weaver, 4—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Shenecossett Links Open Today.

The Shenecossett Links at New London, Conn., will open for the first time this season today. Regulars who are returning this season will find many changes in the course since last Summer. Besides a number of new traps and bunkers there will be a few new holes. Many important exhibition matches for the Red Cross will be played over the course this Summer after June 15. Travers and Evans are scheduled to meet Ouimet and Anderson in one match, while Miss Alexa Stirling will pair with Perry Adair against Miss Elaine Rosenthal and Bobby Jones.

SPEED KINGS RACE TODAY.

Harkness Handicap Chief Event of Auto Meet at Sheepshead Bay.

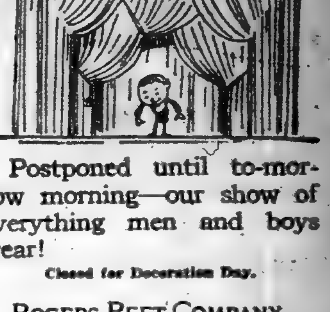
The country's leading auto pilots will start in the Harkness Handicap, over 100 miles, which will be the feature event of the automobile racing meet at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway this afternoon. Among the speed kings who will battle for the $30,000 in prize money are Ralph De Palma, Barney Oldfield, Dario Resta, Louis Chevrolet, Iral Vail, Eddie Hearne, Ralph Mulford and Tommy Milton. The race will start at 3 o'clock.

The contest will be the first to be run on the handicap system, which promises to produce a close finish. Louis Chevrolet will start from scratch. Another event at the meet will be the Futurity Handicap in two ten-mile heats, and a final at the same distance. Resta and De Palma will start at scratch in this.

Beginning at 11:30 o'clock this morning express trains will run to the Sheepshead Bay Motor Speedway to the race for the Harkness Cup, on the Brooklyn elevated road direct from Brooklyn Bridge. Connection from other sections in Brooklyn will be made at the Franklin Avenue Station. It is also possible to reach the track by trolley via the Ocean Avenue line, which runs direct to the course. Most of the trolley lines in Brooklyn connect with the Ocean Avenue line.

Those who go to the track from Manhattan by motor car have the option of using either the Brooklyn, Manhattan or Williamsburg bridges. If the Brooklyn Bridge is used the best route is via Liberty Street to Clinton, turn left on State Street to Fourth Avenue, turn right on Fourth Avenue to Berkeley Place, turn left to Prospect Park Plaza, run through the east drive of the park direct into Ocean Avenue, which leads to the Speedway. Those who use the Manhattan Bridge should follow Flatbush Avenue to Fourth Avenue, to Berkeley Place, then turning left on Berkeley Place, run through the park and follow Ocean Avenue to the Speedway.

Those who use the Williamsburg Bridge should turn right at the eastern end to Driggs Street, and again right on Division Street, which connects with Bedford Avenue. The latter may be followed to Robinson Street, which is the lower side of Prospect Park, turn right on Robinson Street and follow the same into Parkside Avenue as far as Ocean Avenue, where turn left and follow Ocean Avenue to the Speedway.



Postponed until to-morrow morning—our show of everything men and boys wear!

Closed for Decoration Day.

RED CROSS CALLS FOR 15,000 NURSES

Those Who Are Not Graduates Will Be Sent to an Army Training School.

APPEAL FROM GEN. GORGAS

Chairman Breed Announces That New York Went Over $35,000,000 in Drive.

While contributions to the Red Cross Campaign Fund were still coming in from various sources and have been entirely counted, William C. Breed, Chairman of the New York Committee of the Second Red Cross War Fund, said yesterday that he was confident that the total for the city would be fully $35,000,000.

The American Red Cross announced yesterday that on Monday it would start a campaign to enlist 15,000 more Red Cross nurses for service in the army and navy. Every woman who has graduated from a hospital training school will be asked to enlist, and women graduates of colleges and high schools will be asked to enroll for training in the army school for nursing recently established by the army in connection with military hospitals. The following telegram was received by the Red Cross here yesterday:

Office of the Surgeon General, United States Army, May 29.

I am informed that on June 3 it is the intention of the American Red Cross to start a drive for nurses in the army. The American Red Cross is a great recruiting agency for army nurses, and through this agency I wish to appeal to the nurses of the country to enroll for service in the Nurses' Corps of the army. The need of a great number of nurses is acute, and any assistance the American Red Cross can render the department in obtaining for the Army Nurses' Corps the number of nurses required will be a service to the country.

W. C. GORGAS, Surgeon General.

Chairman Breed made the following statement on the results of the Red Cross Drive yesterday:

"I am certain that we are all proud of the magnificent democratic response made by the people of New York to the Red Cross appeal. I believe that by reason of this experience we all feel ourselves to be better Americans and better New Yorkers.

"As Chairman, and on behalf of the able heads of our organization, I should like to avail myself of the broadest medium of expressing to each and every one of the contributors to this Second Red Cross War Fund, and particularly to each and every one of the 50,000 workers in the campaign, a sincere personal appreciation of their devoted service to the cause. Appreciation, however, is hardly the word to use because I realize that workers for the Red Cross in no part of the world are looking for appreciation. They are content with the intense personal satisfaction which comes to them as a result of their opportunity to serve in this supreme cause of humanity.

"I would also like to find the broadest medium of publicity in acknowledging the wonderful manner in which the Red Cross plea has been handled by the entire press of New York City. This has been true not only of the great daily newspapers, which have unselfishly, both editorially and through their news columns, given support without limit, but also is it true as to trade and other journals, which might not be expected to take such a leading part in a campaign of this kind. This service has, moreover, been one of the most vital and important elements in the success of the campaign, and any one writing the history of this war cannot overlook the part played by the press of New York in building up the great backfire of patriotism, which enabled New York to maintain its proud position of leadership in generosity and loyalty.

"A public accounting of the results of the campaign and the expenses will be made at the earliest possible opportunity."

MANY BID TO AID BLIND.

Large Prices Offered for Famous Pictures Now at Anderson Galleries.

Supplementing the big bids made by Americans in Paris for Ridgway Knight's great war picture, "After the Battle of the Marne," which has been bought by William Nelson Cromwell at the Salon in the French capital, where it is creating a sensation, and presented to the American-British-French-Belgian Permanent Blind Relief War Fund, many offers are being received from art collectors and museums in this country. The bid price includes delivery from Paris to the United States in July at the close of the Salon.

For three more days only, a photographic reproduction of this picture, three and a half by four feet, will be shown alongside the original of its famous companion painting, "Taking Money from the Stocking," lent by its owner, James McLean, at the Anderson Galleries, Park Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, where the exhibition of nearly 800 works of art donated to the American-British-French-Belgian Fund to be sold for the benefit of blinded soldiers and sailors is being held. The exhibition closes on Saturday night.

Many choice pictures, through the advice and guidance of artist contributors, who place their services at the disposal of visitors, are being picked up at the "blind auction," by which the public is permitted to make secret bids on any picture or statue desired.

The entire proceeds of all sales and admission fees go to the fund.

MORE DUBIOUS BLAKELOCKS

Owners Seek Artist's O. K. on Paintings Bearing His Name.

The District Attorney's discovery of many more apparent imitations of the paintings of Ralph A. Blakelock, whose works became famous, and some of which attained great value years after mental trouble forced him to become a patient in an asylum, has raised doubt in the minds of owners of paintings that bear his name as to their genuineness.

A Brooklyn artist sent six supposed Blakelocks to the District Attorney's office yesterday for examination with the request that Mr. Blakelock be asked to determine whether they are his work. A woman made a similar request concerning a painting she purchased some time ago on the representation that it was a genuine Blakelock. The artist has been invited to view these works tomorrow. The District Attorney is trying to trace the source of the bogus Blakelocks.

MRS. WHITEHOUSE ABROAD.

Resumes Work for Creel's Committee in Switzerland.

Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, it was learned yesterday, has gone back to Switzerland, where she was conducting propaganda last Winter for the Committee on Public Information. In January she left with a special commission from George Creel, Chairman of the committee, and went to Switzerland via Bordeaux. Her stay there was not long, however, and it was rumored that the Swiss Government had objected to her work, though Switzerland is full of propagandists of all sides.

No information could be obtained at the local branches of the Committee on Public Information yesterday, but it was understood that there were no difficulties in the way of her work, and that Mrs. Whitehouse had returned to com-

OFFERS HARBOR HILL TO THE RED CROSS

Clarence H. Mackay Suggests Use of Long Island Estate as a Base Hospital.

ROSLYN, L. I., May 29.—Harbor Hill, the country home of Clarence H. Mackay, President of the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, has been offered to Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the War Council of the American Red Cross, for the use of that organization. Mr. Davison said last night that he did not anticipate any objection on the part of Government officials to accepting the Mackay estate.

The offer of Harbor Hill for Red Cross work was made in a letter to Chairman Davison, in which the owner of the estate said that he wanted to be of service to the Government and suggested that the house, with its spacious lawns, was an ideal situation for a base hospital because of its nearness to the city.

"It would give me the greatest pleasure," Mr. Mackay wrote, "to do everything within my power to cooperate with the Government, in standing back of the American manhood, who, along with our allies, are facing in our behalf the most ruthless, cruel but efficient foe that the world has known in centuries. Our coats should be off and remain off until this struggle is over."

Harbor Hill is situated on the crest of Wheatley Hills, twenty-three miles from Manhattan. It consists of 600 acres, on which are many buildings, capable of accommodating about five hundred patients. A large farm is under cultivation. There is a dairy on the estate with a herd of eighty Guernsey cows. There are many horses and automobiles which also are put at the service of the Red Cross.

Convalescing soldiers would find tennis courts, handball and squash courts, and ample space for a baseball diamond. There is also a large swimming tank.

There is a sawmill building, with railroad sidings running alongside it. Soldiers able to be about and desiring practical work could make use of this equipment.

The manor house, occupied by Mr. Mackay, is a marble and stone structure, which with slight alterations would be suited to the needs of the wounded soldiers.

NO ORDER FOR POORER GAS.

Consolidated Company Says Service Board Is in Error.

A representative of the Consolidated Gas Company said yesterday that there was no truth in the intimation conveyed by the news given out by the Public Service Commission on Tuesday that the gas companies were responsible for the fact that Oil Administrator Requa has under consideration a proposed order limiting the amount of oil to be used by the companies and to fix a standard of gas quality lower than the present standard of 22 candle power. The idea was that such an order would enable the companies to produce a poorer quality of gas and thus reap bigger profits.

"The Consolidated Company and its subsidiaries," ran the statement of the company, "understand the innuendo conveyed in the remarks of the Public Service Commission. This company has received from President Wilson, the Controller of the Currency, and the Secretary of the Treasury letters warmly commending it for the assistance it has given the Government. The company turned over to the Government without charge a large parcel of ground on which has been erected a plant for extracting toluol from gas.

"This company has had no communication with Administrator Requa concerning the heat method of measuring gas or concerning oil or any other subject dealt with in the statement issued by the Public Service Commission reflecting upon the loyalty of the gas corporations. It is costing this company from 90 to 95 cents a thousand cubic feet to make gas for which it receives 80 cents. Everybody familiar with manufacturing conditions at this time must be familiar with this, and Commissioner Whitney is especially familiar with it because he has listened to sworn testimony to this effect."

'MATT' McGRATH PROMOTED.

Athlete Is Made Police Lieutenant by Commissioner Enright.

"Matt" McGrath, the athlete, was yesterday made a Police Lieutenant by Commissioner Enright. McGrath, who is 42 years old, has been on the force since January, 1903, and became a Sergeant in 1913. He was sent to the Bronx Park Station. McGrath holds a Congressional medal for a rescue of a drowning man in 1906, and has been honorably mentioned for a similar rescue in 1913.

STARTS AIRCRAFT HEARING.

Senate Committee Hears Head of Cantonment Division of Signal Corps

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The Senate Sub-committee on Aircraft started its hearings today when it had before it, behind closed doors, Colonel Clinton S. Edgar, head of the Cantonment Division of the Signal Corps, and Colonel E. Lester Jones, head of Transportation of the Signal Corps.

The committee obtained information as to the construction of cantonments where airplane training is conducted, besides going into the expense of fitting airplane stations and other items of expenditure connected with construction. The committee will start next week upon a visit to half a dozen aircraft stations.

'Biff! Bang!' Begins This Afternoon

"Biff! Bang!" the musical comedy which the Pelham naval recruits have prepared, will begin its engagement at the Century theatre this afternoon. The matinée will be a performance for the sailors who do not happen to be in the company, and the formal opening will take place tonight. The piece will be played for the rest of the week and up to and including Wednesday of next week. A professional matinée will be given next Monday.

MUSIC NOTES.

The Paulist Choir, under Father William J. Finn, concluding a transcontinental tour on July 1 for relief work in France, will hereafter make its headquarters in New York instead of Chicago.

Sophie Braslau, contralto of the Metropolitan, is to replace Mme. Schumann-Heink in the role of the Angel in Mendelssohn's "Elijah" at next Sunday's Thrift Festival at the Polo Grounds.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

E. Lyall Swete, now acting in "Belinda," will have one of the leading roles in the new Arnold Bennett comedy, "Helen With the High Hand," which Adolph Klauber will present. The piece will be tried out in Washington during the Summer.

Holiday matinees will be given in all theatres today.

The "Follies" is now definitely announced to open at the New Amsterdam Theatre on Monday night, June 17. Seats for the opening performance will be sold at auction at the theatre next Thursday afternoon.

A new drama by George Middleton and Guy Bolton, authors of "Polly With a Past," will be put in rehearsal next Monday by Elliott, Comstock & Gest. The piece, which has a religious background, is as yet untitled. Incidental music has been written by William F. Peters.

Anselm Goetzl, the composer, and Willy Pogany, the artist, have formed a new theatrical producing company, the Goetzl-Pogany Theatrical Enterprises. Their first offering will be an Oriental musical comedy, which will be produced in New York in the Fall.

Elsie Mackay, instead of Alma Tell, will be Lionel Atwill's leading woman in "Another Man's Shoes," soon to be tried out. Miss Tell will head a stock company in Newark this Summer.

Y. M. C. A. SEEKS 4,000 WORKERS FOR FRONT

Open Campaign for 3,200 Men and 800 Women to Serve in France and Italy.

TO TREBLE PRESENT STAFF

Will Hold Meeting on Monday to Make Arrangements for Another Y. M. C. A. War Fund Drive.

Dr. John R. Mott, General Secretary of the National War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, who recently returned from a two months' tour of the west front, announced yesterday that the Y. M. C. A. would begin at once a campaign to recruit 3,200 men and 800 women for work with American, French, and Italian troops, tripling the Y. M. C. A. staff at present in France and Italy. Plans will be made on Monday for a drive for a second Y. M. C. A. War Fund.

With the great increase in the volume of American troops pouring into France, repeated shifts in their billets, together with the destruction of between eighty and ninety of the Y. M. C. A. huts by shellfire, the work of the Y. M. C. A. has been increased so greatly in the last few months that the present staff of 2,000 has become inadequate.

One of the first things Mr. Mott did on his return to this country was, with the approval of the Y. M. C. A. authorities, to cable a gift of $500,000, which may later be increased to $1,000,000, to replace between eighty and ninety of the Y. M. C. A. huts behind the British lines which were captured in the first German drive this Spring. A number of Y. M. C. A. huts are also in the area taken by Germany in the last three days.

Mr. Mott shortly after his arrival called on Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, with maps showing some of the Y. M. C. A. huts which had been desroyed by shellfire, in which two women secretaries had been killed and other workers wounded. Mr. Mott said:

"After seeing this Colonel Roosevelt said: 'Now I'll do anything for the Y. M. C. A.' Some time before he had thought the Y. M. C. A. work was not work that called for the highest heroism."

No men of military age are being accepted by the Y. M. C. A.

"We want the very best men and women in the United States," Mr. Mott said. "I am proud of the men and women we have over there now, and there is not one of them that feels that he is too big for his job. The very biggest and best Americans, if they are not already devoting all their time and energy to the war service, will find a task cut out for them in the Y. M. C. A. in France which will enable them to help to the fullest of their capacity.

A meeting of Y. M. C. A. heads and supporters will be held on Monday at the Bankers' Club, where arrangements will be made for a new appeal for funds for the Y. M. C. A. The sum of $35,000,000 was asked for at the last drive to carry on the work until July 1 of last year. The American people gave $50,000,000, which will finance the work until this Fall. The new drive will be for a fund to last twelve months. The amount has not yet been decided upon.

Anna Held Amused with a Movie.

The condition of Anna Held, who has been seriously ill for several weeks, was unchanged last night, it was said at her apartment at the Hotel Savoy. During the afternoon a motion picture machine was brought to Miss Held's apartment and pictures were shown there for her amusement.

GRACE LUSK, GUILTY, ATTACKS PROSECUTOR

Tries to Choke Him After Jury Announces Second Degree Murder Verdict.

WAUKESHA, Wis., May 29.—Grace Lusk tonight was found guilty of second degree murder by the jury which tried her for killing Mrs. Mary Newman Roberts.

When the jury retired Miss Lusk collapsed, and it required half an hour to prepare her to be brought to court to hear the verdict. When the verdict was announced, she sprang at the throat of D. S. Tullar, special prosecutor, who is nearly 60 years old, and screaming "he lied, he lied," she shook him back and forth in his chair at the counsel table. Several men seized her and she fainted.

Several minutes later, when she had recovered, her aged father and one of the attorneys were attempting to lead her from the courtroom, when she again turned toward Tullar and attempted to escape from the men who held her.

"That man's son lied!" she shouted. "Maurice Tullar swore my life away."

Maurice Tullar, now in a sanitarium, is the District Attorney.

Judge Martin Lueck in his final instructions to the jury indicated five possible verdicts as follows:

1. First degree murder, which carries life sentence.

2. Second degree murder, covering assaults with a deadly weapon due to unsound mind, carrying a sentence of from fourteen to twenty-five years in prison.

3. Manslaughter in the third degree, covering a slaying done in the heat of passion, the penalty for which is from two to six years in prison.

4. Not guilty.

5. Not guilty because insane, if it were decided that the defendant was unable to distinguish between right and wrong at the time of the shooting. This would commit her to the State Asylum.

Walter D. Corrigan, for the prosecution, and James Clancy, for the defense, delivered the closing arguments in the trial, which began on May 13.

Mr. Corrigan argued that the words and actions of the defendant proved her sane at the time of the shooting. He read the note she wrote immediately after the tragedy in which she said: "May God forgive me," and recalled her statement four days later to three witnesses that she realized what she had done, but could not understand how she did it so "calmly and deliberately."

Mr. Clancey cited the stories told on the witness stand by both Miss Lusk and Dr. Roberts as the best proof that the defendant was insane.

Miss Lusk listened to the closing argument of the State with hardly a trace of emotion, but broke down completely after the case had gone to the jury at 5:27 o'clock and sobbed in her father's arms.

WENDEL ESTATE MUST PAY.

Court of Appeals Confirms Levy of Inheritance Tax.

The estate of John G. Wendel, the "Millionaire Hermit of Fifth Avenue," will have to pay an inheritance tax of $40,000 on real estate appraised at $1,500,000 in New York City, under a decision of the Court of Appeals handed down in Albany yesterday.

The property involved was made over by Mr. Wendel to his sisters some years before his death. The issue in the litigation over the tax was whether he had made the transfer in the expectation of death, in which case the State was entitled to an inheritance tax. The lower court originally found that the tax should be paid. This decision was overruled by the Appellate Court. The Court of Appeals now reverses the Appellate Court. The case has been in the courts since shortly after the death of Wendel in November, 1914.

MAY LAND AIR MAIL IN A NEWARK PARK

Postal Officials Consider New Site That Would Avoid Heavy Fogs.

LITTLE CHANGE IN TIME

Would Use the Hudson Tunnels to Park Place Station, Newark, and Autos to Branch Brook Park.

Plans to change the landing place of the airplanes in the air mail service between New York and Washington, from Belmont Park on Long Island to Branch Brook Park in Newark, are being considered by Second Assistant Postmaster General Otto Praeger. Officials of the Railway Mail Service, who were inspecting a site for the landing place in Newark yesterday, said that one reason for the change was the heavy fogs over New York Bay and Long Island that hampered the aviators in seeking their landing place at Belmont Park. The air mail service was discontinued for two days recently because of the heavy mists over Long Island, and it is hoped that this difficulty will be eliminated when the mail is landed at Newark.

When the plans for the air mail service were made about six weeks ago officials of the Post Office Department considered landing the planes in Newark, and asked the Essex County Park Commission whether a site for hangars could be furnished in one of the public parks. The officials replied that any site under their control would be given to the Government without charge, and the officials inspected the Branch Brook Park. Members of the Park Commission said yesterday that the offer was still open and that any needed space for hangars for the mail planes would be given to the Post Office Department.

After he had made a second inspection of the proposed site in Newark yesterday James B. Corrigan of the Railway Adjustment Bureau of the Post Office Department said that he would make a favorable report upon the site, although it would be necessary to have the new landing field approved by experts in aviation before the change was made. John F. Sinnott, the Postmaster at Newark, who aided Inspector Corrigan in the examination of the field, said he was sure the change would be made because the officials were dissatisfied with the Belmont Park landing and with the flying conditions on the last few miles of the air mail route.

E. M. Norris, Superintendent of the Railway Mail Service in this district, said that he had received no official notification of a contemplated change in plans for the air mail service, and he added that he was sure he would receive some word of the change several days before, so that he could arrange the railroad schedules between New York and the landing field. Postmaster Thomas G. Patten has received no notification of the proposed change.

The air mail service was hampered yesterday by fogs and wind on the last leg of the journey from Washington and Lieutenant Miller made a slow trip from Philadelphia to Belmont Field. Lieutenant Bonsal was late in leaving Belmont Field in starting the mail to Washington because of the fogs and trouble with the Liberty motor in his large plane. He had to fly in a smaller machine when the Liberty motor failed to function properly. About 110 pounds of mail was carried each way yesterday. It was announced that the air mail service would not be suspended today, but that the regular packets would be carried.

DAMROSCH TO LEAD IN CAMPS IN FRANCE

Symphony Conductor Gives His Services for a Concert Tour with 50 French Musicians.

Walter Damrosch, conductor of the New York Symphony Society, is soon to sail for France under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., to organize an orchestra of fifty French musicians for concerts in the American camps over there. Mr. Damrosch will give his services, while the French musicians will receive salaries, as their earnings have been greatly curtailed by the war.

Maurice de Villiers is to choose the men from the Lamoureux and Colonne orchestras, the best in Paris, and they will be ready to begin work immediately on Mr. Damrosch's arrival. They will rehearse for a week and will then travel for six weeks, wherever transportation for so large a party can be arranged.

"We plan to give popular symphonic concerts," said Mr. Damrosch yesterday, "traveling from one place to another in the most practicable way and playing as many concerts as possible, in order that the greatest number of our soldiers may hear the music of the orchestra.

"The tour will include our larger camps, and the Foyer du Soldat at Aix, as well as our ports of entrance, Bordeaux and Brest, our aviation camps, and any others where large numbers of American soldiers are quartered. We should welcome an opportunity to play for French soldiers, as well."

Musical Show for Army and Navy.

The entire proceeds of the National Musical Show which will be held at Grand Central Palace from June 1 to June 11, inclusive, will be turned over to the Y. M. C. A., it was announced yesterday. The money raised for the Y. M. C. A. will be used to purchase phonograph records, piano player records, and other musical instruments for the benefit of the army and navy. During the last two days of the show, the National Golf Association of the Piano Trade will hold a golf tournament at the Scarsdale Golf Club, Scarsdale, N. Y.

Holbrook Blinn and Blanche Bates still head the cast, and Lieutenant Gitz-Rice also continues as a member of the company.

Joe Welch Suffers a Breakdown.

Joe Welch, the Hebrew character actor, was taken from his home, 601 West 168th Street, to Bellevue Hospital last Monday suffering from a nervous breakdown. It was said at the hospital last night that he would probably be removed to a private sanitarium at Hastings, N. Y., in a few days.

MR. KITCHIN'S TEMPER.

Representative Kitchin did not want the country to go to war with Germany, and whenever since then he has approached a piece of legislation it has always been in the spirit, "Well, you "would have it, and now I'm going to "make it just as uncomfortable for "you as I can." He seems to speak in this spirit whether he is addressing himself to the newspapers, to the people, or to the President of the United States. The speech with which he introduced his last war tax bill might be summarized as follows: "You've "got your war, confound you, and "now look at the way I'm going to "tax you for it!" That speech was aimed at the people in general; the one he delivered on Tuesday was aimed chiefly at the President of the United States. It, in turn, might be summarized as follows: "The President "makes us stay here when I wanted "to go home. Well, all right, but see "what kind of tax bill he'll get, and "see how long it will take us."

> But the President of the United States, Commander in Chief of the army and navy of the United States, has declared otherwise. * * * The House will be in session, and we will have to attend its sessions, and are subject to roll calls; we must attend to departmental duties, and our correspondence is three or four times as large when the House is in session. We cannot work as many hours if the whole day were given to us in this hot, intolerable Summer weather of Washington.

And so on. Whatever subject Mr. Kitchin takes up, he always speaks in the same tone, a tone of querulous protest, the protest of the balky horse forced to the trough and determined to spill as much water as possible over the driver, and make him perspire as much as possible over the job. But in this latest speech Mr. Kitchin goes beyond anything he has ever done, and beyond all permissible bounds. He affects to believe that that speech of the President's which so warmed the hearts of true Americans and has roused such ringing echoes in Europe was dictated by a lobby. He tells his hearers that the Secretary of the Treasury was scared—"unduly alarmed" is his expression—by lobbyists, and plainly intimates that the Secretary in turn scared the President into making his demand that Congress shall so act as to enable the people who are to pay the taxes to know what taxes they are to pay.

Now, if these mean insinuations against the President of the United States stood alone, one might be tempted to suspect that Mr. Kitchin's health had been affected ahead of time by that "hot, intolerable Summer weather" which he dreads so much. But they are quite in harmony with all Mr. Kitchin's speeches; they reflect an unhappy, disgruntled, querulous spirit, which has been made manifest in all the things he has said since he was forced into supporting a war he disapproved. They are merely a step in advance of the other things he has said, taken probably because the other things did not call down upon him that thunderous rebuke from public sentiment which this one undoubtedly will. Mr. Kitchin's attitude has been from the first not exactly that of a child who says, "I won't play," but of a child who says, "I'll play if you make me, but I'll "make you sorry."

The President based his request for the passage of a tax bill on broad grounds. He said:

> We cannot in fairness wait until the end of the fiscal year is at hand to apprise our people of the taxes they must pay on their earnings of the present calendar year, whose accountings and expenditures will then be closed. * * * Definiteness, early definiteness as to what its tasks are to be, is absolutely necessary for the successful administration of the Treasury. * * * We need not be afraid to tax them, if we lay taxes justly.

And all Mr. Kitchin sees in this statesmanlike utterance is the whine of a timorous President under the lash of a lobby! And a lobby for what? According to him, it is a lobby of publishers who think that if a new tax bill is prepared they will have a chance to get Congress to rescind the punitive clause which Mr. Kitchin surreptitiously slipped into the last tax bill, and which, under the guise of taxation, aimed to prevent the circulation of newspapers outside their own cities. The President said, "The present tax "laws are marred, moreover, by in-"equities which ought to be reme-"died"; and Mr. Kitchin's overhasty conscience leaps at the conclusion that when he spoke of "inequities" he must of course have meant this one. When Mr. Kitchin's conscience tells him this, Mr. Kitchin's self-esteem ruffles at the message his conscience brings, and we have, in consequence, this singular assault upon the President.

Mr. Kitchin calls this lobby "one of "the shrewdest and most powerful "lobbies that ever infested the hotels "or the corridors of the Capitol," and directly charges it with having been responsible for that demand which the President alleges he made in the interest of no lobby, but of the people who are paying for the war. There is, in fact, no such lobby. There was a committee of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association which went to Washington to appear at hearings duly ordered for the purpose by the Senate Postal Committee, and which appeared publicly before that committee; but its object was not to get a new tax bill passed, but to get the Post Office Appropriation bill amended so that the operation of the new rates would be suspended for one year. What it did was open and aboveboard, and was limited to these public hearings.

The President also said:

> I know that you will begrudge the work to be done here by us no more than the men begrudge us theirs who lie in the trenches and sally forth to their death.

Perhaps he assumed too much—not regarding Congress as a whole, but regarding Mr. Kitchin. Mr. Kitchin might never have made this astonishing speech if the President had not called upon him to work "in this hot, "intolerable Summer weather of "Washington." It is true that the men "who lie in the trenches and sally forth to their death" do not begrudge their work, but they do not have to "attend sessions and be subject to roll calls"; they do not have to "attend to departmental duties" or to a correspondence which "is three or four times as large" as after adjournment. It is no wonder that Mr. Kitchin is out of temper, and sees "shrewd and powerful lobbies" bulldozing the President. To his mind, doubtless, nothing less could account for the President or any other man being so anxious to stay "in this hot, "intolerable Summer weather of "Washington"; it must be a lobby, for nothing else would be powerful enough to produce that state of "undue alarm" in the President's mind which alone could account for such a strange aberration.

CANTIGNY.

Cantigny does not figure large in the great battle now raging in France from Ypres to Rheims, but as a test of the mettle of the Americans and as proof that they are first-class fighting men and a match for the Germans, Cantigny has its place in the record. The town, or the site of what was once a town, is near Montdidier, the scene of heroic resistance by French troops to the German advance. Amiens is only twenty miles away to the northwest. The French and Americans are brigaded together on this important part of the line. They are fighting side by side. Just west of Cantigny the Germans held a salient. To flatten it out was the task set the Americans. Their advance was to be made on a front of a mile and a quarter, which involved the employment of a considerable force. The operation was to take place under the eyes of veteran French officers, who doubtless made dispositions to reinforce the Americans if things went wrong. But there was no cause for anxiety. The French official bulletin is illuminating:

> West of Montdidier the Americans, supported by our tanks, brilliantly occupied a salient along a front of two kilometers and the strongly fortified village of Cantigny, capturing 170 prisoners and war material. They repulsed counterattacks.

The Americans, after vigorous artillery preparation, went "over the top" at 6:43 A. M., and made the required distance of 600 yards in ten minutes under machine gun fire, which was rapid work. General Pershing's communiqué gives the number of prisoners as 200, and declares that the German casualties were heavy, ours light. The taking of Cantigny was not a big achievement, but it was remarkable for the spirit shown by the rank and file, for that quality the French call élan, and for the vigor with which the Americans cleared the enemy out of houses and cellars in the town. In a charge of this sort the grenade and bayonet have to be used, and the Americans proved that they were handy with both.

Even if Cantigny is regarded only as a sample of what young American soldiers can do when they go "over the top," the result is as gratifying to their allies as to the people "back home." Veteran troops could have acquitted themselves no better. The affair has a special significance, because it is upon American reinforcements that General Foch must rely for the final success of his strategy.

MEMORIAL AND FAST DAY.

Fifty yeras ago General John A. Logan, Commander in Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, in an order to it naming May 30 as a day for "strewing with flowers or other-"wise decorating the graves of com-"rades," expressed the hope that this observance would be "kept up from "year to year while the survivors of "the war remain to honor the mem-"ory of the departed." The gracious custom, borrowed from the South, survives long after South and North have come to feel a common pride in the national epic and to admire and praise one another's achievements and heroes. The graves of our soldiers and sailors of earlier wars, of the civil war and the Spanish war, have alike been honored.

Thus the day is dedicated to all our war dead, of the past and of the time to come. The survivors of the war between the States, upon whom we now look with something of that affectionate reverence our grandfathers felt for the last old Continentals, can foresee the undying succession of the commemoration. It is the All Souls' Day of our soldiers and sailors gone. Now, when our early dead in the mightiest of wars have but begun to fall, when most of our suffering and sorrow lies before, the day becomes a prophecy as well as an anniversary. This generation begins to divine the sacrifice and the tears its predecessors, according to the measure of their trial, have known. Today the martial music and the elegiac remembrance are keener and more personal to our hearts. We shall endure greater and bitterer things than the earlier men and women. So be it. We are ready to endure. Never was there so great a cause to live and die for.

By the President's proclamation of May 11, complying with the request of Congress on April 2, today is also a day of public humiliation, prayer, and fasting. This Memorial Day is sacred not only to older valor but to the solemn and noble duties and perils before us. Not in those dim Fast Days when our forefathers, their muskets in their hands, trudged to the meeting house to implore the blessing of God on their scanty garner and rude, laborious lives and to save them from the "Salvages"; not when Abraham Lincoln set apart Fast Day in the Summer of the first year of the civil war, was there anything like such reason for grave thought, for steady courage. Whatever our creed or want of creed, we can all worship today in the religion of bravery, of self-sacrifice, of patriotism, of honor and duty.

CUTTING UP BOHEMIA.

The old rule of "Divide et impera" has served Austria so well in times past that her statesmen appear to regard it as the favorite family remedy for all ills. So we see a new application in the proposal to divide Bohemia into twelve districts. The Czechs have always declared that in the independent State which they want to create adequate guarantees will be given to the German minority. The Government finds this convenient, it appears; the twelve districts are to be artfully arranged so that there will be some sort of a German minority, however small, in each one, and for this minority all sorts of guarantees, privileges, and powers are presently to be demanded.

By applying the art of gerrymander, expertly practiced in both halves of the Dual Monarchy, the Germans are to be given more seats in Parliament. At present the Germans in Bohemia, Moravia, and Silesia, where they form a scant quarter of the population, elect about 40 per cent. of the Deputies; but this is not enough; the Slavs in Parliament are consolidating, and the only hope of the Germans of Austria is to manipulate the apportionment until with their ten millions they elect more Deputies than the eighteen millions of the subject races. So a beginning is made among the Czechs, the oldest and most inveterate of their enemies; and the same "dismemberment" is to enable the Germans to elect a larger proportion of members to the somewhat ornamental Bohemian Diet.

This is "divide et impera," to be sure, but a singularly plodding application of the rule. For the ruling classes and the ruling race in Austria would not be much better off if they could keep the Czechs from electing any Deputies at all. The days of Parliament and Diet have gone; constitutional fictions no longer hamper either side to any great extent in Austria-Hungary; the dissension in the empire has become frankly a matching of force.

The Government of Bohemia, recognized by the overwhelming majority of the nation, is not the Austrian Kaiser, or bureaucracy; not even the Diet and the Czech Deputies in Parliament, though these have done heroic service as representatives of the nation; it is the Czechoslovak National Committee, whose President, Dr. Masaryk, was recently in New York, whose armies have fought in Galicia, in France, and in Italy. Whether Bohemia is one administrative unit or twelve makes comparatively little difference; the dispute is being settled on the battlefields, where Czechs are fighting with the Allies.

The old Austrian policy of dividing the opposition used to play one nation off against the other with great success; but today, for almost the first time in the history of the empire, they all appear to be in substantial agreement. Every one of the nationalist movements has become far more radical and irreconcilable in the last year and all of them have drawn together. Unless Austria can again sow discord between the Poles and Czechs, the Italians and Jugoslavs—of which there seems little chance just now—this drawing of new boundary lines will bring her little profit.

OVER THE TOP FOR THE RED CROSS.

It now appears that the number of contributors in this city to the Red Cross War Fund was well over 2,000,000. Many of them, no doubt, gave twice. In a population of about 5,500,000 this is a most gratifying result and one always to be proud of. It demonstrates a general and deep-seated concern for the success of the allied cause among all classes and all ages. New York's reputation as a patriotic city has been enhanced. It was asked to give $25,000,000 to the Red Cross; the sum of the collections proves to be $10,000,000 greater. Everybody was approached or solicited; never was an appeal for a good cause (and was there ever a better one?) so elaborately organized; and it seems as if every one gave to the measure of his ability.

In the whole country nearly $150,000,000 was added to the resources of the American Red Cross, or 50 per cent. more than the amount designated. New England made a splendid showing, giving 67 per cent. "over the top," every State being on the roll of honor. Eastern Massachusetts more than doubled its quota, exceeding the $1,000,000 asked for by $1,321,000. Full returns from the West and South are not in yet, but from advance reports we know that they kept pace with the East in the good work. Several States in the Middle West and many cities went "over the top" three or four days before the campaign ended.

The second fund raised for the Red Cross in less than a year is a better index of the war feeling of America than any Liberty Loan or the three loans combined. The last loan had an immense number of subscribers well distributed through the country, but the difference between that number and the total of contributors to the Red Cross War Fund must have been many millions. If 2,000,000 persons in New York City made voluntary gifts for the nursing of the soldiers and the succor of refugees, the number of contributors in the whole United States could hardly be less than 40,000,000. It may be assumed that nearly every man, woman, school boy, and school girl capable of giving was responsive.

As an exhibition of stalwart and unselfish Americanism, the triumph of the Red Cross campaign was glorious beyond the power of words to describe. And what a startling revelation for the enemy it must be that upward of 40,000,000 Americans have given so freely to sustain the Red Cross in its mission of mercy and humanity in the allied countries in Europe after three Liberty Loans had been subscribed for. To the Teutonic Powers the resources of the United States must appear illimitable, and that realization is a long step toward defeat and peace.

THE WHEAT SUPPLY.

Continued improvement, with favorable weather conditions, in the Winter wheat States and encouraging messages from the Northwest warrant an increase of crop estimates made two weeks ago and based mainly upon the Government's report. In all probability the yield from Winter fields will slightly exceed 600,000,000 bushels. Increase of acreage in the Spring States is unexpectedly large. For example, Minnesota's Food Administrator says the addition in his State is 40 per cent. instead of the early estimate of 20 per cent. Throughout the Spring area the plants have a good start and are in excellent condition. It may be that the yield will rise to 300,000,000 bushels, making a total of about 900,000,000. From such a crop 280,000,000 could be exported in normal times, and by conservation the surplus can easily be enlarged to 350,000,000 or even 400,000,000. In Canada also estimates of acreage increase have been too low. It was said that the addition in Alberta was 20 per cent., but recent reports make it 40 per cent. Canada may harvest a crop of 300,000,000 bushels, or nearly 70,000,000 more than last year's. Our allies in Europe can safely rely upon the shipment of 500,000,000 bushels from the United States and Canada.

After the coming harvest there will be an ample supply of wheat for the foes of Germany at ports which can easily be reached. In addition, the large surplus stocks in Australia and Argentina will be available when ships can be spared for such service. And the ships are coming from the builders. For more than a year to come there will be wheat enough for our war partners, the Belgians, and the Northern European neutral countries with which we have trade agreements.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

More Than a Question of Teachers. Professor G. W. Thompson of the Maine State University, himself a teacher of the German language and the author of much-used textbooks on the subject, is disinclined, naturally enough, to join in the widespread demand for an immediate dropping of German from the curriculums of all American schools and colleges. Such desirability, according to his view, as there is for doing that arises, not from any intrinsic perils to be feared from knowledge of that language, but from the insidious use that has been made by Germans of their facilities for molding the minds of our youth while teaching it here.

The contention made by Professor Thompson in the letter printed by The Times yesterday was that the risk of such propaganda would be avoided if the teaching of German in this country were done, not, as now, for the most part by men and women of German birth, but wholly by Americans of other lineage. He admitted that some of these German teachers are probably quite loyal to the United States, but he also declared that not a few of them who, before the war, were highly trusted and much respected, had turned out to be malignant propagandists of Kaiserism and that it was impossible to be sure about any of the rest. He would, therefore, make a clean sweep of the Germans in all our German departments, of both schools and colleges, and turn this branch of instruction over to others.

This proposal is worthy of some consideration, but its implications—that the teaching, as teaching, would then be as well done as before, and that then the propaganda work would cease—are not beyond question. It may not be true that a living language, to be well or even best taught, must be taught by one to whom it is mother tongue. That, however, is a common assumption, not without basis in experience. On the other hand, there is at least the chance that the American teacher of German would be an admirer of Germans and their ideas, as well as of their language. So the original problem would not be completely or certainly solved by the proposed change.

The real question at issue is not Who shall teach German? but Shall German be taught? There is much to be said on both sides—a fact, by the way, that is no reason for not weighing the arguments and deciding between them. The issue has been raised, and it should be settled at once.

A Danger Not Met by Treaties. In a long and evidently anxious disquisition on the future of German industry, the Vossische Zeitung makes what may be the grave mistake of thinking that the only danger confronting Germany after the return of peace will lie in a refusal of the nations now at war with her to supply her manufacturers with the raw materials without which they cannot resume business with any hope of recovering their old position in the world's markets. This peril, it insists, must be remembered when the time comes for drafting peace treaties, and every one of them must contain articles providing that no such discrimination be attempted.

Possibly, and more than possibly, there is little basis for fearing a failure formally to recognize Germany's right, after the war, to buy whatever she wants wherever she can find it. The very drawing of a peace treaty presupposes at least permission for the resumption of ordinary trade relations between the contracting parties. There is little reason to apprehend the appearance anywhere, in the better time to come, of an indisposition to sell the Germans anything for which they can pay a satisfactory price. Selling raw materials to Germany, however, is one thing and the buying of her manufactured goods from her is quite another. The one is done by the people least of all likely to be influenced by other than business considerations, but the other is individual, and it is neither controlled nor guided by the agreements of Government officials.

Those who think that with the return of peace the present animosities against Germany will soon calm down and die out, exactly as have done animosities excited by previous wars, and that everybody will again buy what is good and cheap, regardless of its origin—the upholders of these theories may be right, but they ignore the difference between this war and all others of recent times. As a combatant Germany has chosen so to conduct herself as to have provoked over well-nigh the whole world a combination of fear and hatred that is certainly without a modern precedent and perhaps without any at all. No treaties will affect these feelings in the slightest degree, and if our laws continue to require that goods "made in Germany" be so marked, it will be many and many a year before antagonism to such goods will vanish from the minds of millions and millions of potential buyers where it is now so firmly planted.

A Medical Advance Announced. Without further information than the brief dispatches from Atlantic City now at hand contain, the announcement made in a paper on cancer of the larynx, read before the American Laryngological Association by Dr. Hubert Arrowsmith of Brooklyn, causes hope that it is true rather than understanding how it can be true. The statement was in effect that an improvement in technique has made laryngeal cancer more easily "curable" than is cancer in any other part of the body.

That would be an advance indeed, but why the same new technique is not applicable—if it is not—elsewhere than to the larynx does not appear. For the present, therefore, and for "laymen," the valuable part of the announcement lies in its repetition of the familiar advice to consult the specialist when the first suspicion of a cancerous growth arises, and in the addition to it of the declaration that suspicion of cancer of the larynx should be caused whenever a hoarseness not otherwise explicable has continued for six weeks.

All cancers are "curable" by the knife if resort to it is sufficiently prompt. Unfortunately, there are some cancers the existence of which cannot be known until they have reached a stage that makes the success of operation a matter of some doubt or the surgeon's skill useless. Still more unfortunately, too many people deliberately wait until it is too late and so lose the chance of safety.

What Forrest Said.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Re your interesting editorial, "Forrest," in this morning's Times, I think you are correct in stating that the General must have said, "I got thar fust with the most men." I have spent a great deal of time in the South, and have heard countrymen say "fust" and "thar" but never "firstest" and "mostest."

AN 1815 ANTI-PACIFIST.

Lord Teignmouth Sends an Extract from an Old American Magazine.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am taking the liberty of forwarding copy of a very remarkable article which appeared in an American magazine 100 years ago and is singularly apropos to the present crisis. The magazine from which the quotation is copied was sent to a family living in the North of England by some relatives who had settled in the U. S. A. several years earlier, and whose descendants are still living.

TEIGNMOUTH.
Clevedon, England, May 3, 1918.

[Inclosure.]

From The Analectic Magazine, (Philadelphia, 1815,) Vol. 6, P. 253.

We have before touched on the common, vulgar, and short-sighted error which causes people in every free country to repine at the support of those establishments which must be fostered in time of peace, in order to become adequate to the exigencies of war. Those who wait till the danger arrives before they contribute to the means of defense will find themselves the victims of a miserable, mistaken economy, and fare like the miser who was plundered of his hoards because he would not pay for a lock to his door. The war* is now over, and it seems that the representatives of the people act upon some prophetic certainty that another is never to arrive. But it should never be forgotten that for some inscrutable reason Providence has permitted wars to rage at various times in every country on the face of the earth, and that no nation can hope to escape them without a special dispensation such as has never yet been granted. Neither remoteness of situation, the most wary prudence, the best-regulated dispensations, the strictest justice, nor the most exemplary forbearance, it would seem, can screen a nation from this, any more than from any other inevitable consequences of the crimes and follies of human nature. War is, then, but a natural consequence of the operation of human passions and cannot be avoided without changing the nature of man. The history of every age and nation seems to demonstrate this truth. It is, then, a subject worth considering, whether a reasonable foresight in preparing for events that, however distant, must inevitably happen is not compatible with the maxims of a free government. The people who clamor against paying a reasonable sum for the support of the army or navy—that is for insurance against losses by war—and their representatives, who, actuated by considerations of personal popularity, lose sight of the obvious necessity of preparing in this warlike age against the hour when, like that of death, may not come today or tomorrow, yet will surely come at last, are justly chargeable with a neglect of the first lessons of experience.

*This refers to the war with Great Britain.

The Vanquisher of Richthofen.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the illustrated supplement of The New York Times, which I buy at my local dealer's in Cobourg, I looked with much interest at the pictures of the funeral of Baron Richthofen, and it occurred to me that, much as we may mourn the demise of the Baron, we should not allow our grief (?) to dampen the enthusiasm over the splendid service rendered by the brave and efficient Captain A. Roy Brown of Carleton Place, Ontario, who shot the Baron down.

Both Canada and the United States may claim some credit in connection with the heroic Captain Brown. Canadian by birth and residence all his life, he was enterprising enough to go to Dayton, Ohio, for training, and thence into the service in France in December, 1915, where he has won the D. S. O., and where his younger brother is fighting with the royal air forces.

The First Language to Learn.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In addition to what you said so well in this morning's issue about foreign languages in our public schools, it might justly be urged that the English language is not well taught. A large proportion of graduates from the public school which is nearest my residence, during the forty-four years in which I have met them, have been unable to read a simple English sentence without halting, stumbling, or even falling down. Let us insist upon our own language being read clearly and intelligently, even if we cannot hope for good writers or mathematicians among there students.

Her Occupation.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was perfectly delighted to read the letter in your paper today entitled "No Occupation, Indeed!" I myself am wife, mother, housekeeper, general houseworker, nurse, hostess, and, at present, gardener, and work from 7 A. M. to 11 P. M. steadily, and yet when I came to fill out the income tax return I had "no occupation." May I second the motion of "One of Them" that "Housewifery, with a big H, should take its place as the honorable and necessary occupation which it is"?

Labor Mission Impressions.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

American labor has done a wonderful thing here in London by heartening and stiffening British labor. And the Americans will have a great message to take home that will inspire our people to more strenuous efforts. America cannot do enough to pay the debt she owes Great Britain, and I will have some opportunity on my return to tell our people so.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Beat muffled drums, and in hushed accents speak
Of these, our dead, who sleep so quietly!
No more the trumpet's clarion voice shall shriek
Its summons here. No more shall liberty
Call them to aid. These are asleep, at rest;
Each with a flag, his flag, upon his breast!

Beat muffled drums and walk with silent tread
Where patriots lie, dreaming of victory!
They are our own, our noble soldier dead,
Who fought our fight, and fought it valiantly!
Strew loving tributes with unsparing hand
On these, the saviors of our menaced land!

Beat muffled drums and pass with prouder mien
Beyond this line that stretches solemnly.
No braver sons has freedom's vision seen!
They died for Right, for True Democracy!
Bedeck their graves, but in fresh memory keep
All these who lie today, at rest, asleep!

WHAT CAN BE DONE ABOUT RUSSIA?

Opinions on the Action to Be Taken by the Allies to Win the War in the East as Well as the West.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Few editorial articles on the Russian situation have been so effective and convincing as your article in Sunday's Times with the caption, "Too Late." It should be seriously taken to heart by the President and his Cabinet.

There are undoubtedly many difficulties in the way of allied co-operation in Siberia, notably the unreasonable fear of Japan by the Russian people. But I would venture a suggestion, which might in a measure relieve the Russian people of that fear. Let the allied armies operating in Siberia fight only under the Russian flag. Not the abominable red rag of revolution, but the old Russian flag—the Cross of St. Andrew. Because of the peculiar circumstances let there be, in that campaign, no Stars and Stripes, Union Jack, Tricolor, or Rising Sun, but only one flag—the Russian flag. Under it the Russians might once more rally and save their nation from German domination.

Our Greatest Problem.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your very interesting editorial article which appeared in The Times on May 26, entitled "Too Late," presents the greatest problem that confronts the Allies now or at any time during the war.

The Allies have not been quick enough to grasp the magnitude of the Russian situation, believing that by devoting their entire energy on the western front the war would be successfully prosecuted. Have we not learned enough of German treachery to know that they behold Russia as the key to their ambitious world dominion? And it is a possible opening to the kind of success Germany is striving for with all her might and for which she has been preparing for years. The germ of Prussianism once inoculated into that great Russian mass would set the whole world afire. The members of the staff of Ambassador Francis, who have recently arrived in Washington, assert that the Bolsheviki constitutes but one-tenth of 1 per cent. of the Russian population, 200,000 out of 200,000,000, and that they rule Russia only because of the accident whereby they hold the arms and the Government centres. This may be true, but are not the 200,000 betraying the 200,000,000 souls and a vast empire which stretches from the Baltic Sea to the Pacific Ocean?

We cannot close our eyes to what is transpiring in Russia today. German Kultur and efficiency are gradually working into the political circles of Russia in order to swing this empire on the side of the Central Powers. The Allies cannot remain inactive while the future is at stake. Russia must be made safe for the cause of liberty and justice instead of slipping day by day into the power of autocracy.

A Way to Strike Germany.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Those of us who really want to win the war find, at last, in your editorial article, "Too Late," in last Sunday's issue, what we have long waited for, an authoritative utterance on the Eastern question. Put it through, we beg you; late begun, but well begun. We have looked with some apprehension upon Germany's doings in the East; upon her quick availability of every chance in Russia; upon her skill in stirring up internecine strife; upon her instant organization, her ready and untiring propaganda, her traitorous diplomacy, and her world-assaulting insolence in Rumania and the Ukraine. How long shall we be the fools of German camouflage carried aloft by Lenine and Trotzky? How long shall we humor the Bolsheviki at the throat of Russia? Let England remember Quebec! There's a back way up the heights. Japan is our ally; the Pacific is as near the United States as the Atlantic, Australia and New Zealand good way stations. Why, indeed, "hesitate or palter" over some problematical future in Japan, China, or Siberia? We put our faith in the honor of our allies. Like true Americans, who trust the dollar, we shall dig into our pockets at the behest of Uncle Sam. We will dig as deep as our boys "over there" dig the trenches, but why not dig into our brains? Why not trench our "gray matter" deep enough to outclass the Huns? We can stretch ourselves to meet German intrigue, propaganda, diplomacy, and overmatch it, for we have truth on our side. Continuous, consistent, counteracting, skillful diplomacy is our business in Russia, as well as armed force. If Colonel Roosevelt can hold Russia, put him where he can get hold. Well, let us be calm. Perhaps some one's there already.

An Industrial Expedition.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The editorial article in Sunday's Times of May 26, headed "Too Late," is one of the most timely and most interesting that I have read, and I wish to congratulate you on the position you have taken therein.

In March I was in Seattle for a week, the guest of Mr. Samuel Hill, who, for twelve years, up to ten years ago, was actively associated with his father-in-law, James J. Hill, in the upbuilding of the Northwest. Mr. Hill showed me in Seattle a great amount of railway equipment, which had been lying exposed to the elements for several months, because it was nobody's business to ship it to Russia, where it is so sorely needed. He also showed me letters that convinced me that Russia would welcome and respond to an industrial expedition that would bring nails and shoes to her people.

Mr. Hill's idea is that 30,000 troops should precede this industrial expedition, to be made up of 10,000 Americans and an equal number of Japanese and Chinese. His thought is that the Russians should be impressed with the fact that we would supply their needs, accepting their promises to pay, and while not interfering in any way with their own form of government, we would co-operate with them in annihilating our common enemy, German imperialism.

Japanese and Chinese.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I want to thank you for your editorial article in Sunday's issue of The Times under the caption of "Too Late." It certainly voiced the serious thoughts of a host of loyal Americans. Altruism is a beautiful theory, but there is such a thing as being altogether too altruistic. We must not forget that, after all is said, we are in this war for our own protection. Our principles will avail us little unless we can protect ourselves. I would not minimize the thought that our ideals are lofty and that in a great measure we are fighting for those ideals. But fighting a mob at our front door when the back of the house is being invaded is a sorry way to protect our home. We are sure to lose our home unless it is entirely defended. Moreover, we are fighting madmen, and under such circumstances we ought not to stand upon the order of fighting nor the method of fighting. If the Japanese and Chinese can protect us from the menace in the rear, let them "go to it" and "God bless them."

Terms Dictated in Berlin.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Is not the present the time for emphasizing this resolve, that the allied armies shall occupy and hold Berlin until Germany shall have vacated Russian territory and dissolved the agreements enforced upon the Russian people? Will anything less avail? Then, having sunk or taken away Germany's warships, entail continued obedience to these terms by economic compulsion.

PROPAGANDA FOR RUSSIA.

Indorsement of Views Expressed by Prof. Masaryk, the Czech Leader.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I add my full indorsement to Professor Masaryk's survey, published in your issue of May 27, of the Russian situation in general, and of his suggestion, in particular, to counteract as quickly and efficiently as possible the feverish German press propaganda which is now going on throughout the whole Russian Empire? Let us start with Siberia, the only entrance door at our disposal to Moscow-Petrograd-Koenigsberg-Berlin, our Hamburg-Budapest-Constantinople-Bagdad line of German penetration. Why could not, indeed, Mr. Melville E. Stone or some other man of his standing and capacities, with a staff of 200 to 300 of the most prominent Russian journalists and writers living in this country, and provided with an unlimited drawing account on Uncle Sam, immediately proceed to Vladivostok to organize there a group of pro-Ally dailies, weeklies, and monthlies which would beat to a frazzle the, after all, but clumsy efforts of the Press Bureau of the Wilhelmstrasse?

The very cable message announcing the impending arrival of this journalistic batallion would electrify the whole intellectual atmosphere of Russia. America comes in a spirit, now everywhere fully recognized, of absolute disinterestedness, and, into the bargain, with a pocket full of real gold and coin which certainly will be preferred to William's and Helfferich's depreciated fiat paper money.

My courageous and truth-loving countryman, Thomas G. Masaryk, who knows thoroughly not only the physical and political but also the psychological lay of Mitteleuropa, will bear out my statement that if the Allies do but the right thing and do it quickly, Germany, the country that could not assimilate a handful of Poles which formed an integral part of the country for far more than a century, not to speak of the insignificant Lothringian faithful remnant of France, will choke to death by the enormous Slavonic-Finnish-Lettish morsel she is trying to gurgle down in her ravenous hunger for more land, more booty, more military glory.

The Russian Samson Agonistes will recover his sight under the loving and intelligent care of his numerous friends, and then woe to the Teutonic oppressors! The Slavic giant will with the same herculean vigor shake the pillars of the imperial, royal, and princely palaces of Germany with which he shook the colonnades of the Winter Palace at Petrograd and the Czar's residence in Tsarskoe Selo. Let us, then, be of good cheer and hopeful of the future. Everything points to a final and definite victory of the Allies.

POLITICAL PEACE.

An Important Consideration in Solving War Problems.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I congratulate The Times upon its clarion call in yesterday's issue? Every line in "Too Late" opens out facts and possibilities that have been burning themselves into the minds of thoughtful people ever since the Russian revolution began.

He who runs might read that if Germany can secure a grip on Russia sufficient to allow of an economic organization which will stave off famine, the simple Russian peasants will follow, through very gratitude whithersoever the conqueror leads.

Germany will dominate Russia through its stomach, unless the Allies quickly seize leadership. I use the word "Allies" advisedly, for no less than all should enter Siberia. We will go to fight not for or against any Russian faction, but for Russia against the common foe. We will go bearing food for all Russians who stand on their country's side against the enemy.

The problem is enormously difficult, but let us go to it. No problem is ever solved by sitting and looking at it; it must be tackled. We have looked at Russia a year, and are as ignorant as we were twelve months ago. Wisdom comes through action.

Why are we so slow and stupid? Because we are always allowing ourselves to be drawn off on side issues. We do not eat, sleep, and breathe with the idea of the importance of our cause, and civilization's need of our winning the war. Just take as illustration a recent occurrence—the question of women voting at the primaries. It was advisable, of course, for a woman who had definite convictions to enroll in the party of her choice, but why should columns of newspaper space be given for weeks to an endeavor to dragoon women into this political fold or that? Why at this supreme moment in the world's history should groups of new voters, the majority of whom have clear and worthy convictions concerning the war, be driven into corners, deluged with non-essential political abstractions, and be called upon to make choice of a party creed?

It is to be hoped that the women who enrolled were prompted by settled, inherited opinions, and not by the beaten-up froth of schools of politics. The smallness of the enrollment may be, in fact, a matter for congratulation, the meagreness indicating the absorption of women in the vital question of the hour.

It is my conviction, well founded, I believe, that the vast body of New York women are dominated by the philosophy so admirably set forth in The Times editorial article of today on "Political Peace." We say amen to your approval of the words of the Chairman of the Republican National Committee that to win the war we must have "absolute political peace at home."

Political peace, not direct primaries, will help the new voters crystallize their thought on the duty of the Allies to Russia at this time of crisis.

SCHOOL BOARD VOTES TO DROP GERMAN

Indorses the Recommendation of Superintendents to Abandon Instruction in Beginning Classes.

URGED AS WAR MEASURE

Superintendents, Giving Reasons for the Ban, Say It Will Be a Blow to German Morale.

The Board of Education, sitting as a committee of the whole, yesterday adopted unanimously the recommendation of the Board of Superintendents that in September, 1918, and for the duration of the war, no classes in beginning German shall be organized in the public schools of this city. The only member of the Board of Education who was not present was Frank D. Wilsey, whose absence was due to the death of a relative.

The recommendation of the Board of Superintendents was accompanied by a statement of reasons which led it to take that action. It said that the feeling against Germany was becoming more and more tense among the American people at large, and that feeling was reflected in an insistent demand to cease teaching German in the schools. The leaders of American life were daily becoming more inclined to abolish all things German in our national life. Many of the best American teachers had now such a strong feeling against Germany that they could not teach the German language with any enthusiasm. The effective teaching of German would, therefore, be done by the teachers of German origin, and it was a question whether, at this crisis, this was for the best interests of the pupils who were to be trained in the study of Americanism.

Although, the statement continued, there was every reason to believe that the pupils themselves would abolish the teaching of German by refusing to elect it, as shown by the fact that at present there were in the twenty-four high schools only 12,954 studying German, whereas 23,808 were in German classes in February, 1917, and that only 1,007 were at present enrolled in first-term German classes, when there were 5,839 in these classes in February, 1917, nevertheless a hands-off policy was not meeting the issue squarely.

New York, the statement said, should lead the way in abolishing the teaching of German as a means, even though a slight means, of winning the war by making a dent in Pan Germanism, by weakening possibly the morale of the German people as they come to realize that this great city was unwilling to endure any longer their language, and that it desired thus to break off more completely the possibility of intimate relations with them through the medium of language. This action would be a notice that New York regards this war as a war to a finish between opposing ideals.

Continuing, the statement said that the students did not need a knowledge of German for the study of science because this was learned in the English language. Those few technical experts who would need to know German for limited uses in their field might study it in the technical and scientific schools. The scientists in Great Britain, France, and the United States, the Superintendents said, had made such progress in chemistry and other sciences since the war began that, in general, there would be small need for German scientific works in the future. Translations into English and French would be made of those few scientific and technical books written in German which might be needed.

WILL SEND RESEARCH COMMISSION TO ROME

Italy-America Society Seeks to Improve the Relations Between the Two Countries.

The Executive Committee of the Italy-America Society at a meeting yesterday afternoon in the Lawyers' Club appointed a committee to select a commission to study Italian economic problems as affected by the relations of that country with America after the war. The committee is composed of A. Barton Hepburn, Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, George F. Baker, Jr., Lindsay Russell, and William Fellowes Morgan.

The commission will visit Italy, arranging its trip in co-operation with the Italian Embassy in this country and the American Embassy in Rome, and will make a careful study of factors bearing on after-war trade, travel, and finance.

At the meeting gifts aggregating $8,500 were announced to be devoted to the work of the society in disseminating information in this country about Italy and its participation in the war and for the improvement of Italian-American relations.

A resolution was adopted thanking Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney for her services in connection with Italy-America Day concert and mass meeting at the Metropolitan Opera House. The proceeds were approximately $45,000, which will be turned over to the Italian Red Cross. Mrs. Jules Bache has offered a prize of $100 for a popular song in Italian touching on America's participation in the war and celebrating the spirit of liberty, which was the fundamental basis of our entrance into the war.

RIVAL REPUBLICANS HERE.

Sweet Calls Upon Lewis, but Whitman Keeps Away.

All three Republican candidates for the nomination for Governor were in this city yesterday. Governor Whitman and Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, who entered the contest of their own volition, have been here for a couple of days. The arrival of Speaker Thaddeus C. Sweet of the Assembly, who persists in declaring that he "is in the hands of his friends," made the trio complete.

Despite this occurrence the Republican leaders in this city continued to go about their own affairs just as though nothing had happened. Governor Whitman was at the St. Regis, his usual abode in town. Speaker Sweet, regardless of the announcement that Attorney General Lewis had opened campaign headquarters at the Murray Hill Hotel, went there to stay, as usual. What is more, he called on his rival, Mr. Lewis, and had a nice half hour chat with him behind closed doors. Mr. Lewis and Speaker Sweet are both authorities for the statement that politics and their rival candidacies were not among the topics of their conversation.

Robert C. Morris, former head of the Republican County Committee and an ex-President of the Republican Club, was one of Mr. Lewis's callers. Others were Perley Morse, who was associated with Mr. Lewis in the Public Service Commission investigation; Ferris J. Meggs, a Franklin County Republican; Senator George A. Slater of Westchester, a lieutenant of William L. Ward, Republican leader in Westchester, who will give his support to Mr. Lewis; Captain John J. Jenkins and Harry W. Haines, both members of the Republican organization in Westchester County.

BALLOT BOX CHECKS FRAUD.

Invention of Election Board Clerk May Be Tested at Primaries.

A new type of ballot box, designed to be as near fraud proof as possible, will probably get a practical test at the September primaries in the general elections next Fall. Several sample boxes are in the possession of the Board of Elections, and it is expected that the board will recommend their use. The box, which is of metal, with a patent lock arrangement, was designed by Edward J. McGowan, a clerk in the Elections Board.

The novel feature of the box consists of a sliding piece of steel which fits underneath the slot through which the ballots are pushed. This door, when closed over the slot, is automatically locked by the snap lock, which at the same time locks the cover down. When the slide is in position the word "sealed" appears in the closed slot.

NEW CRITICISES WILSON AS PARTISAN

Most Uncompromising Since Jackson, Senator Tells Indiana Republican Convention.

CREEL BITTERLY ATTACKED

A Socialist and Seditious, Watson Asserts—Platform Charges Petty Politics in War's Conduct.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 29.—Declaring that President Wilson was the most astute leader the Democratic Party ever had, United States Senator Harry S. New of Indiana, addressing the Indiana Republican State Convention here today as permanent Chairman, asserted that he was also the "most uncompromising in his partisanship of any man who has occupied the White House since the days of Andrew Jackson." Senator New continued:

"President Wilson is a partisan in everything he does or thinks—as adroit as he is persistent. It is evident that the slogan of his party in the campaign before us is to be "Stand by the President," and the attending argument that, if one is a patriot and a true American, he must elect the candidates of the President's party for seats in Congress in order that he may have support in that body; or that if one fails to support those candidates, he votes to discredit the President and his administration, and gives aid and comfort to our enemy in arms.

"Mr. Creel, with his bunch of Socialistic, muck-raking misfits, is employing this sort of propaganda in every form at his unlimited command—the bulletins, the movies, and the Chautauquas. The money of the taxpaying public foots the bills."

Senator New declared that President Wilson had every possible support from the Republican Party in every step taken or contemplated with reference to the war and contrasted this support with the actions of the Democratic Party toward Abraham Lincoln during the civil war.

"Our message to the President," said Senator New in conclusion, "is 'Go ahead.' We are with you heart and soul, in life and in purse in the things that have to do with the winning of the war, but, make no mistake, we abate no particle of our devotion to the party of our choice and yield nothing of our principles, but reassert them."

Watson Fears an Autocracy.

Senator Watson of Indiana took up the relation of the executive and legislative powers in the National Government.

"While we are fighting autocracy across the seas, we must be careful that we shall not build up autocratic powers on this side of the ocean," he said. "We all obediently follow the President as the Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy. But Congress, in matters relating to legislation having to do with finance and many other subjects, has the right to decide as it thinks best, without Executive coercion. Congress should not be a mere echo of the President's voice."

Senator Watson denounced the appointment of George Creel as Chairman of the Committee on Public Information. He said Creel was a Socialist of the most pronounced variety. Creel sent out through The Official Bulletin the wildest and most dangerous seditious literature. The Senator said he would never vote to establish a press censorship and place a man like Creel in charge.

WANTS DR. BROWN TRIED.

Port Health Officer Believes He Should Confront Accusers.

Dr. Leland E. Cofer, Health Officer of the Port of New York and a member of the Board of Health, took issue yesterday with the announced desire of Health Commissioner Royal S. Copeland to grant Dr. Lucius P. Brown, Director of the Bureau of Food and Drugs, merely a "hearing" and not a trial with witnesses and counsel present.

"I think Dr. Brown ought to have a chance to face his accusers," said Dr. Cofer. "This is a bad time to let any impression get out that the hearing on Monday will be a star chamber proceeding and that the board was approaching the matter in a way that would make it appear that the outcome had been decided on before the hearing took place.

"I believe in a thorough and open investigation and the rendering of a nonpartisan decision. My mind is entirely open on the matter. The question of the kind of trial Dr. Brown was to receive was never brought up at a meeting of the Board of Health where I was present."

Dr. Howard Duffield of the First Presbyterian Church and Professor of Hymnology in the school, was presented an American flag by Governor Whitman. Judge Rosalsky spoke.

VOTE KAISER MAN OF HOUR.

Now Department of Justice Wants Names of Those 11 Yale Men.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 29.—Eleven members of the senior class of the Yale academic department voted the Kaiser the "man of the hour." Announcement of their vote in the annual senior Class Book today caused a flurry.

The class contains eleven Germans and eleven Austrians and they were under suspicion, but David Edward Bronson of Stillwater, Minn., editor of the class annual, asserted tonight that the eleven votes were cast by prominent members of the class, who did not vote out of admiration for the Kaiser, but simply because they regarded him as the man of the hour, just as Caesar, Nero, or Napoleon was each in his time.

Mr. Bronson says the eleven deny all pro-German tendencies. He declined to make public their names, but said all were members of the Yale reserve officers' training corps or naval unit.

Representatives of the Department of Justice here announced that they would demand from the Yale authorities the names of the men who voted for the Kaiser.

It was stated that most of the Germans and Austrians in the class voted for either President Wilson or ex-President Roosevelt as the man of the hour. Mr. Wilson received about 150 votes, more than all the other personages combined. Pershing, Kerensky, and Lloyd George each received about as many votes as the Kaiser.

GREGORY SPEEDS UP COURTS

Wants Them to Give Quick Trials to All Charged with Sedition.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Attorney General Gregory in a letter to District Attorneys today urges that Federal courts remain in session and give immediate trials to persons charged with violating war statutes. Attorneys were told to confer with Judges in an effort to have Grand Juries constantly ready for call and to keep trial jurors available at all times. If the exigencies of speed require it, special juries may be called.

It is necessary to the safety and welfare of the country, said the Attorney General, to try persons charged with disloyal or seditious utterances, espionage, sabotage, or other anti-war acts as soon as indictments are returned. To prevent those arrested or convicted for disloyal propaganda from continuing their acts, even though they keep barely within the law while on bail, attorneys were instructed to make an effort to have the bail fixed as high as possible.

BOND FOR MRS. BOSWORTH.

Mother of First New Jersey Boy Killed in War Gets a Reward.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Secretary Baker has forwarded to Mrs. Sophie Bosworth of Millburn, N. J., a $50 Liberty bond, bought with money subscribed at the Mothers' Day Rally on Boston Common by mothers of boys in the military service. The money was raised with the stipulation that it be used in buying a bond to be sent to the mother of the first New Jersey boy to give his life for his country in the war with Germany.

GEORGES OHNET DEAD AT 70.

Novelist and Dramatist Was Best Known for "Le Maitre des Forges."

Word has just been received here from Paris of the death of Georges Ohnet, the French novelist and dramatist, in his seventy-first year. Georges Ohnet was born in the midst of the Revolution of 1848, and educated at the Lycée Bonaparte with the intention of entering the legal profession. After the Franco-Prussian war of 1870, however, he became editor of Le Pays, and later of the Constitutionnel.

Seven years later Georges Ohnet wrote his first play, entitled "Regina Scarpi," and in 1880 his first novel, "Serge Panine," appeared. A year later his reputation as a popular novelist was firmly established by the appearance of his best known work, "Le Maitre de Forges," which was dramatized in 1883 and produced with great success at the Gymnase, where it ran for more than a year. It was later translated into English and produced by Mr. and Mrs. Kendal in London under the title of "The Ironmaster." Many other novels were written by Ohnet, but none of them obtained the popularity of "Le Maitre de Forges."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Irregular Changes, with Rails Showing Better Tone—New Freight Rates and Steel Trade.

With the Stock Exchange and banks to be closed today there was a marked loss in interest displayed in dealings on the Stock Exchange yesterday, with an irregular movement in prices. The rails were generally in better favor, Union Pacific on active dealings moving up 2⅝ points and other carriers showing smaller net gains. The industrials were generally stronger in the early part of the session, but reacted later, closing with few of the specialties well above Tuesday's last price, but the more active issues either near their previous close or showing small losses. The division of business between the industrials and rails was more even, showing a further improvement in sentiment toward the latter. Traders are greatly puzzled over the bearing the new taxation program will have on securities, but they are beginning to take a less discouraged view of the future of the companies which will be most serevely affected.

Little stir in the market was caused by the Government's plans for reorganizing the express companies into one operating concern with capitalization fixed by the actual value of the physical properties turned in. Both Adams and Wells Fargo shares moved forward on small transactions. The new arrangement is expected to mean moderate dividends protected by the entrance of the Railroad Administration as a partner in the operation of the package carriers. The opportunities for reducing expenses in the consolidation of the express companies is limited, since there has been little duplication of service, but their status will be greatly improved over the uncomfortable position in which they have struggled in recent months.

The first attempt to measure the effect of the 25 per cent. increase in freight rates on manufacturing costs was made in the weekly reviews of the steel trade. The Iron Age points out that with nearly five tons in raw materials and supplies represented by every ton of steel put out the new tariffs mean additional costs of between $2 and $3 in every ton of finished material. The War Industries Board has not yet determined to what extent the steel companies can supply commercial demands, but the new plans for Government war activities seem to indicate that no early improvement can be looked for from the consumer's standpoint. The Iron Age says that a reflection of the adjustments brought about among less essential industries is seen in the preparation among some contracting interests to disband their organizations for the remainder of the war.

Trading on the Stock Exchange in Liberty bonds continues on a large scale, with the taxable issues losing ground in favor of the first issue of war bonds. The second 4s touched 94 flat yesterday, afterward recovering one-fifth of 1 per cent., while the 4¼s dropped to 97.06. Uncertainty over the possibility of the restoration of St. Paul's preferred dividend was not ended by yesterday's meeting of the board, which again postponed a decision, and no announcement has yet been made in the matter of Government aid for the Brooklyn Rapid Transit, with its $57,000,000 of notes soon to be met. Call money was somewhat easier yesterday, most of the day's loans being made at 5¼ per cent.

LONDON TRADING SUBDUED.

Due to Haig's Communique—Advance in Mining Shares.

LONDON, May 29.—The Stock Exchange opened today with a slightly easier feeling. There was occasional profit taking and hesitation on the part of buyers. Trading later became very steady, but the demand was still subdued in view of Field Marshal Haig's colorless communiqué.

The only feature was an advance in some mining shares and the shares of the Antofagasta Railway. Owing to the dividend announcement, money was more freely offered. Discounts were steady.

Trading Dull on Bourse.

PARIS, May 29.—Trading was dull on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 60 francs for cash. Exchange on London, 27 francs 15½ centimes. Five per cent. loan, 87 francs 85 centimes.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Call Loans Renewed at 5½%—All Time Loans Command 6%.

Call money was somewhat easier yesterday, some transactions being made at 4¾ per cent. The renewal rate was 5½ per cent., which was the high for the day. The closing quotation was 5 per cent. The time money market was again inactive and whatever loans were made brought 6 per cent.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Getting Out the Steel.

Reports from steel making centres indicate that production is running with fair steadiness at the highest level of the year. Competition among departments at various plants is reported to be bringing encouraging results, as the men put their shoulders to the job of supplying shipyards and munition plants with all the steel they need. The signs point toward not only continuous adequate supplies of material for war work, but also the piling up of stocks of plates and structural steel at the ship-building plants and of projectile steel at the shell factories to a size this Summer which will counteract any possible transportation difficulties next Winter.

To Increase Manganese Imports.

The sub-committee of the American Iron and Steel Institute which has been handling ferroalloys has arranged with the Shipping Board for an increase of ship room from Brazil for the importation of manganese ore. Ships will be provided to insure the importation of 35,000 tons per month. The ore will be alloted among the steel companies in proportion to their needs for Government work. The arrangement is of much importance to manufacturers, as a threatened shortage of the alloy recently caused apprehension lest the plants be forced to rely to a greater extent than before on lower grade manganese ores than those found in Brazil.

Irregular Yet Firm Market.

A high degree of irregularity marked yesterday's stock market, but it was seldom when the broad trend indicated that selling pressure was of the insistent variety. On the exchange floor brokers reported "good" buying of rails and industrials and equally "good" selling of the same issues by other interests at the same time. Crucible and Lackawanna Steel, the members of the major steel group to show recessions at the end of the day, lost small fractions only, and Steel common closed unchanged after much backing and filling. Such short selling as occurred appeared to be largely offset by the covering of short contracts on the eve of the holiday.

Calm Over War Situation.

With the new taxation program set in the background for the time being, the Street found more to study in the war reports than on the other days of the week. The same air of confidence as on Monday and Tuesday was in evidence in banking and brokerage offices. If nervousness over the German advance caused any substantial selling of securities, it was not done in such a hurried fashion as to arouse gossip among the brokers.

The Hannay Case.

The Court of Appeal in London has handed down a decision in favor of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York in the litigation instituted by A. Hannay & Co. of Liverpool some seven years ago which was the outgrowth of the Knight-Yancey cotton bill of lading frauds. The suit was tried in this country and in England, and the question at issue was the liability of the bank for bills of exchange issued against bills of lading which subsequently developed to be fraudulent. The United States courts held that adjudication of the issue should be made in England, and the lower court there decided in favor of Hannay. On appeal the higher tribunal rendered a judgment in favor of the trust company, declaring that the defendant could not recover.

Demand for New York State Bonds.

Bond dealers report that there is widening demand for New York State bonds on the part of investors who are seeking securities which are exempt from taxation. The fact that the State is not likely to put out another bond issue, as indicated by the report of Controller E. M. Travis, is regarded as an assurance that the supply of the bonds will not be increased and that consequently the demand is likely to tend toward higher prices for the limited available supply. Mr. Travis says that it will be unnecessary for the State to have recourse to bond issues or direct taxation, as was the case previously.

The St. Paul Dividends.

Directors of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul are apparently still clinging to the hope that their contract with the Government will enable them to maintain their full dividends on both stock issues, for yesterday's Directors' meeting, like the four preceding it, went by without any decision being reached on the semi-annual declaration, now five months overdue. It was reported privately that the negotiations on the St. Paul contract had reached the stage where the rate of compensation could be approximately figured, and that it would amount to the full 7 per cent. on the preferred, but leave only about 2½ per cent. over for the common. At the same time, the road is trying to secure an advance of funds from the Government to relieve it from its most pressing needs.

The Shipping Operation Fees.

Stockholders in shipping concerns, in the judgment of shipping men, can draw only cold comfort from the figures in the Shipping Board's circular announcement of the fees, or commissions, which it will pay for the operation, for Government account, of the big fleet of requisitioned steamers which are still running in peaceful trades. The commission, to be paid on the gross freight list on each voyage, amounts to 1 per cent., as had been predicted, on business to Europe; 1¼ per cent. to South America, but only ¾ of 1 per cent. on bulk cargo.

Penalizing Enterprise.

Shipping men are even more indignant over the order of the Shipping Board regarding agency fees for requisitioned ships in foreign ports, than they are over what they consider the inadequate commissions to be paid American firms for handling these ships. Under the Shipping Board's ruling, if the operating firm has to employ an agent, not part of its own organization, for attending to the business of one of the Government's ships in a foreign port, it can charge this agent's fee to the Government, but if it has its own branch office or regular representative in the foreign port, it must pay the agency fee itself. "In other words," said one big shipping man yesterday, "our stockholders must pay for our enterprise in establishing our own chain of agencies, to handle American business, in foreign ports before the war."

New Taxes and the Marine Deal.

The prospect of new and stringent taxes on corporate incomes and excess profits, suggested by the President in his address to Congress, appears likely to form a new stumbling block in the way of the negotiations for the sale by the International Mercantile Marine Company of its British properties. The opinion was expressed yesterday that the terms offered by the British syndicate could not be either accepted or rejected until the new tax bill had been studied, as otherwise the company might find its share of the proceeds of the sale too small to make it worth proceeding. On the other hand, it may be contended, something on the line of the stock dividend decision, that the money received was not, in great part, income, but receipts in liquidation and therefore not taxable as income.

STEEL PLANTS AT MAXIMUM.

Ship Plates Come First, Shell Steel Second, and Rails Third.

The steel plants are working at a close to maximum capacity basis, and trade reports indicate that new Government projects which will require heavy tonnages of steel are under way. The mills are putting plates for ships ahead of every other sort of manufacturing, with shell steel second, and rails third in the list for special expedition. It is expected in the trade that another week will pass before the committees of the War Industries Board and steel manufacturers will present data on future Government needs, and then the commercial consumers will know where they stand in regard to supplies.

"Further plans are on foot," says The Iron Age, "for Government operations on a large scale. Two new shipyards are one item, and more may soon be heard of additional gun plants. Four large Eastern shipyards will be greatly extended at once, and the Government will provide larger facilities for fabricating plates and shapes for ships.

"The advances in freight rates just announced at Washington will bear heavily on pig iron and steel costs. With close to five tons of raw materials and supplies represented in a ton of steel, the new freight schedule means $2 to $3 additional per ton of finished material. While this increment does not argue for a reduction in prices when the Government action is again taken next month, the fact that the Government now absorbs so large a proportion of the output obviously works against its putting up prices on itself. Excess profits, subject to heavy taxation, have a very different look when derived from sales made to the general consuming trade."

The Iron Trade Review says:

"By new tariffs, pig iron costs will be elevated from $1 to $1.25 per ton in the favored locations and from $1.25 to $1.50 in the more remote districts. Joined with the general advance is another freight proposal of the railroads practically to wipe out iron and steel commodity rates in central association territory, by putting them on a class or mileage basis. It is highly interesting that the ground advanced for this move is that competition between the railroads which created commodity rates no longer exists."

RESERVE BANK BUYS SITE FOR A HOME

TO BUILD AFTER THE WAR

Great Expansion of the Bank's Business, the Directors Explain, Caused Their Action.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York, whose resources are about $1,300,000,000, or more than 36 per cent. of the aggregate resources of the entire Federal Reserve system, is going to have a building of its own. It was announced yesterday that the bank had acquired property of approximately 33,000 square feet, comprising the entire block front on the easterly side of Nassau Street from Liberty Street to Maiden Lane. The cost of the property will be slightly less than $3,100,000, or about $93 a square foot, the price agreed upon being nearly $200,000 less than the tax valuation.

The plans have not yet been drawn, and according to bank officials work on the new building will not start until after the conclusion of the war.

At the present time the Federal Reserve Bank is housed in the Equitable Building, where it occupies a corner of the main floor, the whole of the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth floors, half of the fifth floor, and a quarter of the fourth. The bank also occupies the entire building at 50 Wall Street. The quarters of the bank have been greatly increased for the accommodation of the clerical forces required for Liberty Loan activities.

Today the bank has more than 1,200 employes, compared with 175 a year ago. The bank's resources, which now approximately are $1,300,000,000, were only $366,000,000 a year ago, or, in other words, the growth of the institution in the last year has amounted to more than 255 per cent.

While the Federal Reserve act provides that Federal Reserve banks shall be exempt from Federal, State, and municipal taxation on income derived from its capital stock and surplus, the law specifically says that the exemption does not apply to taxes upon real estate.

The property acquired by the Reserve Bank has a frontage on Nassau Street of 164¼ feet, on Liberty Street of 235 feet, and on Maiden Lane of 269 1-6 feet. The street numbers of the properties are 28-50 Maiden Lane, 40-52 Nassau Street, and 33-51 Liberty Street. The previous owners of the property were the Mutual Life Insurance Company, the Lawyers Title and Trust Company, the Estate of William Ziegler, the Estate of William Ruhnstruck, and Joseph L. Delafield.

The contracts were closed through the real estate firm of Horace S. Ely & Co. Messrs. George R. Read & Co. were associated with that firm as brokers in the acquisition of the Ziegler and Ruhnstruck parcels, the Ziegler Estate being represented by William Curtis Demarest and J. Curry Watson. The law firm of White & Case and the Title Guarantee and Trust Company represented the Reserve Bank in connection with the title examinations.

Explain Selection of Site.

In a statement given out by the Federal Reserve Bank, it was pointed out that the site had been selected after a careful study by a special committee of the Directors of the bank, and that it had been decided upon by the board because of its convenient situation, splendid light, and "the opportunity which it afforded of erecting a building which architecturally would be in keeping with such an institution," and also because the tract could be acquired at a price which realty experts considered very low.

"The action of the Directors in acquiring this property," reads the statement, "has been rendered necessary by the extraordinarily rapid enlargement in the business and functions of the bank. The rapidity of this increased activity has forced the bank to operate its various bureaus and divisions in many places considerably separated from the central office.

"The Directors plan to build a new structure, which will provide a suitable permanent home for the bank, the construction of which will, of course, be delayed until after the close of the war. It is estimated that a very material saving in the cost of operation will be made by eliminating the large rentals now paid by the bank and substituting therefor merely the cost of operating its own premises, plus the interest on the original cost of purchase and construction."

According to the last annual report of the Federal Reserve Bank the rent paid in 1917 amounted to $55,550, an increase of more than $10,000 compared with the rentals for 1916. The rent bill for the current year will be considerably larger because since the close of 1917 the bank has leased the twenty-fourth and the twenty-fifth floors of the Equitable Building.

Bank's Vaults Now Overtaxed.

Despite the fact that the bank recently acquired unusually large vaults of the most modern type, they have already proved to be inadequate. The bank's report says the capacity of the vaults installed a year ago had become so taxed with Liberty bonds and other matter relating thereto that the bank had been obliged again to avail itself of the courtesy of the New York Clearing House Association and use one of its vaults to store currency.

There is pending in Congress a bill providing for the abolition of the Sub-Treasuries six months after the end of the war. In the event of its final passage a portion of the work done by the Sub-Treasury will be transferred to the Reserve Bank. Inasmuch as the plans for the new building of the New York Reserve Bank have not yet been drawn and construction will not commence until after the conclusion of the war, it will be possible so to arrange the building as to accommodate the requirements of a Sub-Treasury adjunct.

Surplus Was $7,923,763 After Having Given the Red Cross $418,346.

The International Nickel Company reports that its plants were worked at capacity last year to supply the unusual demand, and business prospects pointed toward full operations in the current year, including the extensive additions made to the corporation's facilities. Earnings in the fiscal period ended March 31 amounted to $16,181,501 before providing for taxes and depreciation, a decrease of $798,107 from the year before. Federal and State taxes and administrative costs absorbed $4,200,860, compared with $1,430,371 in 1917, and after setting aside $1,850,653 for depreciation, a balance of $10,129,988 remained for dividends, compared with $13,557,970 in the preceding year.

The company had a surplus of $2,065,004 when dividends had been paid, including a special disbursement to be applied to the Red Cross fund, amounting to $418,346. The balance sheet showed that the total surplus when the year ended was $7,923,763. The treasury held $3,006,398 in cash, against $6,227,012 a year before, while working capital totaled $10,008,370, in contrast with $12,003,585 at the end of the preceding fiscal year.

W. A. Bostwick, President, said in the annual statement yesterday that the plant additions of the last three years had prevented a serious shortage in the supply of nickel and a consequent delay in the war programs of the allied countries.

"The company's new refinery at Port Colborne, Ontario," he added, "is now approaching completion, and it is anticipated that it will be placed in operation during the coming Summer unless still further difficulties of shortage of labor and materials are experienced. There has been expended in the construction of this plant up to March 31, 1918, $5,314,091, all of which has been financed out of treasury funds. In addition, there has been expended for new construction and improvements at the company's other plants in Canada and the United States the sum of $1,170,062 during the fiscal year. The operation of the refinery at Port Colborne, together with the completion of other construction work in Canada, now well advanced, will still further increase the company's capacity."

WHEAT.

The new wheat harvest is approaching rapidly. Cutting will begin in the next two weeks in the Southwest and there is every prospect of a very heavy yield. Favorable reports come from almost every section of the belt and the recent rains have assured an abundance of moisture to carry the wheat to harvest and to cause a full, plump berry. It was said that America will import about 8,000,000 bushels from Australia, but in view of the tremendous stocks there and the near approach of harvest here this amount will have little bearing on conditions.

RYE.

Market easy; No. 2 Western $2.01, cost and freight, New York.

CORN.

The corn market of late has developed the habit of opening firm and closing weak and this occurred on Wednesday. Further rains in the West caused more talk of delayed planting operations and, as longs sold quite heavily on Tuesday, the technical position was looked upon as firmer. In the local cash market kiln dried No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.66, fifteen days' shipment; No. 4 yellow, $1.56¼, ten days' shipment, cost and freight, New York.

OATS.

The oats market was again dominated by the action of the May position, and as offers were comparatively small prices ruled steady, easing off somewhat in sympathy with corn. The trade was at a loss as to what to expect in the way of deliveries on Friday and the market was governed by technical conditions rather than by the supply and demand situation. In the local cash market standard was quoted at 80½@81c; No. 2 white, 81½c; No. 3 white, 80@80½c; No. 4 white, 79@80c; fancy clipped white, 82@84c; ordinary clipped white, 81@82c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

Small receipts of live hogs at Western points caused a moderate early upturn in the provision market, but the demand was slow, and subsequently prices developed weakness under renewed pressure. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 11,000; estimated for Thursday, 23,000; Kansas City received 13,000, and Omaha 11,000 hogs.

COFFEE.

There was a steadier tone in the market for coffee futures yesterday, which may have reflected higher milreis prices in Brazil, while there was also covering for over the holidays. The opening was a point higher, and the market closed net unchanged to 5 points higher, with July relatively firm. That delivery sold up from 8.08c to 8.10c, or 5 points net higher, while December ruled around 8.46c, or 2 points above Tuesday's closing figures. The local spot market was dull and unchanged at 8⅝c for Rio 7s, and 10¼c to 11¼c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

According to refiners' statistics for week ending May 25 receipts at the seven United States refining points showed a slight gain over the previous week, while meltings decreased a little over 4,000 tons. The International Sugar Committee reported purchases of 45,000 bags Cubas, first half June shipment, at 4.985c, cost and freight. While the distribution of refined sugar is not large, it is sufficient to meet the immediate requirements of the trade, which is in a fairly easy position with the near approach of the active canning season.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 17,611 packages. Increasing supplies and a very slow expansion of the trade is causing further weakness on most grades of creamery. Prices are being shaded ¼@½c., and the tone is weak at the decline. No change in ladles or packing stock. Creamery, higher than extras, a lb., 43¼@44c; extras, (92 score,) 42¾@43c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 40¼@42½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 37@40c; thirds, 35@36c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 45@45½c; extras, 44@44½c; firsts, 41½@43½c; seconds, 39@41c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 42@42½c; good to prime, 39½@41½c; common to fair, 35@39c; renovated, extras, 37½@38c; firsts, 36@37c; lower grades, 32@34c; imitation creamery, firsts, 33½@34c; ladies, current make, firsts, 31@32c; seconds, 29½@30c; lower grades, 28@29c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 29½@30c; No. 2, 28½@29c; lower grades, 26@28c.

EGGS.—26,511 cases. The quality of the supply is irregular and largely defective. Strictly fine Northern fresh gathered, showing a good proportion of full, strong-bodied eggs fit for the best trade, are in light supply and firm, with the tendency slightly in sellers' favor. There is pressure to sell the average good and lower grades, which comprise the bulk of the supply, and values for these are irregular, with a disposition to accept reasonable offers. The full range of prices shows little change. Nearby white eggs of strictly fancy quality are scarce and firm, but the defective lots move slowly and are pressed for sale at irregular prices. Fresh gathered extras, a dozen, 37@37½c; storage packed firsts, 34½@36½c; regular packed extra firsts, 35@36c; regular packed firsts, 33@34½c; seconds and poorer, 28@32c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, storage packed, 29½@30c; No. 1 regular packed, 28@28½c; No. 2 and poorer, 25@28c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 26@28c; under grades, 15@25c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 41@42c; ordinary to prime, 38@40c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 36@40c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 36@38c; State, Pennsylvania and nearby hennery browns, 38@40c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 30@38c; duck eggs, 29@45c.

THE COTTON MARKET

Optimistic Weather Report Results in 60-Point Rise in Prices.

In the face of the most optimistic weekly weather report yet issued by the Weather Bureau this season, and two more private crop reports giving the condition above normal for this date, the local cotton market yesterday showed the firmness of trade conditions by an advance in prices of from 60 to 72 points net, the close being practically at the top for the session.

The advance was scored almost entirely on trade conditions and the technical position of the market. The only outside bullish feature mentioned on the floor was the continuance of good news from American shipyards, with the implication of a steady increase in the supply of tonnage, and consequently in the export facilities, from now on. This feature, however, has been in the market for some weeks, and could not be held peculiarly responsible for the strength of yesterday's prices.

The rise in prices appeared, in other words, to be a concession by the local market that the position of the South, in its struggle for top prices with the manufacturer, has been strengthened, or its existing strength more plainly revealed by recent events. Evidence that buyers are coming to the farmers' prices on the remainder of this year's crop is seen in the course of spot sales on Southern markets this week, though prices have been held steady or even raised from recent levels. The local spot quotation yesterday crossed the 30-cent level once more for the first time in more than six weeks.

There have been two uncertainties which appeared on yesterday's market to have been overestimated by short sellers, the amount and quality of the carry-over, and the pressure upon the remaining holders of cotton to liquidate, as against the financial resources back of the cotton. Consequently, when the short interest turned to cover, the cotton was not to be had, and they had to come to the holders' prices.

The opening and first hour was relatively easy, with prices off from 7 to 19 points and going lower on realizing and easier cables, and the more far-seeing shorts covered at this opportunity. There were not enough offerings to go around, however, and when the real covering effort began, and some of the earlier sellers turned to buy, the market began to move in lively fashion, and continued upward, with only momentary reactions, until the very close. It was a rather broader market, as well as a more active one, than has been the case for some days. Exports yesterday were 16,781 bales, or 3,512,945 so far this season, against 5,034,165 a year ago.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

The market on the Consolidated Stock Exchange yesterday closed steady, with prices in a majority of the active issues showing fractional net advances. Trading was extremely dull in the afternoon. Security values made their high levels during the morning session, when a good buying movement, sustained till midday, resulted in gains from 1 to 2 points throughout the list. Profit taking in rather heavy volume caused a substantial reaction, and the afternoon course of the market was rather irregular in movement.

SEES WAR BRINGING TRADE REGULATION

Head of Tariff Commission Foretells Broader Attitude on the Part of Business.

FUEL SHORTAGE EXPECTED

P. B. Noyes Tells Hardware Men Next Winter's Supply Depends Solely on the Railroads.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 29.—Frank W. Tausig, Chairman of the United States Tariff Commission and a member of the Price Fixing Committee of the War Industries Board, expressed the conviction before the American Hardware Manufacturers' Association today that America will emerge from the war "with a broader and possibly a very different attitude toward the regulation of business."

Chairman Tausig told the manufacturers that it was not the function of the Tariff Commission to frame America's future tariff policies. "It is the duty of that body," he said, "systematically and efficiently to collate all possible information bearing upon the question for the intelligent guidance of Congress but not to go beyond presenting a foundation for action.

"The question of policy rests entirely with Congress, and it is almost inevitable that it will be shaded by the political complexion of that body. There is now a tendency in Congress to regard legislation from an American standpoint solely. We are to have an election this Fall, however, and a Presidential election in 1920, both of which may have bearing upon the enactment of a tariff bill to meet conditions following the war."

Chairman Tausig said the Tariff Commission was dealing with all of the 3,600 units enumerated in the bill creating the commission, and was progressing satisfactorily in its work. The war has strengthened America from a commercial standpoint, he asserted, by throwing the nation upon its own resources with respect to dyestuffs, surgical instruments, and other wares formerly procured abroad. Whether the country would desire to continue independent or return to the pre-war practise of going outside its borders for many things, he held, was one of the questions which must be determined in formulating the tariff policy of the future.

Responsibility for a "worse condition" next Winter than last with respect to coal for commercial purposes was put squarely up to Mr. McAdoo by Piermont B. Noyes, chief of the conservation division of the Fuel Administration, in a declaration that the fuel question was a transportation problem.

"The problem facing this country is to keep up industry as close to 100 per cent. efficiency as possible upon a shortage of coal," he said. "The industrial coal shortage was bad last year and it is going to be worse next Winter. The problem is so great, so vast, that we cannot, as some are demanding, 'fit up.' One hundred thousand more coal cars and 3,000 more engines will not make a dent in it.

"The coal problem is a transportation problem. We have enough men in the mines to get out from 800,000,000 to 900,000,000 tons. We can bring coal out of the mines as fast as cars are ready to move it. It is not practicable to bring it out until the cars are ready.

"Washington has killed the word 'nonessential.' The distinction is war work and nonwar work. There cannot be any such thing as a peremptory rule against fuel for nonessentials, because that would throw 10,000,000 men out of work and be disastrous. We are going to rate 250,000 steam plants this year and distribute fuel accordingly. We hope to save 60,000,000 tons of coal in this way through the avoidance of waste."

Robert Garland of Pittsburgh, in a survey of trade possibilities after the war, said: "Japan now is printing text books for California schools and making bats for American baseball teams because they can be turned out cheaper there. We ought to have the benefit of a protective tariff, not a robber baron tariff, but a tariff that will fit the situation."

NO CHANGE IN WOOL MARKET

Mills Working on Federal Orders Facing Shortage of Supplies.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, May 29.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"On account of uncertainty on the wool supply, in available machinery, and other conditions no good basis can be made for planning a season's distribution of woolen and worsted goods. There has been no radical change in the woolen goods market for the last week, and it is not expected that conditions will be particularly favorable for the production of any large quantity of goods for civilian distribution.

"It is not the total supply of wool which is causing anxiety, but rather the fact that some of the mills operating upon Government contracts are becoming short in supply, and it is feared that unless the situation clears up rapidly there may be a certain amount of machinery idle. There is nothing to justify some of the prices which have been asked.

"In cotton goods the situation has become somewhat stronger in the last week, mainly because the shortage of goods is becoming greater and buyers seem more willing to pay somewhat higher prices. The amount of selling is small.

"No large number of long contracts are being accepted, and at the same time producers are more convinced of their strong position, and are willing to wait. All the time the Government is requiring larger quantities of goods, taking merchandise which has been delivered or even in transit.

"The export trade is holding up very well under existing conditions, but unquestionably the amount of goods now being sold for export is very much below that of some months previously. Present prices indicate a consumption of cotton goods this Fall much smaller than it has been in previous seasons."

MEN EMPLOYES WANT MORE.

Conductors Ask for Pay Increase, Saying Girls Get the Day Runs.

Woman conductors of the lines of the Public Service Railway Company in Newark are one of the contributing causes of a wage increase to be asked by male conductors and motormen. Motormen and conductors are paid from twenty-eight to thirty-four cents an hour. They plan to ask for a flat rate of forty-five cents, with sixty cents an hour for overtime. Forty-six woman conductors will go on the less important day runs today, and the men declare women will eventually get practically all the day runs and men will be employed only at night.

Employment of women on surface cars will become general, declared Dr. Delos F. Wilcox of New York, testifying yesterday before the Public Utility Commission in Newark, in behalf of the municipalities fighting the application of the Public Service Railway Company for an increased fare.

The wage increase given last year by the Public Service Railway Company, said Dr. Wilcox, did not compare with increases given by big systems in other Northern States. It was not sufficient, he declared, to enable the company to keep up its organization in competition with munitions factories and other businesses where high wages are being paid.

Dr. Wilcox was questioned concerning the testimony of President McCarter of the Public Service Company, who recently testified there was a net deficiency of $8,733,170.32 in interest return upon money advanced by the Public Service Corporation, the holding concern, to the Public Service Railway Company, from its organization in 1903 to Dec. 31, 1917, which was reached by computing compound interest at 8 per cent. Marshall Van Winkle, counsel for the protesting municipalities, asked Dr. Wilcox whether he had ever known of such a percentage being paid where compound interest figured.

"No," was the answer. "The highest was 3 or 4 per cent."

He said that in 1916 there was a surplus over a 6 per cent. basis on the returns from capitalization of $2,810,798.04, or 4.8 per cent. In 1917, he declared, the surplus was $2,481,139.41, or 4.1 per cent.

British Cut Cotton Output.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—Important restrictions on the operation of British cotton mills, which will vitally affect the American cotton industry, have been imposed by the British Cotton Control Board, according to consular dispatches today. Spinning mills will be licensed when engaged on American cotton up to 50 per cent. of total spindles forty hours a week.

The quotations are for six months' paper.

Gray Goods Prices Firm.

Prices continued firm in the local gray goods market yesterday, in spite of the ante-holiday dullness. Not much business was done during the day and more than one executive of importance did not reach his desk and will not before Monday next. Sheetings were again more or less neglected, and only a limited business for June delivery was reported in the printcloths. The sales included 39-inch 68-72s at 21c; 39-inch 56-44s at 15c; 38½-inch 64-60s at 19c, and 38½-inch 60-48s at 16¼c. Closing prices on spot printcloths were:

39-inch, 68-72s....21c	38½-inch, 60-52s..16½c
39-inch, 56-44s....15c	38½-inch, 60-48s..16¼c
38½-inch, 64-64s..19½c	27-inch, 64-60s....13¼c

Color Demand Has Narrowed.

The color demand in over-the-counter business in silks, and to some extent in other textiles, has narrowed lately to three shades—navy blue, black and white. While other colors are selling more or less, those given are the "big three," according to the fabric merchandise manager of one of the city's leading stores. About the only shades that are really selling, in addition to them, are pastel colorings in chiffon taffetas for dance and party dresses. The fabric demand is broad, which makes it rather easy for retailers to meet, and is made up largely of numerous calls for satins, taffetas, crepes Georgette and de chine, silk ginghams, lining "fancies," and habutais and pongees in natural effects.

Shifts in Drugs and Chemicals.

An advance of 15 cents an ounce on quinine has been a feature, Drug and Chemical Markets will say today. Crude drugs are strong, owing to scant supplies. Hydro-quinine is higher, but unsoluble saccharin, U. S. P., is lower by 50 cents on some brands. Essential oils have ruled strong, with geranium varieties, wintergreen, sweet birch, true leaves, and crude amber oil higher at the close. Advices from Paris are to the effect that it is impossible to get freight room for essential or synthetic oils destined for the United States. Castor oil exports from British India have been prohibited to all destinations except the United Kingdom. Argentina has also placed an embargo on the oil.

Fall Styles in Corsets.

Fall corsets so far show very little change in the general silhouette from that which has prevailed for several seasons. In the better grades there is a wide variety of materials used, such as brocades, silk jerseys, satin and silk batiste. Coutil and batiste are used extensively in the lower-priced lines. The coutil, however, is of a much lighter weight than that which is ordinarily used, and is not as well liked. Manufacturers all seem to be doing a very substantial business for next Fall. Many of them report that they have about all they can take care of under present conditions. The scarcity of coutil and its poor quality are their chief concern.

More Novelty Hats.

There have been many novelties in the way of millinery this season; and most of them have had their basis in the military hats of the soldiers of one or another of the allied nations. Among the latest to make their début in the trade in this city are hats made after the fashion of those worn by the famous Anzacs, a detachment of whom recently passed through here on their way to France. They are dark khaki colored Alpine shaped felt hats with a wide brim, one side of which is turned up and fastened to the crown of the hat. The tams of the "Blue Devils" of France, who were here during the Third Liberty Loan drive, are also copied. Both these new additions to women's hat lines are said to be attracting considerable attention.

Many Materials Liked.

Though usually Dame Fashion takes up one or two fabrics at the start of a season and plays them strong, almost to the exclusion of all else, this year it is said that practically all materials are getting their share of the business. Serges, jerseys, foulards, satins, and ginghams seem to be about equally in vogue, while organdies, cotton voiles, and cotton reps have also been in demand. Wool, cotton, or silk, it matters not which, have all been popular in turn, and though one may forge ahead for a time another creeps up to the lead only to be displaced later by a third. All are good, and the season is looked upon as being one of the best balanced on record.

Muslin Underwear Selling.

Muslin undergarments of the simple but durable type are said to be in good demand everywhere. Buyers from all over the country have been in town during the last few months, and all seem to have placed some very substantial business. Prices have been advancing constantly, it is said, and in some cases very rapidly. It is reported that merchants who ordered two months ago can sell their merchandise at a fair profit over the counter for less than the cost of replacing it today.

Women's Fall Sweaters Taken.

Fall sweater business is reported by local sellers to be very good. Practically all merchants have purchased a little ahead of their usual time, anticipating higher prices later, and in most cases their orders have been of substantial proportions. Various novelty weaves seems to be very well thought of by the trade, and shetland wool has been well taken. The usual array of Fall colors has been bought, together with a fair smattering of the deeper pastel shades. Sleeveless and collarless sweaters were sought as well as the ordinary coat-cut garments. Many of these coat sweaters are being made long and full for next Fall and Winter.

His Side of It.

Persons who contend that the present cost of shoes is too high are invited to get in touch with a certain manufacturer of good footwear, who will promise to give them plenty of proof why the price of this merchandise, if anything, is lower than it should be. For instance, he will show them that, where it not so very long ago was possible to buy Russia calf leather at 35 cents a square foot, the price recently set on this material by the Government was 71 cents. He will show them how the drills used as shoe linings have gone up 100 to 150 per cent., how labor costs have advanced, and how leather for outsoles and insoles has gone up. He will also quote comparative prices on the linen thread used in sewing fine shoes, as well as on the nails used for fastening heels. He will show the advances in leather cement and in shoe laces. By that time he expects to have clinched his argument.

To Speed Up Charge Purchases.

The selective draft "work or fight" ruling, with the effect it will have upon the organizations of dry goods stores all over the country, is understood to have given additional impetus to the suggestion recently made here that a considerable increase in the number of "carries" by charge customers could be effected if some of the red tape in the case of taken purchases could be done away with. The time lost in waiting for an "okeh" on purchases of this kind is said to induce many customers to have them sent. Particularly is this said to be the case in stores where appeal to the credit office is necessary to release taken goods. By way of a change, it is suggested that one person behind each counter might be given authority to "check out" these purchases, the credit office keeping a close watch on their operations. "Dead" accounts, it is said, might be taken care of by daily lists issued from the credit office.

RULES FOR BUYERS OF WOOL

Mills Must Purchase Supplies from Growers in Their Locality.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—The War Industries Board issued regulations today for wool buying by mills in country wool sections. They provide that mills located in wool growing districts and having Government contracts may be granted permits to buy from the growers only in their immediate locality or in a radius of not over fifty miles. Mills are not permitted to buy from local dealers.

Mills having Government contracts and being situated in a wool growing section of the country from which in the past they have been accustomed to purchase wool from the local growers will be given a permit by the War Industries Board to purchase a limited amount of wool from the local grower within a radius of fifty miles.

Ordinarily mills are to buy from the dealers in distributing centres, and when this is done there is included in the price of the wool the local commission amounting to 1½ per cent., the dealer's commission amounting to 4 per cent. and the freight to Atlantic seaboard. When the mills buy direct from growers these three items of expense are saved and the benefit of this saving should be divided equally between the growers and the mills.

No mill is to resell any wool except to the Government.

Mills must buy only from growers and from the Government.

Mills desiring to operate under these rules must fill out a questionnaire, which will be furnished on application to this division.

FIX NEW ALUMINIUM PRICE.

Will Be 33 Cents a Pound Until September, Government Announces.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 29.—President Wilson today approved an agreement made between the producers of aluminium and the Price-Fixing Committee of the War Industries Board, that the maximum base price for aluminium, effective June 1, 1918, to Sept. 1, 1918, shall be 33 cents per pound, free on board United States producing plants, for fifty tons and over of ingot of 98 to 99 per cent.

Differentials for sheet, rod, and wire will be increased by approximately 12½ per cent. Differentials for quantity and grade and differentials for alloys will remain as heretofore, namely, those approved by the Price-Fixing Committee on March 3, 1918. Copies of the new list of differentials may be obtained upon application to the Nonferrous Metals Section of the War Industries Board.

The new prices will be effective on deliveries made from June 1 to Sept. 1, 1918, on contracts made during said period, and furthermore the new prices will be effective on deliveries made during said period on existing contracts which specify that the price shall be that in force at the time of delivery. Deliveries made during the period June 1 to Sept. 1, 1918, on other contracts shall be at the price stated in such contracts, except that on existing "direct and indirect Government contracts" containing a provision that refund is to be made of the difference between the price stated in the contract and the "Government fixed price, if, as and when made," such difference shall be refunded on deliveries made during the period from June 1 to Sept. 1, 1918, on presentation of proper proof that the purchasing Government gets the benefit of the refund.

The conditions are as formerly. First, the producers of aluminium will not reduce the wages now being protected; second, aluminium shall be sold to the United States Government, to the public in the United States, and to the allied Governments at the same maximum base price; third, the producers will take the necessary measures under the direction of the War Industries Board for the distribution of aluminium to prevent it from falling into the hands of speculators who might increase the price to the public; and, fourth, they will pledge themselves to exert every effort necessary to keep up the production of aluminium, so as to insure an adequate supply as long as the war lasts.

GOOD YEAR FOR REALTY CO.

Report of U. S. Concern Shows Gains Despite Subway Losses.

The report of the United States Realty and Improvement Company for the year ended April 30, 1918, published yesterday, shows a net income of $775,421, compared with $493,392 for the previous year, and gained in spite of heavy losses on subway contracts, and the heavy increases in costs of the company's real estate business.

The company's loss on three sections of the dual subway was estimated a year ago at $2,954.00, and with the work practically completed, President McGuire estimates that the total loss has been well within the amount formerly set aside for completion, while the company still has "substantial claims" under its contracts against the city.

Regarding its real estate operations, the gross income from productive real estate has only increased enough to meet the mounting taxes and operating and general maintenance costs, although new leases have been made at increased rates. The cost of carrying unproductive real estate has been greatly increased, and with the exception of one large property, which has been leased, "owing to the unprecedented conditions it has not been possible to dispose of, or improve, any of these properties."

During the year the George A. Fuller Company, a subsidiary, obtained war contracts for construction work amounting to $15,738,240, largely on a cost-plus-fixed-fee basis, and still has a contract with the Emergency Fleet Corporation for constructing the yards, and operating the Carolina Shipbuilding Corporation, for $20,514,000.

BANKS VOTE TO MERGE.

Manufacturers' Trust Company to Absorb West Side Bank.

Directors of the Manufacturers' Trust Company of Brooklyn and the West Side Bank of New York yesterday voted to merge, subject to ratification of the merger by the stockholders of both, at a special meeting to be called for the purpose. The West Side Bank will be operated as a Manhattan branch of the Manufacturers' Trust Company at Thirty-fourth Street and Eighth Avenue. The Manufacturers' Trust Company now has its main office at 774 Broadway, Brooklyn, and branches at 84 Broadway, Brooklyn, and 1,450 Myrtle Avenue.

The combined institutions will have $1,000,000 capital and about $800,000 surplus. Their combined deposits will total upward of $22,000,000. President W. I. Lincoln Adams of the West Side Bank will become a Vice President of the Manufacturers' Trust Company.

PUBLIC NOTICES.

N. Y. POST GRADUATE MEDICAL SCHOOL AND HOSPITAL,
Second Av. and 20th St., New York City.
At a time like the present when all the world is responding so generously to all patriotic calls and our country is unified as never before, our City Hospitals are having a very hard time.
After the wonderful success of the Red Cross Drive, I appeal for funds for the New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital, which besides having its large unit abroad and the changes which this has necessitated in the working forces, has been overwhelmed by work, together with the high cost of living and the lack of subscriptions makes it very hard to continue the work.
Checks may be sent to the Hospital.

Education Notes.

Board of Education has granted, subject to the approval of the Mayor, a leave of absence, with part pay, under the Fenner law, to Emma C. Hess, a teacher of cooking in P. S. 5, Brooklyn, for the duration of the war, for service as dietitian in the United States Army. This is of general interest, as she is the first woman teacher to receive pay while on war service. The Interborough Association of Woman Teachers recently asked the Board of Education to treat men and women teachers alike in a case of this kind.

The Principal of P. S. 62, Manhattan, has been authorized to employ a substitute teacher at $3 a day in connection with the instruction of a class of anaemic girls at Oceanic, N. J., during May and June.

The Board of Education will hold a special meeting on June 5. Among the matters that will come before it will be the nomination of William E. Grady as District Superintendent.

Louise M. Webster has been assigned as substitute teacher in charge of the Summer session for training girls for war service in the Washington Irving High School. She will be paid $600 for the session.

Leaves of absence, without pay, for war service have been granted to George Rosmarin and Perry Bridges, teachers of shop work, respectively, in P. S. 176, Brooklyn, and 12, Richmond.

Anthony J. Pugliese has been appointed as Supervisor of opportunity classes in vacation schools for the season of 1918.

One hundred and eighty vacation playgrounds will be established for five days each week, beginning July 1 and ending Aug. 16.

Recreation and community centres will be established for a period of eighteen weeks after June 1, as follows: Manhattan, 18; the Bronx, 4; Brooklyn, 7, and Queens, 1.

District Superintendent Forsyth has suspended Ida Sirota of P. S. 141, Brooklyn, for alleged neglect of duty. She will be tried by the Board of Education.

For the men about to register on June 5 the Board of Education will conduct a class in military camouflage, to be given by the New York Evening School of Industrial Art. Painters, architects, sculptors, stage carpenters, photographers, draftsmen, &c., may apply for admission to this Summer course of six weeks. Applicants should present themselves to George K. Gombarts, Principal, at the George Bruce Public Library, 78 Manhattan Street, next Monday or Tuesday evening, June 3 or 4, between 7 and 9 P. M. It is suggested that registrants bring with them samples of their art work and work in photography. A certificate of health from their doctor should be brought along. Students are expected to devote at least one afternoon a week to regular field work. The hours of instruction are from 8 to 10 P. M. for five evenings a week during the entire six weeks' course.

The Civil Service.

City.

Examinations have been ordered for fireman and female probation officer. The test for fireman will be held under the new law, which permits the employment of persons up to 35 years instead of 29 as heretofore. In the examination for female probation officer a minimum percentage for experience will not be set. Persons in any line of business may take the test. A rating for experience will be given in accordance with the nature of the past occupation of the candidate. The entrance salary is $1,200 a year.

United States.

The commission announces for June 5 an examination for special agent for research in foreign commerce for men. A vacancy in the Federal Board for Vocational Education, with headquarters at Washington, D. C., at a salary ranging from $3,000 to $3,500 a year, will be filled from this examination. The duties will be to conduct special investigations and studies in the Division of Research and Division of Commercial Education of the Federal Board for Vocational Education. This research will deal with the problems of foreign commerce of the United States, its demands and requirements upon commercial representatives, and the proper training of such representatives. Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated on education, 25; experience, 45; publications, to be filed with application, 30. The prerequisites are: At least two years' training in a college or university of recognized standing, and, in addition, at least two years' responsible experience in investigational work in foreign countries of market conditions and trade opportunities. Additional credit will be given for responsible experience in the field of industrial education and for investigational or editorial work in connection with commercial or industrial fields within the United States. Applicants must have reached their twenty-fifth but not their fiftieth birthday on the date of the examination. Further information may be obtained from the commission, Washington, D. C.

LEAGUE UPHOLDS ANDERSON

Anti-Saloon Forces Say Bryan Failed to Keep a Promise.

The Board of Directors of the Anti-Saloon League of New York yesterday gave out a statement upholding William H. Anderson, the State Superintendent, in his charges that William Jennings Bryan was using the prohibition movement to advance his political ambitions. The statement said:

"In the matter of William Jennings Bryan, the board finds that Mr. Bryan's failure to keep the promise not to accept the Presidency of the National Dry Federation unless the W. C. T. U. and the Anti-Saloon League joined it, upon the faith of which Superintendent Anderson consented to his coming to New York under the auspices of the Anti-Saloon League, forced the State Superintendent to remain silent in the face of serious menace to the cause and to the Anti-Saloon League, or speaking under circumstances that involved risk of personal censure. It is our judgment that the facts justified the superintendent in taking any steps necessary immediately to relieve the Anti-Saloon League of any responsibility for any action or utterance of Mr. Bryan in New York."

Resolutions of commendation were sent to Governor Whitman "for his service in behalf of local option, his successful efforts in helping to secure the necessary votes for submission of the national amendment by Congress, for his outspoken stand in favor of ratification and for the ringing message by which he defeated the referendum fraud and helped clear the track for a square fight on the merits of the issue next time." The board asserted also that Speaker Sweet materially obstructed ratification" and that he made "a public attempt to put the Governor in a false light." Condemnation of the State prohibition amendment as a device to delay State prohibition until 1922 also was approved by the directors.

CITY HONORS TODAY MEN OF THREE WARS

Prayers and Parades Will Mark Celebration of Memorial Day.

G. A. R. IN FOREMOST PLACE

In Scores of Churches and Synagogues Worshippers Will Petition for Success of Our Arms in France.

Hundreds of thousands of New Yorkers will today take part in a two-fold celebration of Memorial Day. In accordance with the Presidential proclamation of May 11 it will be celebrated as a day of "public humiliation, fasting, and prayer" for the victory of our armies and the speedy restoration of an honorable and lasting peace. In Battery Park a military field mass will be celebrated, with the Right Rev. Patrick J. Hayes, Auxiliary Bishop of New York, and Chaplain Bishop of the Army and Navy of the United States, heading the list of officiating clergy; and in scores of churches and synagogues worshippers will offer up their prayers and petitions for the success of our arms and the achievement of our purpose in the war.

But, as the President himself has been careful to point out, there is no desire that the time-honored features of Memorial Day are to be overlooked. Today there will be honor paid to soldiers who died last week as well as to those who died fifty years ago and in the Spanish war, to Seicheprey and Cantigny, as well as at Gettysburg, the Wilderness and Cuba. But of all the men in varied uniforms who will parade the streets of the city today the greatest honor will be paid to the remnant of the Grand Army of the Republic.

The Weather Bureau predicts local showers for Memorial Day, with moderate east winds.

The G. A. R. parade will be held on Riverside Drive this morning, its head leaving Seventy-second Street at 9 o'clock. Under Grand Marshal Edward M. Griffiths and Adjt. Gen. Henry G. Fritsch the assemblage will include—troops of the United States Army, sailors and marines; the New York Guard, under Brig. Gen. George R. Dyer; the Grand Army of the Republic, which it is expected will have about 500 representatives in line; the Spanish War veterans, the Army and Navy Union, the Army and Navy Veterans, the police reserve, the Junior American Guards, and cadet and miscellaneous organizations.

The head of the parade will go up the Drive from Seventy-second Street, the various divisions falling in from the side streets at the proper time, and at the Soldiers and Sailors' monument, Riverside Drive and Eighty-ninth Street, the parade will be reviewed by a party headed by Mayor Hylan and including Rear Admirals Knight and Bigelow and Major Gen. Mann. At Ninety-second Street the parade will disband.

Parade on the East Side.

Meanwhile an east side parade, which it is expected will include 30,000 persons, will leave Rutgers Square at 2 o'clock and march through various streets of the east side to Second Avenue and Tenth Street, where it will be reviewed by Governor Whitman. Later in the afternoon the Governor will speak at the memorial services of U. S. Grant Post, No. 327, G. A. R., which will be held at Grant's Tomb, beginning at 2 P. M. Most of the members live in Brooklyn, and a special ferry will leave the foot of Broadway, Williamsburg, at 12:15.

At 10:30 this morning the military mass will be celebrated in Battery Park. The Rev. Father George J. Waring, Chaplain of the 11th Cavalry, will celebrate the mass, assisted by the Rev. Edward Duffy, Naval Chaplain, and the Rev. Anthony J. Grogan, Chaplain of the Knights of Columbus, as Deacon and Subdeacon, respectively. The Rev. Michael J. Henry will act as master of ceremonies, and the sermon will be preached by Bishop Hayes, whose Pontifical flag of blue silk, with a white cross, will float beneath the Stars and Stripes. The Police, Firemen's, and Post Office Bands will play.

A special service in accordance with the Presidential proclamation will be held at Old Trinity Church at noon, and the Rev. Dr. William T. Manning, rector of the church, will come from Camp Upton to deliver the address. In the morning in Trinity churchyard a delegation from the School for Printers' Apprentices at 436 West Twenty-seventh Street, maintained by Typographical Union No. 6, and a group of employers, with the co-operation of the Hudson Guild Settlement, will decorate the grave of William Bradford, who came over from England in 1682 and was for fifty years the Government printer in this city.

Memorial Day services will be held at Temple Emanu-El, Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street, at 11:15, with the Rev. Dr. H. G. Enelow preaching. In the People's Synagogue of the Educational Alliance, East Broadway and Jefferson Street, a service will be held at 10 o'clock, with Samuel Strauss as the principal speaker.

At St. Joseph's Church, Sixth Avenue and Washington Place, there will be a solemn high mass at 9:30 in the morning, celebrated by the Right Rev. Mgr. John Edwards, vicar general, for the young men of the parish, of whom there are some 500 in the service. Pews will be reserved for the parents of enlisted men. A memorial mass for the soldiers and sailors who have given their lives for the country will be said at the Carmelite Church on East Twenty-eighth Street at 9 o'clock.

Prayers in All Synagogues.

The Agudath Harabonim, the Federation of Orthodox Rabbis, has ordered that the day be observed with fasting and prayer, and supplications for speedy victory of the allied arms will be said in all orthodox synagogues.

The annual memorial mass for deceased members of the Washington Heights Catholic Club will be held at 9 o'clock at St. Rose of Lima Church, 165th Street, near Amsterdam Avenue.

Memorial services for members of the Zeta Beta Tau fraternity who have died in this war will be held at 10:30 at the clubhouse, 127 West Eighty-eighth Street. Professor Richard J. H. Gottheil of Columbia, national head of the fraternity, will preside; the services will be conducted by the Revs. Aaron Fiseman and Alexander Lyons, and addresses will be delivered by Louis Marshall, Edward Lauterbach, and Samuel Stark.

A service for members of all faiths will be held in 104th Street, between Columbus and Amsterdam Avenues, at 8 o'clock tonight under the auspices of Grace M. E. Church, with the pastors and rabbis of nearby congregations assisting.

Officials of the Railway Mail Service said last night that little saving in time would be made by landing the mail on the proposed field in Newark. The special train that brings the mail to the New York Post Office from the station at Belmont Park reaches the city in about thirty minutes after the plane lands, and about the same time will be used in carrying the mail between the Post Office and the Newark park. It is said that the change in plans considered carrying the mail from the Post Office here to the Park Place station in Newark through the Hudson tubes and thence by automobile mail truck to the landing place in Branch Brook Park, a run of about ten minutes from the Park Place station.

John Mitchell, President of the New York State Food Commission and Chairman of the Federal Food Board, yesterday issued a statement appealing for reduced consumption of wheat and meat.

"Not since civil war times," he said, "have we had a Memorial Day which has in it so strong an appeal to the American heart. Today the veterans who fought to make us the Republic we are will march in thinner ranks, but still bringing the message that ours is a Republic that cannot be overturned. It is peculiarly appropriate for me to suggest to our people today that our veterans of the civil war stand today for everything that America stands for. They stand for victory for American arms and for the principle that we, engaged in food work, believe will be most helpful in bringing about that victory."

The sixth annual May Day Walk and Baby Carriage Parade, given to the mothers and children of the Fourteenth Assembly District by Alderman Thomas M. Farley, will be held today, with a parade beginning at the Queensboro Bridge at 10 A. M. and winding up in the East Green of Central Park.

The Memorial Day parade on Staten Island, in which the G. A. R. will hold the most prominent part, is expected to be the largest ever held on that island. Exercises at the Borough Hall will follow.

In the Bronx the G. A. R. veterans, some forty-seven in number, will be reinforced by the Old-Timers' Association, composed of those who have lived in the Bronx fifty years or more. Borough President Henry Bruckner will review the parade at McKinley Square. There will be special services at the grave of the poet, Joseph Rodman Drake, in the Hunts Point section.

The Flushing parade will start from the Soldiers' Monument, on Broadway, at 10 o'clock, and mothers of men in the service will have places of honor. In Montclair the parade will be reviewed by Brig. Gen. W. A. White, head of the British recruiting mission.

The correct form for flying the national colors on Memorial Day is half-mast till noon and full-masted thereafter.

The Park Department has arranged for a concert at 4 o'clock this afternoon on the Mall in Central Park by Frank Kaltenborn's Orchestra. This is the first of a series provided for four holidays this Summer by an annual gift of Elkan Naumburg. The Memorial Day program will include Theodore Thomas's version of Chopin's "Funeral March," the andante from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, Handel's "Largo," Gounod's "Ave Maria," and Tschaikowsky's "Overture 1812."

AIRMAN'S LIFE SAVED IN 2,000-FOOT FALL

Lieut. Means Keeps Presence of Mind When Machine Plunges in "Tailspin."

DROPS CLEAR OF WRECKAGE

Army Aviators at Mineola Were Practicing the German "Flying Circus" at High Altitude.

While Lieutenant Gardiner C. Means and four other army aviators were practicing in a flying formation similar to that of the Germans' "flying circus" at a height of about 2,000 feet over the Hazelhurst Aviation Field near Mineola yesterday, Means, who was at the peak of the formation, lost control of his machine and the plane whirled to the ground in the dangerous tailspin. It fell within a few feet of the spot where Cadet Aviator Charles B. Passwater was killed on Monday when his airplane fell to earth in a tail-spin accident.

Aviation instructors at the Hazelhurst Field were watching the evolutions of the fliers, who had just taken to the air to try out their new battle formation, when the plane leading the evolution suddenly halted, dipped a little, and then slid backward into the whirling tailspin. The officers took their glasses to watch the efforts of Means to right his plane, although they were sure that he would be unable to pull his machine out of the spin in the short distance.

As the plane whirled in wide circles they saw Means working his levers as coolly as if he were in a pleasure flight. After the plane had fallen about 1,000 feet it swerved as if it were going to catch the air to fly safely out of its dangerous position, but some part of the machine seemed to crumple and the plane continued to spin.

As the machine crashed to the ground the instruction officers jumped into an automobile with surgeons from the field hospital and sped to the wreckage, expecting to find the aviator dead. Instead they found him on the ground clear of the wreckage and, although he was unconscious, surgeons found that his condition was not serious. He was taken to the hospital, where it was said that he would be ready to fly again in a few days. He was suffering only from bruises and shock, and the officers said they thought that his coolness and presence of mind in the fall had saved his life, because, after working at the levers, he released his hold upon the machine and allowed the whirl to throw him clear of the wreckage.

When the other aviators in the formation saw their leader fall into the tail spin they continued their manoeuvre upon plans that had already been made for the loss of one of the members of the circus in battle. They said they thought that Means was preparing to volplane out of the formation when his engine stalled and threw the plane into the tail spin. Means received his commission several months ago. His home is in Brookline, Mass.

Two naval aviators from the Naval Air Station at Bayshore, L. I., also suffered slight injuries yesterday when their hydroaeroplane fell into the waters of Great South Bay off Nichols Point. The aviators were picked up by fishing boats, which towed the plane to the shore. The injuries of the men were not serious enough to send them to the hospital and the plane was only slightly damaged.

Aids Americans in Canadian Army.

The Canadian Club of New York, whose headquarters are at the Hotel Biltmore, issues another appeal for $100,000 to carry on relief work among dependents of Americans in the Canadian Army. These men, it is said by Thomas D. Neelands, President of the club, enlisted with the definite assurance that their dependents would be cared for. As the Canadian Patriotic Fund cannot be applied for the benefit of persons outside the Dominion, it is necessary that provision for the women and children of the soldiers be provided in the United States.

ENGINEERS EXPEL ALL ENEMY ALIENS

Many German Scientists Included Among Those Dropped from Mining Organization.

The Board of Directors of the American Institute of Mining Engineers at a meeting last night in the Engineering Societies Building, 29 West Thirty-ninth Street, unanimously decided to drop all enemy aliens from membership. The meeting, which was under the chairmanship of Sidney J. Jennings, President of the institute, was attended by twenty-three of the twenty-five Directors, among them Chairman W. L. Saunders and four of the personnel of the Naval Consulting Board. The resolution calling for the expulsion of the enemy members was as follows:

Resolved, That all honorary members, members, associate, and junior members who are enemy aliens, residing in enemy countries, be dropped from membership in the American Institute of Mining Engineers, and their names be, and they are, stricken from the rolls.

Resolved, That the Membership Committee be request to advise this Board of Directors of the names of all the above mentioned persons, and in addition the names of all other enemy aliens, members of the institute, and, be it further

Resolved, That, in the case of said latter class, this board shall consider and act upon the question of expulsion after ascertaining their attitude toward the Government of the United States.

The action of the Board of Directors, according to Bradley Stoughton, Secretary of the institute, immediately affects the status of twenty-one German scientists and one Austrian professor who held either honorary or active membership in the association. Mr. Stoughton said that many of the German members of the institute had been exceedingly active in furthering German's war aims through scientific invention or research. Among these he mentioned Professor B. Draeger of Luebeck, who, he said, had invented the German gas mask. Draeger before the war was one of Germany's leading mining engineers and had, in the course of his work, perfected a steel helmet to protect miners from the poisons of the mines. When the Hohenzollerns went to war, Dr. Draeger modified his invention for the use of soldiers.

Other leaders in German industry or science who are dropped are Professor L. Edeleanau, a Prussian authority on petroleum; H. C. Emil Schroedter of Dusseldorf, Secretary of the German Society of Iron and Steel Makers, and Walter Mathesius of Charlottenburg, Germany's great copper expert. Dr. W. Oswald of Coblentz, a leading German chemist, also no longer belongs to the institute.

Mr. Stoughton said that a thorough census of all members would be taken with a view to ascertaining where they stood in regard to the war. He thought this would take some time, as the institute had a membership of 8,597 in this country and more than 1,000 abroad.

REVEALED INCOME TAX DUE.

Bills Mailed in "Window" Envelopes Display More Than Address.

Collector William H. Edwards of the Second, or Wall Street District, took cognizance yesterday of complaints by income and excess profits taxpayers that in many instances the so-called "window" envelopes used by the Internal Revenue Bureau in sending out bills revealed the sum due the Government in individual cases.

Complaint was made that the "window" envelopes not only showed the name and address of the person liable to the taxes, but frequently as well revealed in the space for the address the amount due the Government.

Collector Edwards said that the appearance in the address space of the amount for which thetaxpayer was liable resulted from improper folding of the bills. This, the Collector added, had been corrected and no further annoyance to taxpayers from this inadvertence was anticipated.

WANT GEN. GORGAS RETAINED IN OFFICE

Three Medical Conventions at Atlantic City Oppose Age Limit Retirement.

PLEA FOR PRIVATE PATIENTS

Dr. Halstead Says in Most Hospitals Occupants of Wards Receive More Satisfactory Treatment.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 29.—Three big national medical associations today passed resolutions urging that Surgeon General Gorgas be retained in office after Oct. 1, when he will have reached the age limit which would automatically place him upon the retired list.

The American Laryngological Association, the Laryngological, Rhinological, and Otological Society, and the American Otological Society, in annual convention here, drew up memorials that will be forwarded to President Wilson. The petitions request that General Gorgas be continued so long as he is physically able to perform his duties.

Similar action will be taken by the American Medical Society, which meets in annual convention early in June at Chicago. The entire medical fraternity, as represented by the various societies, is expected to supplement the resolutions started here.

Rearrangement of hospital organization so that more standard facilities for the treatment of private patients may be brought about was suggested by Dr. T. H. Halstead of Syracuse, President of the American Laryngological Association.

"We need aid in solving a very grave defect in the present system of private medical practice," he declared. "It is recognized by the medical profession and the intelligent public that a serious defect exists somewhere along the line. Organization of hospitals for the care of ward cases has always been better than that for the care of private patients. Dispensaries have been well organized for the free ambulatory cases. The private patient, who pays the regular fee, does not receive as satisfactory treatment as patients who go to the dispensary or the hospital ward where the medical service is free.

"It is not to the credit of the medical profession that patients with obscure or complicated diseases should be compelled to drift about from one physician to another in search of a diagnosis when the diagnosis might be made in a very short time provided the patient were properly and skillfully referred to the proper man or men. While the delay in reaching a diagnosis is going on the disease is progressing, often the delay is fatal and discredit is brought not alone upon the individual examining physician, but reflects upon the profession as a whole."

Dr. Halstead advocated a plan whereby the patient would be taken directly to the hospital and a bedside consultation held by the entire staff, for which a nominal fee, based upon a uniform standard, would be charged, otherwise this same expert attention would be beyond the reach and cost of the middle class.

Cornelius G. Coakley of New York was elected President of the American Laryngological Association. Other officers included: First Vice President, George E. Shambaugh of Chicago; Second Vice President, John R. Winslow of Baltimore; Secretary, D. Bryson Delavan of New York; Treasurer, J. Payson Clark of Boston; Librarian, Joseph H. Bryan of Washington; Councilors, Alexander W. McCoy of Philadelphia, Thomas R. French of Brooklyn, Joseph L. Goodale of Boston, and Thomas H. Halstead of Syracuse.

FOUR ASSAIL POLICEMAN.

Shoots One and Arrests All Four in Fight in Hungarian Quarter.

A free-for-all fight in the Hungarian section of Thirty-ninth Street, between Tenth and Eleventh Avenues, early last night resulted in the shooting and arrest of one man and the arrest of three others. The prisoners were charged with felonious assault.

Policeman William Cullen of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station did the shooting. While he was on post shortly after 8 o'clock the officer said he was attracted by shouts and screams to the middle of the Thirty-ninth Street block. In front of a saloon conducted by John Rodden at 528 he found four men engaged in a fist fight surrounded by a shouting mob. Single-handed Patrolman Cullen broke in among the battlers and grabbed one man who, he says, had been holding another by the throat.

As he charged them, he says, the four combatants ran into the saloon, and one of them picking up a whisky bottle brought it down with force upon the right side of the policeman's head, cutting him above the right ear. When the policeman tried to grapple with him he says the assailant tried to strike him with an ice axe, but Cullen was too quick and shot the man above the right hip.

The wounded man, Max Jacobick of 438 West Thirty-ninth Street, was later removed as a prisoner to Bellevue Hospital, where he is reported to be in a serious condition. The doctor also dressed Cullen's wound after the latter had placed the three others under arrest.

These prisoners were locked up in the West Thirty-seventh Police Station and gave their names as Gregory Rodivon, 539 West Thirty-ninth Street; Ivan Gusquk, and Zachani Morosinik of 438 West Thirty-ninth Street. None of them could speak sufficiently intelligible English to be understood. The police believe the fight was the result of a feud.

Divorce for John E. Griscom.

A final decree of divorce was granted yesterday by Justice Fawcett in the Queens County Supreme Court to John E. Grissom of 170 Nott Avenue, Long Island City. Colonel Boyd Wales of the 147th Field Artillery, now in France with the Rainbow Division, was named as corespondent. A $25,000 suit for alienation of his wife's affections was started against the Colonel by Grissom, but the soldier left for France before the papers could be served. Grissom is a ticket agent employed at the Pennsylvania Terminal.

Tolstoy Seeks Accounting.

Count Ilya L. Tolstoy, son of Count Leo Tolstoy, filed suit in the Supreme Court yesterday against James B. Pond for an accounting and for an injunction. The complaint alleges that Count Tolstoy made an agreement with the defendant in December, 1916, under which he was to get 20 per cent. on the sales of a book of short stories, entitled "Visions." He alleges that no royalty has been received, and no account has been made, although he was to get a semi-annual statement. He asks that the defendant be enjoined from selling the book.

MAUDE ALLAN'S AVOWAL.

Dancer Says Theodore Durant, Murderer, Was Her Brother.

LONDON, May 29.—During the trial today of Noel Pemberton-Billing, member of Parliament for East Hertfordshire and publisher of the newspaper Vigilante, who is charged with libeling Maude Allan, a dancer, and J. P. Grein, manager of the Independent Theatre, in connection with a proposed production of "Salome," Miss Allan testified on cross-examination that she was a sister of Theodore Durant who was hanged in California in January, 1898, for murder.

Maude Allan is an American dancer who first won renown in London in 1906 with a "Salome dance" in the music halls of the English capital.

The man who she admitted in the trial in London was her brother was convicted and sentenced to death in one of the most sensational murder trials ever held in California. He was convicted of killing Blanche Lamont in April, 1895, and burying her body beneath the flooring in Emanual Church. Previous to his arrest for this murder, Durant had been taken into custody on suspicion of connection with the death of Minnie Williams, another young girl, whose body was found in the tower of Emanuel Church.

GERMANS HELD ON FLANKS, DRIVE ON CENTRE, GAINING 4 MILES MORE TOWARD THE MARNE; CLAIM 35,000 PRISONERS AND MUCH WAR BOOTY

CHARGE GERMANY COERCED BRITONS BY SCANDAL BOOK

Mr. and Mrs. Asquith and Lord Haldane Were on Secret List, Witnesses Say.

TELL OF EXPOSURE THREATS

Story Linked with Alleged Move to Restore Asquith to Power and Make Peace.

TESTIMONY IN LIBEL SUIT

Pemberton-Billing, M. P., Sued by Maude Allan—Mrs. Keppel Named as Messenger.

LONDON, May 30.—Noel Pemberton-Billing, member of Parliament for East Hertfordshire and publisher of the newspaper Vigilante, opening his defense in his trial in the Bow Street Police Court today on the charge of libeling Maude Allan, dancer, and J. T. Grein, manager of the Independent Theatre, called Mrs. Villiers Stewart to prove the existence of a book which, Pemberton-Billing alleged, had been prepared by German secret agents, containing the names of 47,000 British said to be addicted to vice and held in bondage to Germany through fear of exposure.

Mrs. Stewart, under examination by Mr. Pemberton-Billing, said that the book, which she had seen but which was not produced, contained the names of ex-Premier Asquith and Mrs. Asquith, Viscount Haldane, former Secretary for War, and Justice Darling, who is trying the case against Mr. Pemberton-Billing.

Another witness, Captain Harold Spencer, said the book had been shown to him by Prince William of Wied in Albania. He said he did not remember seeing Mr. Asquith's name in it, but that the names of Mrs. Asquith and Viscount Haldane were there.

Captain Spencer and Mrs. Stewart both said that they had been threatened, the former after he had communicated the fact to the authorities. Mr. Pemberton-Billing asked the Judge for protection for himself and his witnesses. The Judge referred him to the Chief Commissioner of Police.

Said Some Succumbed to Germans.

Before giving the names of Mrs. Asquith and Viscount Haldane, Captain Spencer said he would furnish the names of those who had been approached and had succumbed to German temptation. He had placed the information before the Foreign Office, the War Office, and the Admiralty.

"There was great political pressure brought to bear," said the Captain, "and I was told that if it were published it would undermine the whole fabric of the Government. I then took it to the political machine."

Captain Spencer asserted that pressure had been brought to bear to suppress the matter in September last, when "a political crisis was on and they were trying to bring Asquith back to power."

Mr. Pemberton-Billing explained that his object in calling evidence as to the existence of the book of names was to prove the existence of the "cult" referred to in the alleged libel, and its political significance.

Continuing his testimony, Captain Spencer, who was a member of the International Gendarmerie in Albania before the war and Aide de Camp to Prince William of Wied and later was a member of the Royal Air Forces, said he wrote the article which contained the alleged libel and which was based on a letter from Marie Corelli, the novelist.

Told American Admiral.

Last September he said he had heard of a camarilla in financial circles, whose object was to get Asquith back in power and make a German peace. As a precaution he informed American Naval Headquarters so that the plot might be frustrated.

"Admiral Mayo and his Secretary came to me and got the whole statement," he said.

Asked whether he knew of operations of the camarilla between England and Germany the witness replied:

"They have had messages sent between England and Germany with this intelligence."

One of the principal messengers, Captain Spencer said he learned from persons who had reported to the Intelligence Department, was a well-known English society woman, Mrs. George Keppel. He had seen Mrs. Keppel come back from Holland.

Captain Spencer was ultimately passed out of the Flying Corps as physically unfit. Under cross-examination he said

Text of Treaty Imposed by Kaiser on Austria, Amalgamating Armies with a View to Future Wars

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 30.—The Deutsche Volkszeitung publishes the text of the military treaty between Germany and Austria-Hungary, which was forced upon Emperor Karl during his recent sojourn at German Army Headquarters. The treaty comprises seven articles, as follows:

(1) His High Majesty, the German Kaiser and King of Prussia, on the one hand, and His High Apostolic Majesty, the Kaiser of Austria and King of Hungary, on the other, form a close military alliance for twenty-five years, during which both parties to the alliance pledge themselves to employ the entire strength of their peoples for military purposes. The allied nations of Germany and Austria-Hungary shall devote all their care to have their armies enter into an eventual future conflict fully prepared and at a maximum of their strength. Only thus the future war shall be of brief duration, for, had the armies of both allies been in this condition in 1914, this war would have been ended long ago.

(2) All male inhabitants capable of bearing arms shall receive proper and thorough military instruction. Special formations, moreover, shall be provided for all auxiliary service in connection with the production of arms and ammunition.

(3) Regulations for organization, instruction, and employment of the allied troops shall be drawn up according to one common principle, the initiative of which shall be left principally to Germany. The formation of the troops of the various States of Germany and Austria-Hungary shall constitute one sole army without being considered strangers to each other.

(4) Armament shall be on a uniform basis to the extent that formations of one country may draw their supplies from the nearest depot in the other country wherever stationed, without having to depend, as in the past, on supplies from some distant home base.

(5) The allied troops shall be brought into contact with each other for the purpose of educating them to mutual esteem, love, and appreciation. This principle shall guide the training of future officers; and an exchange of officers shall be organized between the German and Austro-Hungarian armies, so that Austro-Hungarian officers may, as occasion requires, command German troops and vice versa.

(6) All preparations for future wars shall be made in common understanding between the General Staffs. This will require, naturally, a close collaboration between the General Staffs and Government Ministers. All preparatory economic measures connected with the eventual war shall be taken beforehand in time of peace, and the necessary departments be created.

(7) Railway lines and construction shall be directed and undertaken by both allies in common accord, and on a unified plan.

The Daily Telegraph's Milan correspondent says that Austrian and German public opinion is informed at last of the details of this military convention and they are bound to create a deep impression. The correspondent adds:

"Germany has succeeded in completely incorporating the Austro-Hungarian army with her own and preparing herself for future wars. As the clauses of the new treaty become gradually known it is no wonder discontent and dread of the future become general in Austria. All the Socialist papers raise a warning cry, asking whether the world has not had sufficient experience of the Moloch of war and why Austria should be dragged into a perpetual alliance for a perpetual cycle of wars simply to please German war-madness."

WARNING OF BIG LOSSES

German Paper Demands the Crushing of France—Blow at Arras Predicted.

AMSTERDAM, May 30.—The Kaiser, it appears, was early on the scene. On Monday, according to Karl Rosner of the Berlin Lokal-Anzeiger, the sole correspondent privileged to report the imperial movements, his Majesty "appeared in the midst of his troops fighting for victory and peace." On foot, the Kaiser went some distance north of Winterberg, and there, from commanding heights, surveyed the scene.

"The vast panorama of the Aisne battlefield," says Rosner, "lay before him wonderfully clear in the bright weather. A good view could be had of the swelling Aisne region and the advance of the German attacking troops could be plainly observed.

"On his way to this point the Kaiser was everywhere enthusiastically greeted with 'The Kaiser is here. Things will go on again.' And he often spoke with the soldiers and gave them news of victory. Now and then he called up men and informed them of the extent of our triumph. Until late in the afternoon he followed the progress of our troops.

Demands Crushing of France.

The Rheinische Westfälische Zeitung, always excessive in the violence of its expressions, today finds pleasure in venting its rage upon France. It says:

"The force with which the German tempest sweeps over the French will awaken a pleasant echo in the German Empire. With this onslaught we are on the right way, for all political considerations demand insistently that the French should feel the strength of our arm.

"Well considered strategic reasons brought the push to Amiens to an end. We shall not criticise them, but the political point of view cannot be suppressed.

"Even if the English were thrown off the Continent the war would not be ended. They could, after leaving Calais, land behind the Loire or retire to their island and carry on the war at sea. The great army with which England fights against us on the Con-

Many Had Hidden in Caves—Funeral Services for Americans Killed in Battle.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The complete repulse of further enemy attacks upon the new American positions near Cantigny is announced in General Pershing's evening communiqué, issued tonight at the War Department. Fighting continues active around Cantigny and in Lorraine.

The second section of General Pershing's communiqué for May 29 announces the failure of the enemy to break into the American lines in Lorraine. [The first section was published in THE NEW YORK TIMES Thursday morning.] A raiding party of about fifty men, it says, was repulsed, with a loss of ten dead and four wounded. American casualties were light.

On May 27, General Pershing reports, Lieutenants Fisher, Curtis, Buford, and McLanahan, on patrol duty in the St. Mihiel region, encountered enemy machines at 4,000 meters. One of these was downed.

Defeat of an enemy airplane reported in the communiqué for May 28 is credited to Lieutenant Rickenbacker and Lieutenant Vambleton, and not to Lieutenant Rickenbacker and Lieutenant Campbell, as previously reported.

Germans Use Gas in Lorraine.

The text of tonight's dispatch follows:

The enemy has been again completely repulsed by artillery fire and action in attack against our new positions near Cantigny. Artillery fighting continues active there and in Lorraine, where it includes the use of gas shells. There is nothing else of importance to report.

Following is the text of the second section of the May 29 report:

Section B.—Last night in Lorraine the enemy were again very active against our troops. There was again considerable shelling with gas, but the results obtained were very small. Protected by an artillery barrage, a raid-

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Thursday, May 30.—During last night the enemy took Fère-en-Tardenois and drove the allied rearguards back to Vesilly, whence the line ran this morning northeast to the outskirts of Rheims. As the Marne is thus brought into the picture, it is pertinent to point out that in the famous battle of September, 1914, the Germans reached to more than thirty miles south of the river in this region.

This is at present their strongest push. The road from Soissons to Compiègne is closed to them, but further south they have got to the road Soissons-Hartennes.

Lest it be thought that the allied reserves are slow in coming into play, I may point out that the front of the offensive has been nearly doubled in length in the last three days. At the outset it was about thirty-five miles. It is now sixty. Merely to make good losses and to provide a screen of troops along this greater extent, with everything in movement, has required effort.

Midnight Attack on Soissons.

At midnight on Sunday the battle-front was ten miles away from Soissons. The few civilian inhabitants and the many hospital patients had settled down to sleep, the usual hour for airplane raids having passed.

An hour later they and the few army bureaus in the neighborhood were aroused by a sudden outbreak of bombardment, such as they had never heard before, and soon afterward shells began to crash upon the town.

With the wounds of four years of war upon it, the northern quarter completely destroyed and the cathedral grievously damaged, Soissons still possessed something of its old-time grace and air of substantial well-being. It would be an exaggeration to compare it with Richmond, for the Aisne is not the Thames and the French woods are not English parks, but after the victory of Malmaison had put the boche back beyond the Ailette we hoped to see the great mansions repaired and the happy life of the shopping quarters gradually revived. Today the Germans are camped in the smoking uins of Soissons.

On Monday at least 1,200 explosive and incendiary shells were fired into the place. The hospitals, including a special hospital for poison gas cases, were hurriedly evacuated, American Ambulance cars doing good service in carrying away the wounded.

Town Begins to Burn.

On Tuesday the bombardment continued, its purpose being, no doubt, to put out of service the most important bridgehead of the Aisne Valley and one of the most important lines of communications between the regions to the south and north, the town being a railway centre of some local consequence. That afternoon a good many houses were in flames, and during the night a large part of the town was involved in fire.

The enemy had now shouldered his way on the north of the Aisne west-

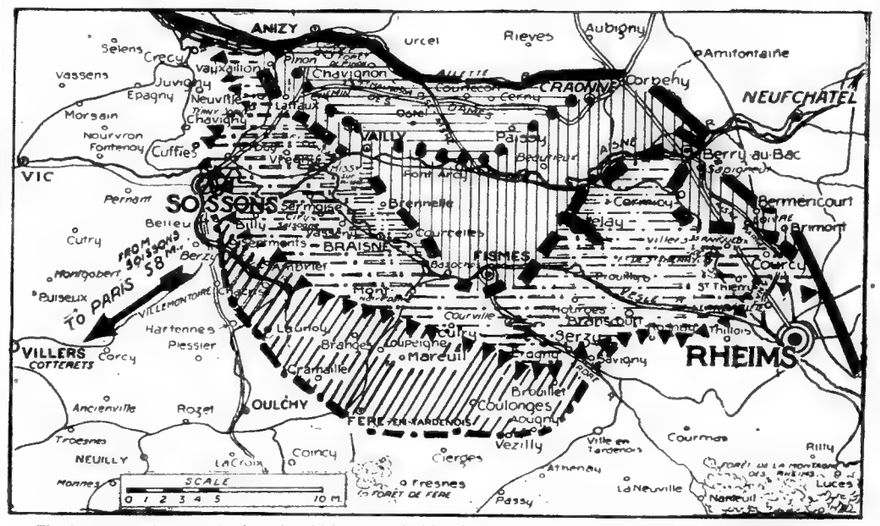
Four Days' Advance of the German Hosts



The four areas, from north to south, which are marked by different shadings, represent the approximate gains by the Crown Prince's army in each of the four days since the German drive began on Monday.

The gain of yesterday, which is to a very large extent on the allied centre and left, represents at the apex, near Fere-en-Tardenois, an advance of four to five miles. The comparative stability of the allied lines around Rheims contrasts with the westward spread of the Germans south and southeast of Soissons.

Official Bulletins of the Aisne Fighting

German

BERLIN, May 30. (By Wireless via London.)

Night Report.—To the south of Fere-en-Tardenois we are fighting our way toward the Marne.

Day Report.—On the battlefront between the Yser and the Oise fighting activity has increased frequently. There were some local infantry engagements.

The armies of the German Crown Prince are progressing victoriously. North of the Aisne ground has been gained, after hard fighting. Cracy-au-Mont, Juvigny, and Cuffies have been occupied.

Soissons has been taken by Brandenburg troops.

The number of prisoners has increased to more than 35,000, and the booty in artillery and war material is tremendous.

South of the Vesle the French front, which was in course of formation, broke down under uninterrupted attacks by our divisions. We threw the enemy back, after stubborn resistance, as far as and across the line of Villemontoire, Fere-en-Tardenois, Coulognes, Brouillet, and Branscourt.

The forts on the northwestern front of Rheims have fallen.

The northern parts of La Neuvillette and Betheny were captured. Guns of every description, up to railway guns of the heaviest calibre, were taken.

The impetuous advance of our attacking forces prevented the enemy from carrying back rich war provisions, heaped up in the captured territories. Large depots fell into our hands at Soissons, Braisne, and Fismes. Extensive munition depots, railway trains, and hospital establishments, with a large quantity of medical equipment, fell into our possession. An airdrome, with machines ready to start and airplane materials, also was captured.

With the army groups of General von Gallwitz and Duke Albrecht the fighting activity revived temporarily.

During the last three days our aviators have brought down thirty-eight enemy airplanes south of Ypres. Five enemy captive balloons were brought down in flames.

French

PARIS, May 30.

Night Report.—We have prevented enemy progress in the western outskirts of Soissons. To the south we solidly hold the left bank of the Crise River.

The Germans are multiplying their efforts in the direction of Ville-en-Tardenois.

In the centre the fighting has not diminished in intensity. The Germans have occupied Fere-en-Tardenois and Vezilly.

The battle continued today with undiminished violence along the whole extent of the front.

On our right and to the northwest of Rheims we are holding our positions.

The enemy air forces, which have been very aggressive and numerous during the battle, have been attacked with the greatest daring by French airmen, who destroyed nineteen German machines, brought down two balloons and compelled twenty-three enemy airplanes to land in a damaged condition.

On the night of May 27-28 French aviators dropped twenty-three tons of explosives on bridges and crossings on the Ailette and Aisne and on various cantonments. The next night and day thirty-seven tons of bombs were dropped on convoys, troops and railway stations.

Day Report.—The battle continued with undiminished violence during the night. French troops energetically maintained the western outlets of Soissons, and the enemy, notwithstanding repeated efforts, was not able to debouch from the town.

Further south engagements of extreme violence developed in the region of the road between Soissons and Hartennes, and on the front between Fere-en-Tardenois and Vezilly, where French troops, supported by reserves, are opposing the German advance with indomitable tenacity.

On the right Franco-British troops along the front between Brouillet and Thillois, and also northwest of Rheims, broke all assaults and maintained their positions.

ward from Pinon, Laffaux, and Vregny and had reached the high road running from Coucy-le-Château to Soissons. Yesterday he pressed still further west, and the road being thus covered, as well as the roads from Laffaux and Vailly, made a powerful direct attack upon the town.

It looked at first like being an easy success. The French, wearied with thirty hours of unceasing combat and impossibly outnumbered, fell back, and the Germans reached the centre of the town. In the narrow streets, however, the effect of superior numbers largely disappeared. The French fought fiercely from corner to corner, and at last, gathering themselves together, swept the enemy back to the northern and eastern suburbs. In the afternoon new German contingents were brought up and in a few hours gained complete possession of the place.

Soissons was, of course, in no sense fortified and, the northern and eastern roads having been lost, it had no military value. The highway down the valley to Compiègne is bordered by the old French trench and wire systems and dominated by hills on either side of the river. The range on the south bank is covered for miles by the great forests of Villers-Cotterets and Compiègne.

The Enemy's Purpose.

But what, indeed, is now the object of the German offensive? The original attack from Cambrai and St. Quentin toward the lower Somme had a single, clear, and most threatening aim—to divide the allied armies and to knock out the British. The second phase was extemporized and had no such simple purpose, but it still struck at vital parts of the Flanders front.

The third act of what, in one way or the other, must be a decisive operation of the war, in spite of the remarkable mechanical skill that has been enlisted for its conduct, looks still more irrelevant, more like the improvised expedient of a tired and hopeless, though still powerful, mind.

No connection between it and the Somme and Flanders offensives can be discerned except that of drawing the allied reserves to the south, but as German reserves in much greater numbers are consumed in the process, of what advantage is this?

Forty Divisions Being Used.

Something like forty divisions, most of them the best troops available, have now been thrown across the Aisne—400,000 men who might possibly have reached some vital part of the allied defenses in the north.

The von Hutier method is a prodigious invention, but it is as costly in fire and blood as it is impressive for force and speed. In the last week of March it was, in a purely military sense, properly employed, even though it failed, because the objective could be said to be of a vital or decisive character.

What vital objective is there in the present operation?

The central part of the German line has been pressed a little further in the last twenty-four hours in the obscure region of scattered hamlets, large farms and deep tortuous valleys, midway between the Aisne and the Marne. It now comes nearly down to the small market towns of Fere-en-Tardenois and Ville-en-Tardenois, thence running east-northeast to the Vesle just outside of Rheims.

The advance is meeting ever-increasing resistance, and by the time the first week is out it will perhaps be definitely arrested. But suppose that it goes much further and reaches the Marne Valley, or even still further, to the Montmirail Valley. Two useful highroads, with some country towns, would be lost to the Allies in these altogether unlikely contingencies, but nothing vital would be lost. The German Army would be no nearer than it now is to winning the war.

Or is it to be supposed that the Great General Staff has some lateral development of the campaign in mind? If so, in which direction?

Beyond Rheims, to the southeast lies Chalons, always a great French military centre. In a year or so the Germans might conceivably capture Chalons, but that would not give them a decision. They need Paris. Then, if that be the objective, why was it not pursued at the end of March by the nearest route? The Oise Valley route was blocked, and still more hopelessly is it now blocked.

This is the way the soldiers regard the outlook, and laymen, too easily impressed by the changing lines on small war maps, might do well to consider the purely military scale of values. I do not maintain that every soldier can reason the matter out, but experience and instinct give him the gist of it.

Yesterday, just behind the centre of the fighting front, I was by the way of seeing both the military and lay points of view in a most vivid light. The roads were divided between troops, the British and French coming up or going down to rest, and caravans of refugees, peasants, and farmers, for the most

BATTLE RAGES FURIOUSLY

New German Divisions Come Up to Aid in Smash Southward.

FERE-EN-TARDENOIS TAKEN

Gains Also Made South of Soissons as German Masses Spread Out.

ALLIED RESERVES ARE UP

French and British, Though Beaten Back Near Rheims, Still Protect the City.

LONDON, May 30.—Fighting proceeded furiously all day today in the Aisne-Vesle battlefield, between Soissons and Rheims.

Being held at the flanks near those two cities, says a Reuter dispatch from French Headquarters, the Germans are throwing their entire strength southward, obviously with the Marne for their goal. It is probable, says the correspondent, that the Germans hope to establish themselves on the Marne, with a view to turning the direction of their main effort westward, trusting to the river to protect their right flank.

The drive toward the west might be with the intention of capturing the railroads connecting with Paris, while the push south toward the Marne is an attempt to cut the Paris-Chalons line, in the opinion of military critics here.

The hottest fighting is proceeding along the whole southern front of the advance, and it is here that the Allies have given most ground. Fère-en-Tardenois (four to five miles south of the point of the furthest German advance of Wednesday) has been occupied by the Germans, and Berlin asserts that German troops are south of that town, "fighting toward the Marne."

Vezilly, to the eastward, also has been taken by the enemy, which announces that the Allies have been thrown back across the line of Villemontoire, south of Soissons, Fère-en-Tardenois, Coulognes, Brouillet, and Branscourt.

In the Rheims sector, according to Berlin, the Crown Prince's forces have taken the northern parts of La Neuvillette and Betheny, (a mile nearer to Rheims on the northwest and northeast.)

The Paris official bulletin, however, says that the positions west and southwest of Rheims are being held.

Capture of huge amounts of war material is reported by the German official report and the number of prisoners taken is now put at more than 35,000.

Allied aviators are engaging in extensive operations to harass the enemy and cripple his air force. Nineteen German machines were brought down yesterday.

The allied reserves are up and supporting the divisions which have borne the whole weight of the onslaught since Monday.

There is still some disagreement here as to whether the German High Command is likely to make a bigger main attack elsewhere, but the general movement toward Paris seems to square with the idea of the German press that political motives call for a blow at the French armies and that this is of equal importance with a strategic effort to push toward Amiens or drive further north, with the intention of dividing the allied forces.

A Fanlike Movement.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, May 30. (Associated Press.)—The efforts of the Germans since their first rapid advance appear to take a fan-like movement. The principal column of the Teuton divisions seems to have thrust in the direction of Fere-en-Tardenois, but on both flanks also strong forces are engaged. The first captured Soissons and the second menaced Rheims. In the latter region they are meeting the sternest defense from the Franco-British forces, which, nevertheless, have been obliged to realign to keep the front straight.

D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World," 44th St. Theatre. Mat. Today, 25c to $1. Biggest Sensation in New York.—Advt.

Fresh enemy divisions have been brought forward hastily to take the places of those exhausted by the swift advance and continue the pressure on the Allies

The enemy is pushing on with every atom of strength to obtain possession of as much territory as possible before the allied reserves come up in full force. The latter, however, are reaching the line, being thrown in to strengthen the defending forces where they are weakest.

As the battle proceeds the enemy's purpose becomes plain. It is twofold.

First of all, eighteen miles south of the Vesle flows the Marne, which forms, with the Oise, one of the great avenues of approach to Paris. Along its course runs the Chalons Railroad, the main eastern artery. To gain a footing in the Marne Valley, or even to approach within artillery range of it, would be an appreciable result. That shows why the Germans continue to push southward so vigorously. Their advance yesterday was only three and one-half miles, as against five and one-half on the first day of the attack and seven on the second.

The second objective, which the German staff regards as even more important, judging by the efforts made at Soissons, is to broaden the salient to the westward. By enlarging the action there the German Crown Prince, it is thought, intends to approach nearer to Paris on the direct route.

Although Soissons was evacuated to prevent needless sacrifice of men, the French hold all the roads leading out of the town.

Heavy fighting still lies ahead for the Allies, but those most competent to express an opinion are now satisfied that the German drive will be stopped in the near future.

GERMANS HAMPERED IN GUNS.

Can't Advance Them Rapidly Because Crossings Are Vulnerable to Airmen.

PARIS, May 30.—The Germans in their advance have been obliged to leave their guns on the northern side of their original line, which can be crossed only at a certain number of points, highly vulnerable to allied airplanes. The enemy is thus prevented from reaping the full benefits of his rapid advance.

Meanwhile the allied reserves are massing at certain points without confusion. So well perfected are the arrangements that an entire division can be moved by motor truck from the Somme to Rheims in forty-eight hours and arrive without a button missing.

MINOR OPERATIONS ALONG HAIG'S FRONT

French Better Their Position North of Kemmel — German Attack Near Festubert Fails.

LONDON, May 30.—Only minor operations are taking place along the allied lines in the northern area of the Western battlefront. Artillery activity continues on both sides.

During the night the French troops improved their positions in the region east of Dickebusch Lake, (north of Kemmel.)

A German attack on a strong British position northwest of Festubert was repulsed completely.

The statement issued by the War Office tonight reads:

A successful local operation was carried out by French troops east of Dickebusch Lake last night, resulting in an improvement in our position in that sector.

Beyond artillery activity on both sides, there is nothing to report from the remainder of the British front.

The day bulletin is as follows:

During the night the enemy attacked the strong point known as "Route-a-Keep," northwest of Festubert, and was completely repulsed.

We carried out a successful minor operation in the neighborhood of Merris and improved our line slightly. We captured a few prisoners and a machine-gun in these encounters.

A party of our troops raided the enemy's trenches last night near Locon and brought back a few prisoners.

The hostile artillery has been active east of Villers-Bretonneux and in the Hinges and Robecq sectors.

Six German Airplanes Downed.

Five German airplanes were brought down in the air fighting on Wednesday, and one was driven to earth out of control, according to the official statement on aerial operations issued by the War Office tonight. The text of the statement reads:

Low clouds and poor visibility prevented much work by our airplanes on Wednesday until late in the afternoon, when the weather cleared. Five German machines were brought down in air fighting and one was driven down out of control. We lost none.

Five tons of bombs were dropped by our machines during the day on ammunition dumps and billets in the neighborhood of Armentières and Bapaume.

The bombing operations continued during Wednesday night, and sixteen tons of bombs were dropped on railway stations, including those at Valenciennes and Busigny, and on towns and roads behind the enemy's lines. Projectiles were also dropped on the docks at Bruges. All our machines returned.

In addition to the raids reported on Wednesday, our machines heavily bombed the railway triangle at Metz-Sablons on Wednesday night. All our machines except one returned.

LONDON, Friday, May 31.—The Daily Mail correspondent at British Headquarters in France says that the shelling of towns behind the lines is becoming more intense. Amiens, adds the correspondent, has been bombarded vigorously in the last twenty-four hours, coinciding with the increased activity of German air raiders.

part from the invaded region on both sides of the Vesle.

The British in khaki, companies from some of the hard-tried divisions which I named yesterday, were weary under their heavy packs and thirsty from the heat and dust. But they looked physically fit and cheerful. Even the footsore stragglers and the walking wounded had no air of having come out of a parlous defeat.

Real life is not like a map. It is both worse and better, more complex, obscure, full of the unexpected, and if the horrors of war are beyond the power of the printed word to represent, so, too, are manliness and faith that support them.

Train Ran Into Germans.

In an evacuation station where a number of British were waiting for the hospital train the ragged fellows told me of adventures that only their scarlet, honest faces made credible. There was a young Lieutenant who was on a train that was sent up north yesterday toward Fismes. The exact whereabouts of the enemy was unknown. They ran right into the German lines.

The outposts received them with a volley of rifle shots and then came on with grenades. The engine driver stopped the train, jumped down and took refuge in a ditch. While the fight waxed hotter he was induced to return and they managed to steam backward just in time, carrying some wounded and three German prisoners with them.

The Lieutenant's satisfaction in this last item seemed, however, to be marred by the impression that Germans were not forcibly captured, but wished to surrender.

The civilian refugees are going south in processions of farm carts, high-ended wagons and ancient traps, or footing it behind barrows and perambulators. I would not speak as lightly as I have done of the temporary loss of their lands and homes, but in their ranks, also, there was no sign of panic or fear for the final result.

Most of them were women and children, with a few gaffers, heading a family group or drivings cows and big white oxen. Girls with umbrellas up against the hot sun and dust clouds, little children in their Sunday best, and old ladies in Scotch caps sat on piles of straw, amid bedding and furniture, on high wagons. Many of the younger folks had bicycles and many walked, with dogs and goats frisking about them.

At nightfall some of the parties had reached the villages to which they were directed. Others pitched camps and built fires on the edge of the road and bordering on the woods. Many kindly services were done for them by passing soldiers, French and British. It was a picturesque and not unhappy scene, markedly more in contrast with the flight over this same ground at the beginning of the war.

BATTLE FACTORS THAT FAVOR ALLIES

Their Unity in Action Proved—They Know Exactly How the Foe Is Operating.

By WALTER DURANTY.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 30.—The battle continues to develop along the same lines as the action of March 21, of which it is an exact repetition as far as the design and the execution of the attack are concerned. The same tactics have been followed, the same troops have been used—seven of von Hutier's storm divisions that took part in the March drive have already been identified—and there has been the same rapid progress in the exploitation of the results attained by "surprise," or, in military terminology, "concentration of forces in unexpected strength at a given point."

But on the Allies' side there are two new factors of great importance which render the situation far more favorable than before. They are: Unity of action and foreknowledge of the enemy's method, if not of the place and hour where the blow was about to fall.

However regrettable may be the loss of ground involved, it cannot be too strongly emphasized that the allied leaders regard it as in no way disastrous or even as a reversal of their calculations. They knew that—while maintaining strong forces to cover vital points—it would be impossible for them to have sufficient density of troops along the whole line to prevent initial gains elsewhere as a consequence of the new German tactics of surprise and manoeuvre warfare. In a word, the situation is progressing "normally."

Simple Problem for Allies.

Instead of being divided into two separate organizations whose combined working is further hampered by the enemy's penetration at the point of junction and by the staggering effect of a novel and unforeseen method of warfare, the Allies have now to solve a far simpler problem of checking a blow against what is virtually the right flank of one great army. That, despite disadvantages, they were successful before, accounts for the confidence—so thorough and universal in the French Army as to be almost surprising—that they will do so again.

The fact is that to professional soldiers such battles as the present are what war really means. I have constantly heard such phrases as "We have simply reverted to the classical war of movement in which giving ground is just a manoeuvre comparable to that of a fencer who 'breaks' before a sudden attack without in any way feeling that his security is menaced in consequence." The nonmilitary world has been hypnotized, but knew down in their hearts that the classic principles of military science were not altered despite the limitations imposed by trench fighting. Thus it is entirely erroneous to think of the German drive as a flood bursting through a fixed dam. What has happened is the normal result of the interplay of two forces, both of which have resumed fluidity after a long period of congelation.

The principle involved holds true even when retreat necessitates the abandonment of positions "consecrated" in the public mind by long years of bloody struggle.

No Confusion Anywhere.

Facts speak for themselves. Divisions have not lost touch or been thrown into confusion. The retreat has been orderly and planned. And there are hurrying to position in the meantime reserves to make the enemy pay a heavy price for his gain of ground. Each mile he advances weakens his striking force and increases his fatigue and difficulties of communications and transport. Each mile exposes him more completely to the fire of the French artillery and machine guns.

The battle of March cost the Germans 400,000 men. For all that, their initial success was far more genuine. It is the destruction of an enemy's army, not the gain of positions, that alone counts in the eternal verities of war. And Germany's forces, like her time, are limited. For her, there is no America hurrying to the rescue; no news like that of Tuesday, when the Americans won their spurs in the battle area at Cantigny to send a tonic thrill through the whole army, as it has done through the French.

The scene behind the battlefront presents a striking contrast to what occurred in March and affords full reason for confidence. Naturally, there is hurry, but it is orderly and harmonious instead of a rush to fling in troops at any cost to re-establish a critical situation.

Even the pitiful cartloads of refugees sound a less ominous note. Their faces are sad, because they are leaving homes before invaded, but there is no trace of panic in their movement on the roads—that is inevitable—but they are very different from the groups that formed the flotsam of the March retreat.

Fused Into One Army.

Above all, there is proof on every side of complete harmony and communication of the French and British. Here it is a long row of lorries that have been carrying supplies to the front, now laden with allied wounded mingled indiscriminately, whose less injured cases are doing their utmost to tell each other the details of the battle. Further on there is a group of French and British officers, their heads bent closely over maps or engaged in earnest discussion around the board table of a white-walled cottage.

One does not need to hear that English soldiers are fighting in battalions with battalions of the famous Colonial Division, or that a company of British regulars held out to the death side by side with a little band of French Territorials, to know that at last a miracle has been accomplished, and that in the flame of battle the allied armies have fused into a single army, henceforth "one and indivisible."

EXPECT THEM BY OCTOBER

German Advance Spreads No Dismay—Allies Taking a Heavy Toll from Enemy.

PARIS, May 30.—Now, as always, France looks forward with steady confidence to the arrival of sufficient American troops to bring the war to a victorious finish.

"We must hold on until the Americans come," is the one outstanding article of faith of France today, and France is confident she can hold out.

"We must hold on until October," writes Maurice Hutin in the Echo de Paris, "and stand up under other hard blows which we still have to face until then. Next October the Americans will have more than a million and a half men on the western front. From now until then, as Clemenceau has very frankly explained, we and our allies must stand up to all the German attacks. To economize our men until then and to keep the enemy in check, even at the price of yielding ground—we must resign ourselves to that."

Hutin adds that already American soldiers have given proof of their valor and pluck by occupying the village of Cantigny, to the west of Montdidier, notwithstanding the stubborn defense put up by the Germans. The French papers generally hail the American success at Cantigny as a foretaste of great things for the future.

Feeling in Paris is by no means pessimistic, in spite of the substantial gain of territory by the Germans during the first days of their onslaught. These gains are universally regarded as inevitable in the circumstances. Reading between the lines of the communiqués leaves no possible doubt that Foch has the situation well in hand. The enemy's territorial drive on Monday told the allied commander all he wanted to know, and he promptly ordered up a substantial portion of his reserves. Confidence that the genius of Foch will prove fully equal, both as a strategist and as a tactician to anything the German commanders can develop against the Allies, is, if anything, higher than ever, and at the present moment is only equaled by the splendid faith of France, despite the terrible blows she has had to withstand, in the ultimate victory of her armies and those of the Allies

Germans Pay Heavily.

Loss of territory such as that suffered since Monday, the enemy having advanced in places a distance of between fifteen and sixteen miles, would appear serious, judging from the map. Under modern conditions, however, this is always possible where either adversary masses sufficient men at a given point and is prepared to force his way forward regardless of the cost in human material. Drives of this kind are bound to result in success the first day or two from the simple fact that the attacking army has always the advantage of the initiative and vastly superior numbers, while the army attacked cannot know at what point the blow will fall until the attackers intention is revealed.

The position today is such that it can safely be asserted that the Germans have once more failed to secure the long-sought decisive victory. The fighting value of the allied armies has not been impaired, and their reserves are still intact while the German man power has again been seriously diminished by the enormous number killed. That's all that really counts as a matter of cold, hard fact in summing up this second battle of the Aisne today.

It is now clear that the German success of the first forty-eight hours of battle was due, as in the case of the previous offensive, solely to overwhelming numbers. At the Marne, the opposing forces were nearly equal, and all the world knows the result. At the Yser, the French and British won against odds of three to one. On Monday the Germans numbered at least four to one against the Allies, and they have since thrown in many fresh divisions in the hope of overwhelming the allied armies in one furious onslaught before Foch could move up his reserves. Competent authorities assert that at least forty German divisions, equal to about 550,000 men, have been engaged.

According to the Echo de Paris, the German drive was carried out by thirty-five divisions, say, 470,000 men. Two of these were divisions belonging to the Prussian Guard. German infantry division number roughly about 9,000 bayonets, plus over 3,500 machine gunners, pioneers, artillery men, telegraphists.

Advantage With Invaders.

The Germans were ready to pay any price, cost what it might, to crush the allied army by their terrific blow, and threw in men regardless of losses. The crossing of the Aisne was an enormously costly business. For every man killed at least three more were sent forward and, when the crossing finally was effected, it was over what may be described, without much stretch of the imagination as a veritable bridge of their own dead. German tanks played a decisive part in the initial attack on the British divisions astride the Aisne at the beginning of the battle.

The fight for Fismes was especially stubborn. The village commands a most important knot of roads in the district, including a bridge across the Vesle. Fismes also marks the junction of the railroad running along the river from Soissons to Rheims with two strategically important lines running, respectively, southeast and southwest from it. Fismes and Bazoches, another station four miles east, changed hands several times during the struggle. Both were finally secured by the Germans through sheer weight of numbers, and the British and French fell back, still fighting stubbornly foot by foot, into the country south of the Vesle.

The Germans, from their original positions, have now driven a deep wedge across the Ailette, Aisne, and Vesle Rivers. The point of their drive forms a dangerous salient for them which they must enlarge at any cost; or, with their backs to the Aisne and the British and French holding firmly on both wings, their position may at any moment become critical.

ALLIED SHOCK TROOPS ARE NOW IN BATTLE

Paris Sure That the German Onslaught Will Be Stayed Soon by Growing Reserves.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 30.—This afternoon for the first time the official communiqué reported the entry in the battle of the allied reserves.

Up to today, in the opinion of experts, the battle, although begun, could not be said to be fully engaged. The shock of the enemy's onslaught up to now had been borne by the local troops in the sectors involved, supported by their own particular reserves and such immediate reinforcements as could be gathered hastily together. The allied reserve divisions of shock troops and manoeuvring units have been in movement for two days, but it was only last night that any substantial number of them were able to get into the actual fighting.

It must be remembered that forty-eight hours is required to transport a division by motor wagons. A much larger proportion of troops have to be carried now by automobile. All this helps to account for the apparent delay in bringing up the reserves.

These reserves are now arriving in larger and larger numbers, and already there are indications that the German onslaught has been stayed.

The situation is still serious, but there are not so many causes for anxiety as there were yesterday. There is growing reason to believe that before many days the situation on the Aisne front will settle down into the same kind of deadlock as has characterized the front before Amiens and Arras since the German rush in that direction was held up two months ago.

PREDICTS HARDER BLOWS

British Expert Declares Economy of Men Is Essential Until the Enemy Declares His Hand.

By MAJOR GEN. SIR FREDERICK MAURICE.

LONDON, May 30.—Some excisions which the censor thought it necessary to make in my last article, the first dealing with the present battle, made my comments appear to have a more optimistic tone than I had intended. I see no reason at present to alter the opinion I expressed that this offensive of the Crown Prince is preparatory to another and heavier blow. But, as the extent of the front of attack and the force employed show, it is a serious preparation, and it has met with great success.

We learn from Sir Douglas Haig's reports and from the dispatches of correspondents with the French and British Armies that rather less than the right half of the front attacked was held by four British divisions, all of which had been heavily engaged in the battles of last March and in the Flanders fighting of April. They were possibly below strength, may have contained a considerable number of fresh drafts, and cannot have been long in their new positions. On the new ground, with which they had not had time to become familiar, they were at a disadvantage in meeting the surprise attack in greatly superior force, and it is a great tribute to their valor that they held their battle positions on a great part of the front until compelled by a break in the centre, where, as usual, the enemy was in greatest force, to fall back to positions in the rear.

We have not heard from the French how their part of the front was held, but it may be assumed from its length that they had also about four divisions in line against these eight divisions. The Germans probably had on this front, before the concentration for the battle began, about eight or nine. Reports from France estimate that the Crown Prince's attack was made with twenty-five divisions, assisted by a considerable number of tanks, and this force may be, and probably has been, increased since.

Germans Aided by Tanks.

We do not yet know how far the enemy owed his success to the surprise employment of tanks on the lines of our Cambrai attack of last November; but rumors were rife before the German offensive of March 21 that the enemy was bringing up tanks in numbers, and they did not make their appearance on any scale in the subsequent fighting. It may therefore well be that the enemy was not ready then, that he has been using the last two months to complete the tuning up of his machines and the training of their crews, and has now put his new weapon for the first time to a serious test.

With the exception of this one uncertain factor, nothing that has yet been disclosed shows any novelty in the enemy's methods or important changes in his dispositions. The armies of von Boehn and of Fritz von Below are in their normal places. It was known that the Crown Prince had a number of Guard divisions under his orders, and, therefore, the report of the appearance of part of the Guard in the present battle is in no way surprising. Similarly, identifications of German divisions defeated in the attempt on the Locre front are those of divisions which we should expect to find in Flanders.

Now, if we take the largest estimate yet received of the force with which the Crown Prince began his attack, namely, twenty-five divisions, against the Franco-British eight or nine, this, while giving him an immediate superiority on the battlefield of more than three to one, would only require the employment of some sixteen divisions from his reserves, the other eight or nine being already on the front.

The latest estimates we have received of the total German reserves on the west is eighty divisions, and probably something like seventy of these were behind that part of the front between Rheims and the Channel. Therefore, even if the enemy has been reinforced since the beginning of the battle, it is doubtful whether more than one-third of his total battle reserve has yet been drawn into the fight, and we must look for further developments.

It may well be that the enemy will be tempted by his success to draw further on his reserves and push for the Marne, with the object of cutting the Paris-Châlons railway. This would mean an advance of another fifteen miles, and we know that he had reached the River Vesle some twelve miles from his point of departure before noon of the second day of the battle.

Short of the Marne, the ground he may gain by an advance directly southward will not materially affect the situation on the front as a whole; and to get as far as the Marne he must widen his base of attack to avoid being confined in a narrow and awkward salient.

Needs Rheims and Soissons.

To widen his base, he must secure Rheims on his left flank and Soissons on his right; and this he now appears to be trying to do. He has already succeeded in dominating Rheims from two sides. Our troops are reported to have fallen back from the heights of St. Thierry, which dominate the town to the northwest; and the heights to the northeast and east have long been in the enemy's hands.

Close behind the front line and pounded by the enemy's guns, Rheims has ceased to have for the French more than a sentimental value. Soissons is of more importance, as linking up the present battlefield with that of the Somme, and enabling the enemy to widen his front of attack either toward Amiens or toward Paris.

We are not likely to know for some days how the enemy's plans are going to develop. Foch's reserves are arriving, and we may expect the enemy's first rush, which in the centre was surprisingly rapid, to be stayed. The real question which affects the military situation as a whole is whether Foch, in order to check the enemy, will be compelled to use more of his reserves than the Crown Prince has used to gain and may use to extend his success. In fact, the problem remains one of economy of force and will so remain until the enemy has disclosed his hand and engaged the bulk of his reserves.

There is nothing at present to lead us to suppose that Foch will not be able to stop the German progress with fewer troops than the enemy employs before anything vital has been lost; for, on this battlefield at least, we have plenty of elbow room, and, if the centre has given way, the allied flanks have been holding well and inflicting very heavy loss on the attacker. It is inevitable that the allied losses in men and material should also be heavy, when the enemy has penetrated so rapidly and to such a depth.

There is no reason to suppose that our fine achievement of last March in replacing our losses in guns and material will not be repeated or even improved upon in the case of this smaller demand on our resources. But replacement of men is, as we know, a serious matter, and becomes more serious with every heavy casualty list. Still, we need not take the enemy claims as accurate, for it has been particularly easy in this case for him to exaggerate his captures, since they have been made from armies of two nations and are, therefore, more than usually difficult to check. Past experience leads us to suppose that the enemy's first announcements were a bold and optimistic estimate, and not an exact enumeration.

tinent is not her own army, but that of France, and it is now a question of beating that decisively. Without that, nothing can be achieved."

That quotation is made more interesting by what may be read between the lines.

The correspondent of the Cologne People's Gazette says:

"Our supreme command will give blow on blow until the enemy is ready for peace. Blows will fail where it is deemed best. Territorial gains and names on the map have nothing to do with the matter."

The correspondent thinks that Hindenburg will next turn his attention to the Arras region. Several papers term the latest German effort "the Summer offensive."

Prepares Public for a Slowing Up.

ZURICH, May 30.—Newspapers in Southern Germany publish the following note from the German headquarters:

"The population should not expect our advance to continue at the same rate as on the first day. The resistance of the enemy is becoming desperate and violent counterattacks are to be expected. The transport of artillery and munitions also is meeting with some difficulty."

Speaking of losses, the note adds that to estimate them correctly the people should not forget the gravity or importance of the struggle.

FLOOD WILL BE DAMMED SOON.

So Says a Semi-Official Note Issued in Paris.

PARIS, May 30.—The German flood will soon be dammed, says a semi-official note issued today summarizing the situation between Rheims and Soissons. The note says:

"The Germans again progressed yesterday, but while on one hand they failed to pierce our lines, on the other it is comforting to observe that their march was slackened considerably by the arrival of our reserves.

"As these come into play the balance will gradually be restored, and soon the German flood will be dammed.

"The French command retains undiminished confidence, based, as it is, on the power of our resources and the incomparable valor of our soldiers."

AMSTERDAM, May 30.—The resumption of the German offensive is announced to the German people without any of that exuberance which characterised the official communiqués at the beginning of the gigantic German effort two months ago. There is no talk of the "Kaiser's battle," and a strong note of caution is so evident that some journals express doubt as to the push south of Laon actually being a renewal of the great offensive.

In all papers to hand, including this morning's Rhineland journals, there is little comment other than in headline hysteria, and, in general, paraphrases of what has been given out officially. So far no single war correspondent has given a sign of life. It is apparent that, after the six weeks' pause, a resumption of activity on a large scale has come as a decided relief to the German people.

"At last!—these words of relief pass from mouth to mouth," says the Vossische Zeitung. "The very expression shows a want of faith in our Supreme Command."

That is a pretty fair admission that the German people have had some reason for impatience and that they have been given to understand that the offensive which began in March would lead to a quick triumph.

The military critic of the Berlin Mittag Zeitung expresses the hope that the push will be persevered in. From that remark it may be assumed that another long pause would not be very acceptable. The Vossische Zeitung's critic insists, as do most writers, on the complete surprise which the German commanders effected, and he finds in the presence of the English on the line of attack proof that Foch did not anticipate an offensive on that section of the line.

The chief aim of the German military writers at the present moment is to spread stories of Anglo-French enmity, and they back that up by lauding the French soldiers and belittling the British. All sorts of obviously faked recriminations are put in the mouths of prisoners.

General von Ardenne, in the Berliner Tageblatt, says that the recent push of von Boehm over the Oise to Château Coucy was a prelude to the present offensive and made the task of the Crown Prince much easier by securing his flank. The Cologne Gazette, in its comment today, has a vague but interesting reference to the work of allied airmen behind the German lines during the first stage of the offensive. It evidently harbors a fear that they will not be found wanting on this occasion. In German circles here there is a good deal of rejoicing and a lot of talk about being in Paris and Calais in ten days.

BERNE, May 30.—The German press comment on the new offensive is as yet remarkably restrained. It appears to be generally felt that the success of the offensive is not assured and that the captures effected to the present must be regarded primarily as an offset to the Italian successes.

The Cologne Gazette derives innocent satisfaction from the report that the front where the Germans attacked was not where the allied military critics expected them to attack.

Lieut. Gen. Baron von Ardenne, military expert of the Berliner Tageblatt, expects the Italians to start a big counter-offensive. He also provides an interesting example of the German desire to have things both ways. The Germans having failed to drive a wedge between the French and British armies, the General now argues that the Allies are working in such close co-operation as to weaken themselves because of the possibility that the French and British troops might get mixed during an attack. His article reviewing the situation concludes with this significant reference to Palestine:

"From the Asiatic theatre of war a joyful piece of news has reached us. The combined army in Palestine of Djemal Pasha has sent a telegram to Emperor Karl at Constantinople to announce its consolation. We infer therefrom that the Austro-Hungarian troops are now fighting shoulder to shoulder beside the Turks and Germans, although, in spite of the double victory on the Jordan, they have not yet crossed the river and recaptured Jerusalem. Nevertheless, the joint character of the operations evidences the interest which is again being taken by the Central Powers in the Jewish and Syrian battlefields."

DON'T WANT TO FIGHT NOW.

Russians Need Only Economic Aid from the Allies, They Say.

By ARTHUR RANSOME.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, May 24, (Continuation of a Previous Dispatch.)—The writer in the Izvestia goes on to say:

"A telegraph message from the Associated Press, the great American news agency, offers recognition of the Soviet Government if it will accept the temporary help of the Allies, consisting in the first place of Chinese and Japanese troops. Military assistance would be necessary to Russia if Russia were at war with Germany. But Russia wants peace with Germany, however bitter that peace may be. Russia is not prepared to throw herself again into the gulf of war if she is not forced thereto by the aggressive policy of Germany. If the Russian Government has openly declared that in the event of German aggression it considers it possible to accept any kind of help, it does not follow from that that she is prepared to invite help in order to provoke German aggression.

"Russia at the present moment is not at war. This does not mean that we shut our eyes to the danger threatening us from German imperialism. If any one wishes to help Russia to resist this danger let him re-establish her transport and reorganize her economic life.

"The Russian Government has plainly informed the German Government that, as a Government of a neutral nation, it is trying to establish economic relations with all countries. If the Allies do not wish to drag Russia into war merely in order to ease the military situation on the western front, but actually wish to help her in her difficult position, then let them think of speedy economic help and not of something else."

The article ends by remarking that the Chinese-Japanese agreement concerns joint action against Germany, but is actually directed against Russia. The Chinese frontiers do not adjoin those of Germany, but those of Asiatic Russia. Thus this agreement "mobilizes China against us. This at present is more significant than any diplomatic music."

This article deserves most careful attention. I do not know a single responsible representative of the Soviets who fails to recognize that a struggle with Germany is inevitable sooner or later. If we in the meantime earn the confidence of the Soviet by recognition we shall then be invited to help.

Russia's own strength in the coming struggle depends entirely on the improvement of her material conditions. If help is forced on Russia prematurely its only effect will be to weaken Russia. It would be applauded by every intelligent German imperialist, who would rejoice to see the Allies making things easy for him.

Italian Consul Says Intervention Alone Will Save Country.

TOKIO, May 23, (Associated Press.)—On his arrival here Italian Consul Decuadra at Harbin said that the Russians in Siberia were helpless and hopeless, and that the only way of saving the country was by intervention. He said that there was great danger if this did not occur, as everything was in chaos. In the Consul's opinion, a Japanese or allied army of 100,000 could restore law and order as far west as Irkutsk, but should have considerable reserves, in view of the possibility of a German army co-operating with the Bolsheviki.

Decuardra says that it is quite true that the Bolsheviki have armed German and Austrian prisoners. General Semenoff captured fifty Austrians in a recent battle and said jokingly: "If the Americans are still skeptical about these prisoners, I am willing to send the fifty to be exhibited in New York."

Referring to the rise in the price of the ruble from 5 cents a few months ago to 14 cents, the Consul said that the Chinese were anticipating a Japanese expedition into Siberia and the consequent need for millions of rubles for army purchases and had bought rubles, with the result that prices had hardened.

KILL NUNS WITHOUT TRIAL.

Massacres by White Guards and Germans in Finland Continue.

LONDON, May 30, (via Ottawa.)—A Russian wireless dispatch says the Central Committee of Finnish Workmen has protested against the terrorism of Finland by the White Guard, stating that 70,000 persons, the majority of them Social Democrats, have been imprisoned and brutally treated. Of these 36,000 are civilians.

The wholesale slaughter of prisoners was begun by Finnish troops, assisted by the Germans. In one day, the dispatch continues, 158 women prisoners were killed. Many Sisters of Mercy of the Sacred Heart were put to death without trial. Field courts-martial are still condemning persons to death en masse, although the civil war is over.

The Finnish proletariat calls out to the civilized world in the name of humanity to stop this terrorism.

Son and Daughters Arrive at Yekaterinburg from Tobolsk.

MOSCOW, May 28, (Associated Press.)—Alexis Romanoff, formerly the Russian heir apparent, and the daughters of the former Emperor, have arrived at Yekaterinburg, in the Government of Perm, on the Asiatic side of the Ural Mountains.

The former Emperor and Empress have been at Yekaterinburg for several weeks, having been removed from Tobolsk, Siberia, after the reported discovery of a conspiracy to bring about the escape of Nicholas. Alexis remained at Tobolsk for a time on account of ill-health.

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

One of the most serious phases of the German advance on the Aisne front is the great loss of artillery and stores which must have inevitably fallen into German hands. The German reports make no definite claims, but the allied loss in these materials must be enormous. The depth of advance has carried the German lines beyond the gun positions, even the positions of the heavy artillery. The rapidity of the advance must in a great many cases have overrun these positions before the guns could be removed.

It is no small task to move the artillery of larger calibre. It is a matter which not only involves tractors of considerable power and in great numbers, but also takes a great deal of time. This time the French did not have. The result has, therefore, been that large numbers of these guns must have been captured, together with a number of ammunition dumps, containing great stores of shell.

The Allies, of course, have large surplus stocks of both guns and shell. At the same time there is a very great wastage aside from those which are taken by the Germans. There is, too, a great drain on this store and on their manufacturing facilities. The Allies send their guns to Italy, they are as yet still furnishing the American Army with practically all of the artillery that it is using. Not only then must the French and British make up the great German captures of the last two months, but they must repair the wastage in artillery of four armies—two in addition to their own—the armies of Italy and of the United States. Eventually, of course, the latter burden will be lifted from their shoulders and placed where it properly belongs. But at the present time they are carrying the burden. This situation will make the artillery and equipment loss a serious factor.

The general situation appears somewhat better than yesterday, although the improvement is not strongly marked. The Germans spent part of their time in attempts to break through on the sides of the deep wedge they have beaten into the French lines, but were entirely unsuccessful. These attacks were made south of Soissons and in the region of Rheims east of Thillois, the latter section of the line being held by the British. The French, who appear to be reporting on all of the Aisne operations, state that both attacks broke down without gain, and there is nothing in the Berlin report which would seem to indicate otherwise.

Unfortunately, however, this is not of vital importance in this particular attack in so far as checking the German advance is concerned. The front of advance is so wide that there is not present likelihood of a situation arising similar to that in Picardy, where the advance was held up by inability to break through the narrow tactical salient to which the German positions had been reduced. A salient really ceases to be dangerous to those holding the interior when the guns of the other side cannot reach across the base. Indeed, as long as the artillery can reach all points in the territory inclosed, the situation is uncomfortable. This does not exist in the case of the present German wedge. It is deep but very wide at the base, so a great part of it is not subjected to gunfire.

In its relation to the battle of Picardy and viewed as a great effort to widen out the apex of the salient at Montdidier, the failure of these attacks is a vital matter. As far as we can see, the capture of Paris is a remote possibility, even admitting that it is a possibility at all. Until Paris is reached there is no point which may be truly regarded as vital in the direction of the greatest advance. Germany would have to continue her march in this line all the way to Southern France before any decisive damage was done. It is the old question, oft repeated, of the relation of geographical locations to final victory. There is no such relation unless such locations contribute to the destruction of an army, either through complete interference with its supply system or through its division which makes it possible to defeat the parts in detail. There are no such possibilities as far as may be seen at present. The French Army is not destroyed, nor is the British, nor is contact between them lost. Because of the fact that the present attack, viewed as a single effort, does not contribute to victory by itself, it must be viewed in connection with the battle of Picardy, since Germany is not and cannot limit her horizon to tactical successes, but must labor to achieve a complete strategical decision. We then come back to the proposition of using the attack along the Aisne to widen out the Montdidier salient, and unless this is done the attack is not particularly dangerous, at least in its present stages.

There is a still more powerful argument in favor of this conclusion. If we assume the absence of definite relation between this and the former attack, we take the position that Germany has voluntarily assumed the offensive on three separate fronts. This, it might be argued, places the Allies in a quandary, as they never know where to expect the next effort. This is in a measure true. But at the same time it presumes that Germany has practically unlimited men and artillery and can afford such a frightfully expensive process. But this we know is not so. Therefore the three efforts must have a positive and very definite connection each with the other. The only possible relation between the attack on the Aisne and the fighting in Picardy is the salient at Amiens.

TURKS RESTIVE UNDER GERMAN DOMINATION

Epidemics, Hardships and Famine Causing Great Mortality—Troops Mutiny.

ATHENS, May 23.—According to information considered worthy of credence, the situation in Turkey has become really lamentable. Epidemics, hardships, and famine have caused deaths en masse.

Despite all the precautions taken Turkish public opinion is already well aware of the successes of the British in Mesopotamia and Syria and is bitterly disappointed therewith.

Enver Bey has demanded German reinforcements, declaring that without them it will be impossible for him to control the situation. General Liman von Sanders has left for Berlin to support Enver's demand.

Serious disputes are arising over direction by the Germans. Talaat Pasha demands the emancipation of Turkey from the German yoke. On the other hands lively disputes are reported among the members of the Committee of Young Turks, some of whom openly declare themselves against Germany.

It is reported from the interior of Smyrna that whole battalions of Turkish troops have deserted. The Turkish Government offers amnesty to the deserters, but they refuse to present themselves.

In Turkish political quarters there is envy of the Bulgarians because of special favors accorded them by Germany.

CALM FAITH IN FOCH SHOWN IN LONDON

Aisne Situation Is Regarded as Serious, but There Is No Note of Despondency.

CANTIGNY AS POTENT SIGN

The Times Points to Our Victory as the Promise That Heartens the Allies.

LONDON, May 30.—The morning newspaper commentators take the view that the situation on the western front is serious, even critical, but there is no note of despondency in their reviews. The arrival of reserves, reported by the French press, is noted with satisfaction, although it is not known whether these are sufficient in number to establish an approximate equilibrium of the opposing forces, whose proportions are generally stated to have been from four to five to one in the Germans' favor since the beginning of the battle.

Confidence is expressed that General Foch will make the best of the difficult situation and it is urged that he be trusted implicitly.

The Daily Chronicle remarks that, owing to geographical advantages, the Germans can conceal to the very last moment the direction of their blows. General Foch must, therefore, hold reserves to meet either of several contingencies. It may be expected, adds The Chronicle, that in his use of his reserves he will be severely economical, and that a certain amount of territory will be abandoned which a freer use of the reserves would save.

"As it is possible to give ground on the Aisne front with less serious consequences than on the front toward Amiens," continues The Chronicle, "it should not be surprising or unduly discountenanced if that alternative were followed."

The Daily News critic likewise says that General Foch must postpone as long as possible any wholesale call on his reserves.

"It is by no means certain," he remarks, "that the present offensive is the only, even the most menacing, attack in contemplation. We hear of heavy shelling around Amiens and of abnormal aircraft activity in Flanders. Immediate and important developments in both those sectors and others are practical possibilities, and until it is known where the Germans will strike the necessary counter-measures cannot be taken."

Points to Cantigny as Sign.

The Times refers to the German offensive as increasing formidable, and after discussing the seriousness of the menace points to the fine spirit in which the French are meeting the enemy's blows. Referring to the smashing by the Americans of German attacks west of Montdidier, The Times adds:

"Our allies know the significance of that as well as we do. So, too, do the German Generals and the German statesmen. It means that the last great factor between autocracy and freedom is coming into effective play on the battlefield. It means that they have but to hold the gap a little longer before their comrades from across the ocean come in armies pledged never to sheathe the sword until it has swept Prussian militarism from the earth and establish the reign of justice and peace. There could be no reflection more heartening for the Allies or more dismaying to their adversaries."

The military critic of The Daily Telegraph writes:

"The British and French still have very valuable assets if they know how best to use them. We possess numerical superiority of soldiers, the ocean routes are at the Allies' disposal, and all the world's wealth for the fetching. The Allies possess the means of concentrating more men, guns, and airplanes in the decisive theatre than the Germans.

"It is unnecessary to repeat the cause which hitherto has nullified these inestimable advantages. It is high time our War Cabinet and War Office found out how to bring this superiority of resources to bear upon the field of action.

"An administration of the highest order is needed to turn the tide. The military situation also demands a master of strategy and tactics to change the face of affairs in France."

Some Concern Over Soissons.

The loss of Soissons was announced too late to evoke much comment in the morning newspapers.

"The loss in itself," says The Times, "is not of military importance, but the enemy is now on the high road which passes through Villers-Cotterets, about forty-five miles from Paris."

In an article written before the abandonment of Soissons was announced, The Chronicle says:

"The loss of Soissons would have a strategic consequence, as its transference to the Germans would increase the advantage they enjoy over General Foch in respect of facilities for shifting the weight of their blow from one side to the other."

The commentators point to the possibility of the loss of Rheims also, as unofficial reports show that it was half surrounded by the Germans, who are firing at its defenders from three sides.

"The further retention of the town," says The Chronicle, "will be difficult, and it may have to be abandoned."

Field Marshal Haig's silence regarding operations on the Aisne front, which has been remarked on in some quarters as strange, is explained by The Daily Mail as in line with the precedent established by the French command. As the French Staff, the newspaper points out, did not record the events in recent Flanders fighting, where French troops were fewer than the British, so the British refrain from touching on the present operations in the Aisne area, as the British troops are in the minority.

The commentators note as significant the fact that the German Staff, in admitting the loss of Cantigny, carefully avoids mentioning the Americans, referring only to "the enemy," apparently fearing the effect at home of attributing the success to an army which the German public has been taught to regard as of no account.

OFFER ARCTIC PORT TO BERLIN FOR PEACE

Bolsheviki Willing to Cede Murman Outlet—Would Give Foe Submarine Base.

MOSCOW, May 27—(Associated Press.)—Foreign Minister Tchitcherin has sent a note to Count von Mirbach, the German Ambassador, announcing that Russia accepts the German proposal to begin peace negotiations with Finland on the basis of the cession of Forts Ino and Ruivola, both on the Baltic, to Russia, which pledges itself not to fortify them. In return Russia is willing to cede a strip of westerly Murman territory, giving Finland access to the Arctic Ocean.

Finland, evidently under the instructions of Germany, has been insisting on the cession of the Murman territory, making it an indispensable condition to peace negotiations. This will give Germany a port on the Arctic and enable her to establish a submarine base.

OUR ALLIES JOIN IN MEMORIAL PARADE

Belgians and French, Veterans of This War, Honor Thinned Ranks of the G. A. R.

THRONGS LINE THE DRIVE

With Our Armies at the Front Double Significance Attached to This Year's Ceremony.

SPECIAL CHURCH SERVICES

Priest Takes Off His Vestments to Lead Singing of National Anthem—Mass in Battery Park.

The solemnity of war days was everywhere evident in New York's celebration of Memorial Day yesterday. In the first place, it was the first Memorial Day in which the memories of soldiers and sailors of the United States, who had made the supreme sacrifice in this war, were honored, for, although America was at war on Memorial Day, 1917, her armies had not then reached the battlefront. Consequently there had been no casualties. In the second place, the day was memorable, as well as pathetic, because of the greatly thinned ranks of old civil war veterans, who faced the cold winds of Riverside Drive in the parade which was the feature of the morning program.

The President's proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to make the day one of prayer for victory over the Central Powers was observed throughout the city, the culminating feature of the religious exercises being a great open-air military field mass in Battery Park, attended by more than 10,000 persons. The sermon was a patriotic plea for national unity in the great crisis, preached by Bishop Patrick J. Hayes of the Roman Catholic Diocese of New York, who is also the Chaplain Bishop of the Army and Navy of the United States.

In addition to the larger parade in Manhattan, veterans of the civil and Spanish wars and soldiers of this war marched in the other boroughs.

In the afternoon the U. S. Grant Post of Grand Army veterans, whose ranks have thinned 50 per cent. in the last five years, again had charge of the memorial exercises in front of Grant's Tomb, and here, again, the theme of the speakers, among whom was Governor Whitman, was the immensity of the struggle which the country is waging overseas. The old veterans who spoke at the exercises referred to their own struggles of sixty years ago, but in every instance they made it plain that their thoughts today were not of the sixties, but of the boys now on sea and in the trenches beyond the Atlantic.

"Great as was our day," said Commander Fenwick Y. Hedley at the Grant's Tomb exercises, "the fact remains that we are today living in the greatest generation in the history of mankind."

Crowds Assembled in Rain.

As the hour for the Riverside Drive parade drew near in the morning a cold, misty rain began falling, but even this failed to hold back the crowds who assembled along the line of march, which was from Seventy-second to Ninety-second Street. There was very little cheering as the soldiers of today and those of other days came tramping along, but there was much handclapping and handkerchief waving. The crowd had not assembled to make noise and the veterans knew the reason why and appreciated the spirit behind it.

The reviewing stand was just south of the Soldiers and Sailors' Monument. Among the reviewing officers were Brig. Gen. William A. Mann, U. S. A., commanding the Eastern Department of the Army on Governors Island; Rear Admiral Nathaniel R. Usher, Commandant of the Third Naval District; Adjt Gen. Charles H. Sherrill, Mayor Hylan, Captain John R. Coulter, U. S. A., who went to France with the Rainbow Division and was recalled to this country for special duty, and officers, past and present, of the Grand Army of the Republic and the various associations of Spanish War Veterans.

A detachment of mounted police led the parade. Behind them marched a splendid band of the regular army artillery, and then came the newly organized National Guard of New York, under command of Brig. Gen. George R. Dyer. After the guardsmen came sailors of the navy, led by the crack band of the Pelham Bay Training Station. No unit in the parade made a bigger hit than these well set up lads who are training to fight the U-boats and to man our battleships and transports. Also among the sailors in line with seamen of France and Great Britain, members of the crews of allied fighters now in American waters.

Battalion of Belgians.

No men in line received a more sincere greeting than that accorded to the men of America's two great allies, unless perhaps it was a battalion of fighters from King Albert's little Belgian Army. The Belgians have been in the Far East and are now on their way to Flanders to take their places in the front line of King Albert's hard fighting little army. The Belgians came to the city from Fort Totten, where they are temporarily quartered. Also in line and just as heartily acclaimed were a detachment of Alpine Chasseurs of France, all of them members of the unit of "Blue Devils" now in the United States.

After the fighters of today came the grizzled warriors who fought against Lee and Jackson. There were about 300 of these, who bravely made the effort to walk erect and with unfaltering step. Their passing was in the nature of a benediction. There was no applause of any kind, the thousands who lined the sidewalks baring their heads in silent tribute. Major Arthur Blum commanded and Commander Edward A. Griffiths was the chief marshal of the G. A. R. Division. At the head of this column marched the men of Lafayette Post, and after them came their sons, a majority of them in uniform and all of them members of the Lafayette Post of Sons of Veterans. Then came the Duryee Zouaves in their picturesque uniforms and turbans, and the number in line was just six.

Next were the few remaining survivors of Lloyd Aspinwall Post, and then in order appeared, and always in ranks that were thin, the old fighters of Phil Kearny Post, the old seamen gunners and gun pointers of Farragut Naval Post, the veterans of Joe Hooker Post, those of George G. Meade Post, the Sumner, the Hancock, and a score of other G. A. R. organizations, in some instances the number of veterans in line being only two or three.

The Spanish War Veterans organizations trailed the veterans of the civil war. They were commanded by Frank W. Lawless, the New York Department Commander, and in the column was represented every Spanish war post in Manhattan.

The next division was that of the Army and Navy Union, under command of Captain Alfred W. Thor, while the following and fifth division was that of the veterans of the regular army and navy, led by the men of the Nelson A. Miles Post. Many of the men in this division are also of the G. A. R.

The daughters of veterans were in the snow white of the Red Cross, and made a most pleasing picture. There was also a women's wireless squad, while the final divisions were made up of the lads from various schools and institutions.

Exercises at the Tomb.

The exercises at Grant's tomb began at 2 o'clock and were attended by a big crowd. Commander Hedley presided and made the opening address. Before the speakers there was a giant wreath which was subsequently placed at the head of the Grant sarcophagus, the flags of England, France, and the other Allies being entwined with the Stars and Stripes in the leaves of the wreath.

The exercises opened with the singing of "Nearer, my God, to Thee," after which Commander Fenwick spoke to his comrades of nearly sixty years ago. He referred many times to the great struggle now being fought in Europe, a war, he added, that must and would be fought to a finish no matter what the sacrifices the winning of a decisive victory might entail.

"As we look at you veterans of the Grand Army," said Governor Whitman, "we realize that all we are fighting for over there, and for the winning of which we are sending our sons and brothers across the seas, is due to the struggle once waged by you and your comrades, for we would not have the things we are fighting for today had it not been for you. Never since the organization of the Grand Army of the Republic have you met at the tomb of your great commander under conditions such as exist today, and never before has the Grand Army exercised a greater or more needed influence than it does at this hour.

"You did not fight for the brutality of the thing in the sixties, and I know there is no brutality in the hearts of our brave American boys who are abroad or soon to go. They are not being sent merely for the sake of being soldiers to fight for military dominence. You never did and they never will.

"The exercise at the Sailors and Soldiers' Monument were of an impressive nature. Commander George Blair of Farragut Post was the speaker.

"We rejoice today," he said, "as we did in the sixties that we have the leaders to conduct the great war which we are now waging. We rejoiced sixty years ago to know that this country was able to raise an army of 2,500,000 men, and we rejoice today to see that we are again able to raise an army of a size, no matter how great, and that when the time comes we can get every one of those men across the sea and to the battlefront.

"When President Wilson told Congress he could no longer deal with the insolent German Government and when Congress declared war and told the President to take full charge, we knew then, and we know now, that this country stands worthily behind our great President and that the ultimate result—we veterans have never for a moment doubted it—will be a triumphant victory for our cause.

"We Shall Find a Grant."

"We know that we shall find a Grant who will fight it out with the unspeakable German Empire and fight it to a successful conclusion, even though it takes twenty years to do it, and we know that a Farragut will arise when the occasion for a Farragut comes. Our Americans, have a way of fighting to a finish, and that's the way they are going into this struggle, and when the final hour comes, our commander, whoever he may be, will, when the Kaiser asks our terms, respond as did Grant, 'Unconditional surrender.'"

The third annual Maine monument memorial service was held at Columbus Circle, Fifty-ninth Street and Broadway, under the auspices of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States. Commander Bernhardt Wall was master of ceremonies.

The Parade to the monument began at the 71st Regiment Armory, and was up Fifth Avenue, crossing to Fifty-ninth Street to Columbus Circle. Three detachments of sailors and marines from British and French battleships acted as a guard of honor.

The statue of Joan of Arc on Riverside Drive, near Ninety-third Street, was covered with a mantle of flowers, placed by hundreds of children from the West Ninety-third Street School and the United French Societies of New York. A large wreath encircling the head of her horse was inscribed:

"From the children of the West Ninety-third Street school."

The floral mantle which covered the lawn around the statue grew to such an extent it nearly obscured the monument. In the morning the school children marched up the Drive, and as they filed past the statue they adorned it with flowers they carried. Mme. Carle Polifeme of the Société des Femmes de France was in charge.

The Parade in the Bronx.

Thirty-six veterans of the civil war led the annual Bronx parade. The veterans, all that remain in the Bronx, rode in open carriages. The parade started at 11 o'clock at 134th Street and Alexander Avenue, marching north through Courtlandt Avenue to Washington Avenue, to the official stand at McKinley Square at 169th Street and Boston Road, where they were reviewed by President Henry Bruckner, County Clerk Joseph M. Callahan, Register Edward Polak, and Dr. Arthur J. O'Leary, Sanitary Superintendent of the Bronx Board of Health.

Others in the line of march were the 2d Field Artillery of the Bronx, in command of Captain Herbert Dienst, with twelve machine guns, 120 armored motor cycles, and six trailers, which are also armored. Next in line were a detachment of Pelham Bay naval recruits led by their goat mascot and a band, members of the 8th Coast Defense command, followed by the veteran firemen, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, and other similar organizations.

Four companies of the new fifteenth negro New York Guard were reviewed by the organizers of the new and old regiments, the latter being in France now, at 138th Street and Seventh Avenue. Their line of march led through sections principally populated by negroes, starting from 135th Street and Lenox Avenue to 137th Street west to Seventh Avenue, south to 135th Street, east on that thoroughfare to Fifth Avenue, south to 131st Street, and back to the armory at 131st Street and Lenox Avenue.

A memorial service was held at the Hebrew Education Alliance, Jefferson Street and East Broadway, by the People's Synagogue of that institution. A choir of 1,500 child voices sung responsively to the cantor, Dr. Nathan Abramson. Rabbi Jacob Tarlau officiated. The memorial address was delivered by Samuel Strauss, a Trustee of the alliance.

Memorial prayer was chanted by Rabbi Tarlau, with responses by the choir. The service closed with the rendering of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

During the day Grand Army men and their friends visited the various city cemeteries and decorated with American and allied flags the graves of illustrious dead. Among the graves decorated were those of Captain Lawrence, Alexander Hamilton, Albert Gallatin, and Marinius Willetta, in old Trinity churchyard.

Services in Carnegie Hall.

Memorial exercises under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic were held in Carnegie Hall last night. Governor Whitman, who presided, was the only speaker. Music was furnished by the 69th Regiment band, and a long program of patriotic songs was given. In the course of the brief speech Governor Whitman said that by Jan. 1 of next year New York State would have more than 300,000 men in the fighting service of the United States. In the civil war, with a population of about 4,000,000, he said the State gave to the Union 400,000 soldiers, and if the proportion, with the population now more than 10,000,000, was maintained, the State would probably furnish more than 1,000,000 soldiers for service overseas in the present war.

Among those on the stage with the Governor were Rear Admiral Usher, William F. Kitchener, Commander of the G. A. R. in New York; Henry Clews, and Police Commissioner Enright. The soloists included Philip Spooner, Raymond Shaw, William Bartels, Henry W. Niles, Mrs. Jessica Ferguson, Mrs. Winifred Gray Gracie, and Frank Hammond.

OPEN-AIR MASS FOR OUR DEAD IN FRANCE

Soldiers of the Allies Join in Great Religious Service in Battery Park.

A great throng attended the solemn field military mass at the Battery yesterday morning for the soldiers and sailors of the United States and the Allies who have given their lives in the European war. The field mass has been a feature of the Sunday before Memorial Day at the Navy Yard in Brooklyn for years, but yesterday was the first occasion when it has been sung in Manhattan. The chancel was built within the little circular summer house which stands in the centre of Battery Park. The roof and columns of the house were decorated with the American colors, while from the cornices fluttered the flags of England, France, Belgium and Italy.

A cold biting wind swept in from the bay during the mass but it did not affect the solemnity of the occasion. The Rev. Father George J. Waring, one of the veteran chaplains of the Regular Army, who first suggested that a great field mass should be sung on the Battery for the repose of the souls of the allied soldier and sailor dead, was the celebrant. Chaplain Duffy of the United States Navy was the Deacon; the Rev. Father Anthony J. Grogan of the Knights of Columbus, the Sub-Deacon, and the Rev. Father Michael J. Henry of the Mission of Our Lady of the Rosary the Master of Ceremonies. The Rt. Rev. Patrick J. Hayes, a Chaplain Bishop of the Army and Navy of the United States, delivered the sermon.

By 9 o'clock, an hour and a half before the mass, Battery Park was packed with men, women, and children, who had come from all parts of the city, and from points in New Jersey and Connecticut, to take part in the service. Here and there in the crowd were little groups of fighting men, about evenly divided between the land and sea forces. The sailors represented America, England, and France, while among the men in uniform were men of all the American land fighting services, Canadians, Anzacs, and here and there the blue-clad Alpine Chasseurs of France.

Cardinal Farley had intended to be present, but because of the weather he found it impossible to attend. Among the visiting clergy was the Right Rev. Michael J. Curley, Bishop of Florida, while the laymen present included Rear Admiral J. E. McDonald, U. S. N.; Colonel Orin B. Mitcham, U. S. A.; C. Clive Bayley, the British Consul General; Lieutenant the Marquis Ugo Spinola of the Italian Army; Supreme Court Justice Morgan J. O'Brien; John J. Agar, President of the Cathedral Club; Countess Leary, and Charles E. Alexander.

Soldiers Escort Priests.

The officiating priests were escorted from the Mission of Our Lady of the Rosary, in State Street, by a detachment of regulars from Governors Island and a squad of sailors from the Navy Yard. When the priests had ascended into the flower decked Summer house, where had been erected the beautiful snow-white altar, the honor guard of soldiers and sailors formed in a circle in front of the altar, remaining at attention throughout the ceremony.

In the course of his sermon Bishop Hayes, referring to President Wilson's proclamation in which he made Memorial Day also a day of prayer for allied victory, said that "God inspired our noble President to issue his proclamation to have this day also one of prayer."

"It is in keeping with an ancient custom," he added, "and also in compliance with the official request of the President of the United States, whom I pray God may preserve and keep safe for many a day, that we have come from our homes today in order that we may lift up our hearts to God, beseech God and pray Him to give strength to our soldiers and sailors who are today fighting for our country.

"At this altar with us today is good Father Waring, a soldier priest, who with other ministers of the army and navy lifts his voice to our eternal Father, who is the source of mercy, comfort, and strength to our boys and to the cause of liberty and humanity which they represent.

"America is only stirring. She is not yet moving. She has not yet got her stride. There are in the United States [illegible] people who are sworn to all that is noble, to all that is godly, and to all that is uplifting in mankind. Consequently we are today taking account of the present and looking back into the past. And then just peering into the future with the confidence that the God of the world, that the God of America, that the God of justice and right will stand by our fatherland, our homeland.

"Therefore today we kneel before this altar here erected in this spot and raise our voices to heaven and to God to send His blessing down upon us and to preserve the President of the United States; to bless also our Congress, our soldier boys and our sailor lads."

At the elevation of the Host the flag was dipped, the soldiers presented arms, the drums rolled, and the bugles sounded. Following Bishop Hayes's sermon the altar ceremony was hallowed by the band played "America." At the end of the mass Miss Margaret Keyes of the Chicago Grand Opera led in the singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Special Services in Churches.

In answer to President Wilson's proclamation of May 11, designating Memorial Day as a day of "public humiliation, fasting, and prayer," solemn services were held in New York churches yesterday. Edifices were thronged, many packed to the doors, and the worshippers heard prayers for the hastening of victory and an enduring peace.

In Grace Church, Broadway and Tenth Street, the Rev. Dr. Charles Lewis Slattery delivered the sermon at the morning service, followed by Holy Communion. Dr. Slattery read the President's proclamation and used the document as a text for his remarks, in the course of which he paid high tribute to Mr. Wilson. "All peace orators have asserted that the United States and the Allies have no sins, added Dr. Slattery, notwithstanding this, the President has asked us to pray for our sins.

"He knows that the world has to have a sharp bringing up," he continued. "We are going to drop the things that don't belong to us and strip ourselves as a battleship ready for action, to fight for things that belong to eternal life. Then the President asks us to pray for victory. I would rather be defeated in a just cause than have victory when the cause is unjust. We are fighting for the oppressed in all the earth, and may face God unafraid. We can openly and clearly pray for victory. The President asks us to pray for the allied rulers, and he also asks us to pray for our enemies for the latter, by some miracle might drop their hideous task."

Sing National Anthem in Trinity.

The Rev. Dr. W. T. Manning at Trinity Church also read the President's proclamation. The singing of "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "America" were included in the service.

"Not many words are needed in answer to the President's summons," asserted Dr. Manning. "Our hearts are filled to overflowing with the prayer to which it calls. Recalling the heroic deeds and heroic men of the past, we reconsecrate ourselves before the altar of God to the mighty task of the present hour, the most tremendous, most terrible, and most critical the world has ever seen.

"We must send up from here our united prayer to the throne of God for those who are fighting in our forces and those of our allies; for all who are now training or who shall be called to their places in the ranks beneath the flag; for all who in any manner are giving their loyal service in this cause both at home and abroad—for those boys, especially those of our own men and our allies who at this moment are meeting the onset of this battle across the sea. We pray that God will give them victory, give them the strength to hold and drive back the murderous invader.

"We pray for all the wounded and suffering, and ask that they be given courage and comfort and healing. We pray for the heroic dead, who have gladly given their lives in this holy cause. May they ever be remembered with gratitude! May their sacrifice ever be held in honor and their names placed among the brave and true who answered the call even unto death and went with smiling faces. May the light of peace and grace be theirs forever!"

Prayers for Boys at the Front.

At the close of a high mass, held in St. Andrew's Church, in Duane Street, for the repose of the souls of soldiers who have died in France, for the welfare of those already overseas or going to France, Mgr. Luke J. Evers, the rector, removed his vestments and called on the congregation to rise and sing "The Star-Spangled Banner."

"Dearly beloved, I have said the mass and it is over, but now I speak to you as a priest without his vestments on," said Mgr. Evers. "I ask the congregation to rise and sing the grand old national hymn, 'The Star-Spangled Banner' while I kneel before the altar, praying for the souls of those of our boys who have given up their lives in the fight for freedom, and for those who are going to the front today, tomorrow, and later on."

In the centre aisle of St. Andrew's was a catafalque draped in black, over which was a silken American flag. On each side of the catafalque were six candles, conforming to Catholic Church rubrix. The church was filled with old members of the congregation, many of whom had sons on the firing line.

"As you gaze at this catafalque," said Mgr. Evers, "do not let it depress you. It is simply a symbol of what in the end comes to all. But we are prepared for death. The right-living man and woman, the God-fearing man or woman has nothing to fear in death. Our boys over there are not afraid of death. They are fighting for the liberty of the world; their fighting is noble; it is honest. They are fighting for God and for mankind. The feast day today, 'The Body and Blood of Christ,' is exemplified in our boys going to the front ready to give up their bodies and their blood. May they come back and swing up Broadway bringing back victory for America, victory for honor, for decency, and for the freedom of the whole world! May God bless our cause!"

TWO PARADES IN BROOKLYN.

Fighters in This War March with G. A. R. Veterans.

Notwithstanding a drizzling rain, Brooklynites yesterday turned out in great numbers to witness the big parade along Bedford Avenue and Eastern Parkway, which for many years has been the principal feature of the Memorial Day observances in the borough across the river. This year the plaudits of the multitude were given unstintedly not only to the veterans of the civil and Spanish-American wars, but to the sturdy members of the army and navy who are now taking an active part in the present struggle for civilisation and democracy.

Governor Charles S. Whitman was the principal reviewing officer. With Mrs. Whitman he went directly to the reviewing stand on Eastern Parkway, a short distance from the Soldiers and Sailors' Arch. Mayor John F. Hylan arrived at the stand a few minutes after the Governor. In the party at the stand were Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, Borough President Edward Riegelmann, ex-Mayor Ardolph L. Kline, Brevet Major Gen. James A. McLeer, Supreme Court Justice Edward Lazansky, and Postmaster Walter C. Burton.

Before the parade a reception was given at the Hanover Club to the Grand Marshal, George O. Jenney. Christopher C. Mollenhauer, President of the club, presided, and in a short address paid a tribute of respect to the boys engaged in the present world struggle. The parade consisted of seven divisions, and started at Bedford Avenue and South Eighth Street. The first division was composed of United States soldiers, sailors, and marines. After them came the members of the State Guard of New York, headed by Brig. Gen. James Rohl. In the third division were the members of the G. A. R. posts of Brooklyn. Next in line were the veterans of the Spanish war and the navy section of the Spanish-American war.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States and the Sons of Veterans followed along. The police reserves, Boy Scouts, and children from the parochial schools also took part.

The same kind of a crowd displaying the same patriotic feeling witnessed a large parade on Bushwick Avenue. The parade started at Bushwick Avenue and Myrtle Street and concluded at the National Cemetery on Jamaica Avenue. This was conducted by the Citizens' Memorial Day Committee, with the cooperation of the L. M. Hamilton Post, 132, G. A. R., and the Mayor's Committee on National Defense.

On the grounds of the Church of Our Lady of Angels, Fourth Avenue and Seventy-fourth Street, Bay Ridge, a large American flag was raised, with music and addresses by Senator Calder, Congressman Cleary, and Borough President Riegelmann. The flag was blessed by the rector, Rev. Matthew J. Flynn.

BIG CELEBRATIONS IN SUBURBS

Gov. Edge Speaks at Morristown, N. J.—10,000 Parade in Queens.

Suburban New York yesterday emulated the metropolis in adding fervor to the observance of Memorial day. Towns, cities, and hamlets which last year were content with church exercises, yesterday held big parades, flag raisings, or organized church observances on a large scale. At Morristown, N. J., Governor Edge, addressing 10,000 persons at the Whippany River Club, urged that our soldiers be supported through thick and thin.

The Governor also participated in Paterson's observances, reviewing a parade of 12,000 men. He later delivered an address in the Paterson High School, in which he alluded to the "undying spirit of the men of the Civil War," and declared that such a spirit would win the present war.

The parade at Bayonne, led by Grand Marshal Alexander S. Lawson, was declared to be the greatest the city has ever had. Close to 15,000 were in line, among the marchers being fifty mothers whose sons are in service, Red Cross nurses, and detachments from Camp Dix.

More than 20,000 persons witnessed the raising of Hoboken's service flag at Elysian Park, the city's highest point. The flag bore 1,760 stars, two of them of gold for Hoboken soldiers who have been killed at the front. Preceding the flag raising 10,000 persons marched through the city.

There were more than 10,000 in line in the parade of Jackson Heights, Richmond Hill, and Jamaica yesterday. In all, eight divisions marched, including a battalion of naval infantry and artillery from U. S. Naval Base Section No. 6. The parade's Grand Marshal was John H. Hilliker, G. A. R., while George A. De Vestern, Sons of Veterans, acted as Chief of Staff. The procession was reviewed by Major Richard A. Pickering, U. S. A., the Camp Mills, and Supreme Court Justice James Van Siclen.

Newark's parade numbered 5,000 and the line of march was from Military Park to Lincoln Park, the route being lined by one of the largest crowds that has turned out in the city's history. The reviewing stand was at City Hall, and the reviewing officials included Mayor C. P. Gillen and army officers from Camp Dix.

Parades, in which the place of honor went to mothers with sons in the service, also were held in Freeport and Flushing, L. I.

MASS AT THE MADELEINE

Cardinal Archbishop of Paris Praises Wilson in Address to Knights of Columbus.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 30.—(Associated Press.)—From Flanders to Switzerland and from the battleline to the sea, the American Expeditionary Forces today are paying homage to their dead. Wherever American flags are flying they are at half-staff, and before the day is over the Stars and Stripes and flowers will be placed on virtually every American grave.

At some points the ceremony took place early in the morning, while other exercises were at various times throughout the day. Daylight saw some graves decorated.

At one place in the vicinity of Luneville the graves had been decorated in the morning darkness when the enemy could not see clearly, for the soldiers performing this duty might have drawn the German fire, as did the burial party. Here both the American and French flags were placed on the mounds with bunches of wild flowers—great blood-red poppies and yellow and white daisies.

Another early ceremony took place at one of the largest of the base hospitals, where the nurses and some of the less seriously wounded men visited the graves and covered every mound with a flag and crowned each with wreaths. The last resting places of American women who died in the service of their country as nurses were honored equally with those of the soldiers who had fallen in the line of duty.

Up close to the American lines northwest of Toul khaki-clad soldiers, with the dirt of the trenches still clinging to them, lined up before the graves of fallen comrades and participated in services in honor of the dead.

On the hillside between Nancy and Luneville, where the first Americans killed in the war are buried in a little inclosed plot in the Franco-American cemetery, the ceremony was also held at an early hour. Here the graves were smothered under heaps of flowers and wreaths brought by the French population of the surrounding country. Many of these tributes were in place long before the services started, having been brought to the cemetery and laid on the graves the previous evening.

From the sky men of the American flying forces swooped down and scattered flowers over the spot where Major Lufbery and other American heroes of the air lie buried.

Cardinal Conducts Paris Services.

PARIS, May 30.—Cardinal Amette, Archbishop of Paris, took part in the Memorial Day services at the Madeleine arranged by the Knight of Columbus for the special benefit of American soldiers and sailors. The Cardinal at the conclusion of mass, sprinkled the altar rendered to France by President Wilson, and then delivered the allocution and prayer.

The great church was thronged long before the ceremony began at 10 o'clock. One-half of the edifice was solidly packed with American uniformed men. Virtually the entire American diplomatic and Consular Corps, led respectively by Ambassador Sharp and Consul General Thackara, were present.

Mass was said by the Bishop of Verdun. Then followed music from the Madeleine's wonderful organ, with a special organist for the occasion, and two bands from the French and American forces playing American and French patriotic hymns. The congregation was addressed by a Knights of Columbus speaker, who eulogized Joan of Arc.

Memorial Day observances in France were not confined to Paris. A solemn service in honor of the American soldiers and sailors who have died for their country in the present war was held in the American Church at Nice today. The impressive ceremony was attended by the American Consul and his consular staff and representatives of the French civil and military authorities.

Memorial Day services held in the American Trinity Church today were participated in by the Anglican, Greek, Armenian, and American Protestant Episcopal dignitaries in the presence of William Graves Sharp, the American Ambassador; the Earl of Derby, the British Ambassador; Etienne Clementel, Minister of Commerce; Stephen Pichon, Foreign Minister, and other high governmental and diplomatic officials.

General Tasker H. Bliss represented the United States Army, and Captain Jackson the Navy. Colonel Vallière was present as the representative of President Poincaré.

Decorate Sailors' Graves in Britain.

LONDON, May 30.—The graves of American soldiers and sailors who met death at sea, in the air, or from natural causes, which are now scattered over England, Scotland, Ireland, and Wales, were decorated today by representatives of the American Red Cross and the Young Men's Christian Association. These organizations announced that not one grave, however remote, had been overlooked.

Memorial Day exercises also were held, being attended by large numbers of Americans. At the largest rest camp in England, for instance, the Rev. Joseph M. Gray of Kansas City addressed the soldiers. At Liverpool the Lord Mayor presided at an elaborate joint service. In London Princess Patricia, Vice Admiral Sims, and Major Gen. Biddle attended a baseball game played by American soldiers and sailors for the benefit of charity. Lincoln's Gettysburg address was read at the American Women's Club. Services were held at the American Officers' Club and at other American centres.

Honors for Lusitania Dead.

QUEENSTOWN, May 30.—Memorial Day was observed here by the decoration of the graves of the victims of the Lusitania buried in this vicinity. A detachment of American troops and members of the American Consular staff participated in the ceremony. The detachment, numbering 100 men and officers, marched to Queenstown Cemetery, where the impressive services were held.

Besides Charles M. Hathaway, Jr., the American Consul, and Harry T. Sherman, the Vice Consul, there were present the Chairman and clerk of the City Council and other prominent townspeople.

SOLEMNITY THROUGHOUT LAND

President's Call for Prayer Observed Everywhere on Memorial Day.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The American people today paid homage to the memory of the nation's defenders who have fallen in battle and prayed for the success of those who are fighting overseas.

Added solemnity was given to this Memorial Day by the great battle raging in France, where American soldiers are standing with the allied troops abreast the charging German armies. For the ultimate victory of these Americans and the thousands who are to follow them President Wilson, in response to a resolution by Congress, had asked the people to make of Memorial Day a day of fasting and supplication.

The President and Mrs. Wilson attended services this morning at the Central Presbyterian Church and in the afternoon went to Arlington National Cemetery, where memorial exercises were held by the Grand Army of the Republic. The Presidential party was escorted through the grounds to the speaker's stand by a troop of cavalry and a company of engineers. Secretary Baker occupied a seat on the stand.

Senator Curtis of Kansas delivered the oration.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 30.—Prayers for victory for American arms in the world conflict, services in honor of the nation's soldier and sailor dead, and exercises of a patriotic character marked the observance of Memorial Day throughout New York State today. To a greater extent than in any previous year the day was observed as a holy day rather than a holiday.

Parades were held in Albany, Syracuse, Rochester, Watertown, Cortland, Geneva, Middletown, Schenectady, Troy, Utica, and Auburn.

AYER, Mass., May 30.—The 76th Division, National Army, at Camp Devens, paid homage to the flag today. With the national and regimental colors and many guidons flying 25,000 uniformed men marched to the main parade field and formed an immense hollow square with the colors in the centre. At the word of command every soldier came to present arms, and the 301st Infantry Band struck up "The Star-Spangled Banner."

BOSTON, May 30.—New England cities and towns observed Memorial Day with particular recognition of the meaning of the day as set forth in President Wilson's proclamation. The exercises had an added touch of solemnity because of the many thousand New Englanders in active service with the fighting forces.

Seventy Harvard men who have been killed in the war in the service of various nations were honored when the Harvard Memorial Society presented to the University a panel bearing their names and service records.

CHICAGO, May 30.—The daily casualty lists from France, and here and there a service star that has been changed to gold, gave a significance to the observance of Memorial Day this year that has not been known to the present generation.

In the valleys of the Ohio, the Mississippi, and the Missouri, a more martial spirit and a greater reverence were apparent in services and demonstrations.

There were probably fewer sporting and athletic events than in other years, but greater attendance at churches and larger crowds at the cemeteries.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 30.—The observance of Memorial Day here was marked by special religious services held by all denominations, in response to the President's proclamation. A military mass was celebrated at St. Joseph's Passionist Monastery.

At Camp Meade religious services were a part of the day's observance.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 30.—Memorial Day here was largely given over to prayer, special services being held in the churches in compliance with President Wilson's proclamation.

In its tribute to the dead the city suspended all business for two minutes, from 11 o'clock until 11:02. Impelled by common impulse crowds halted in the street, stood bareheaded and in mediation. All street car service stopped during the period.

Besides the cessation of all business in the two-minute period, flags were at half-mast and a "five minutes for memories" was observed at midday.

At Gettysburg soldiers of three wars participated in the day's ceremonies.

WALLINGFORD, Conn., May 30.—As a tribute to the memory of Major Raoul Lufbery, the American aviator recently killed on the western front, this, his home town, held a service today.

The Rev. Arthur P. Greenleaf, rector of the Episcopal Church, presided as representative of all the clergy. Governor Marcus H. Holcomb sent a letter, in which he referred to both Major Lufbery and Lieutenant James Palache of Farmington, who also died in action.

On the platform were Edward Lufbery, the father, and two sisters and a brother of Major Lufbery.

RICHMOND, Va., May 30.—National Memorial Day was generally observed over the South today for the first time. In response to President Wilson's proclamation calling on the people of the nation to make the day one of supplication and prayer for the success of American arms, business in all Southern States was suspended at least part of the day and special services were held in most churches.

In this city veterans of the Union and Confederate armies joined in decorating the graves of blue and gray soldiers who fell on battlefields around the old capital of the Confederacy. These exercises followed a parade through the city to Hollywood Cemetery, where 18,000 Confederate dead are buried.

WANTS NO PEACE ON POINTS

Roosevelt Reiterates That War Must End in a Knockout.

DETROIT, Mich., May 30.—"America does not want to win this war on points, we want a knockout."

In these words Colonel Roosevelt, making a Memorial Day address here tonight, summarized his conception of this country's war aims.

"If we don't carry it through now," he declared, "we will be forced to fight it out here later, and without allies. If our people had been as awake fourteen months ago as they are now there would be one million fighting men on the fighting front with all needed equipment, and there would not be the slightest danger of Germany's push succeeding."

Colonel Roosevelt repeated his previous declaration that there must be only one language, "and that the language of the Declaration of Independence."

CHURCH'S GOLDEN JUBILEE.

Holy Name of Jesus Edifice Is Consecrated Also.

Impressive services followed the consecration yesterday of the Church of the Holy Name of Jesus, Amsterdam Avenue and Ninety-sixth Street. The consecration, which marks the clearing of all debt on the church was held privately at 7 o'clock yesterday morning, the Rt. Rev. Patrick J. Hayes, Auxiliary Bishop of the Archdiocese of New York, officiating. Cardinal Farley attended a pontifical mass at 11 o'clock, celebrated by the Rt. Rev. W. T. Russell of Charleston, S. C. The consecration sermon was preached by Mgr. Joseph F. Mooney, the Vicar-General, and the Rev. James Curry, pastor of the Church of the Holy Name, reviewed the fifty years of the church's history.

"It is a great day on which we are engaged in completing the work of fifty years," said Mgr. Mooney. "The eloquent message of the Chief Executive of our country in setting apart this day as a day of worship has given expression to the thoughts in which we may gain inspiration as we complete this structure. It is a structure to the honor and glory of God and to the supremacy of God in our nation."

The consecration ceremony opened the jubilee of the church, to be continued throughout a week with entertainments and social affairs each night. The streets near the church were decorated in honor of the jubilee and bore a holiday air yesterday. The jubilee will close on next Friday night with a reception by the Parochial Club in Palm Garden, Lexington Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street. On next Wednesday a parade will be held, with a line of march confined to the parish.

"Red"—He Wears His Knees and Elbows Through

"That boy should wear cast iron clothes." You have said it yourself, time and again, when he wore his clothes out faster than you could buy them. We put "cast iron" fabrics into the togs for fellows who sit on the pavement to play marbles, climb every fence and lamp post in sight, and favor knee crawling as a favorite means of locomotion.

—Suits that stay between his knees and the pavement even when they try to come in contact.

—Shirts that hang on to his elbows, even when he rubs the school desk hard.

—Ties that will stand a lot of rough treatment.

JAPAN WOULD LIKE TO INTERVENE ALONE

Baron Goto Says Unified Homogeneous Army Is Essential to Success in Siberia.

BUT WILL ACT WITH ALLIES

Admits Britain Is Factor in Bringing United States and His Country Closer Together.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 30.—The Daily Mail's special correspondent in Tokio telegraphs an interview he had with Baron Goto, the Japanese Foreign Minister. Questioned as to the present diplomatic position of intervention in the Siberian question, Goto replied that neither Japan nor the Allies had yet made any definite proposal for action in Siberia. If such a proposal was received in Tokio, it would be sympathetically considered.

"The proposal," he said, "may be such as Japan ought to accept without further consideration, in which case there will be prompt acceptance. Alternatively, the proposal may demand further consideration, in which case there will be delay in the decision. The Allies need fear no flat refusal or other than willingness to help the allied cause. I make this reservation: Our navy is guarding the Indian and Pacific oceans and helping in the Mediterranean. If we make a venturesome advance in Siberia and have to call away part of our navy, a gap may be created which Germany might take advantage of."

The correspondent then said:

"A number of people think Japan is opposed to allied, as distinct from Japanese, intervention, and accuse you of interested and sordid motives."

Goto replied:

"I should be sorry if any misunderstanding prevailed on this point. Certainly we believe a unified homogeneous army is essential to the success of the expedition. Therefore we deem it better to have it confined to one nationality instead of to several. But we have never raised serious objection to allied participation, and, as I have already said, any suggestion by the Allies will be sympathetically considered. • • • There is the consideration of national pride. If the allied powers desire that Japan shall do her best it will be well to leave her alone to compose the expedition."

Asked what compensation Japan would demand for intervention Goto said:

"That depends on the varying circumstances, the size of the army, the breadth of the theatre of operations, whether the action is independent or co-operative, and whether intervention is judged to be entirely necessary in Japan's defense."

The correspondent said he presumed Britain was instrumental in creating cordial relations between America and Japan. Goto replied:

"You are right. Great Britain is a factor in bringing America and Japan into closer and more cordial terms. As in the case of Russia and Japan, these good offices are being continued on all sides with the object of strengthening the intimacy and fellowship of the Allies."

The correspondent next asked if Japan had any ground for complaint against the Allies, and received the answer:

"Of course you have heard differences of opinion regarding exports of steel from America to Japan, but these differences never amounted to much, and the whole question has been treated in good spirit by both nations. I think the United States is as satisfied with the result of the negotiations as Japan. Now we have no cause of complaint."

The correspondent said he found it difficult to reconcile the German morale of the Japanese Army and the Germanized character of Japanese culture with the universality of the English language in Japan, and asked for an explanation. Goto replied:

"The condition you depict does exist. In Japan you have German-like soldiers, side by side with an English-speaking population. If I may be allowed to say so, that is a beautiful part of our national character. Japan absorbs civilization from every country, but whether one studies in England or Germany, it is always with us from the point of view of the Japanese people. So these soldiers, who look so German to you, have in reality entirely Japanese minds. So also the people whom you heard speaking English are yet Japanese in thought. In other words, it is a borrowed civilization. To borrow beautiful things is but to round off our own character, not to displace it. I stayed in Germany for many years. I studied there, and people may think me pro-German. I am not pro-German at all. I am not anti-English. I am quite Japanese, sharing the national views regarding our international relationships."

The correspondent remarked:

"I do not follow you when you say you are not anti-English."

Goto replied:

"I should expect that answer. What I want to say is that I am not one-sided. I am very impartial; but when it comes to choose between an enemy and an ally—I cannot be pro-German, because Germany is our enemy; and toward a friend I cannot be unfriendly. As to 'anti-English,' what I wish to convey is that, above all, I am Japanese, but at this juncture, when we are fighting an enemy, how can I be indifferent to the allied powers? Please understand me correctly."

Other questions and answers were as follows.

Question—Have the Allies ever asked you to send forces to the west?

Answer—No.

Question—How long do you think the war will last?

Answer—At the beginning, I imagined disease and famine would bring a quick decision, but sanitation and army feeding are so wonderfully efficient that now I believe that unless the notion of ending the war in this way should be agreeable to the superhuman power the conflict will not end in the near future. It may last very long.

Question—However long, you have no doubt of allied victory?

Answer—Of course not; but you must not be in a hurry. People generally are too much in a hurry.

When asked if he believed in the permanency of the Anglo-Japanese alliance Goto replied that he regarded it as a meaningless question, and added:

"If the whole world changed, if the sun were to rise in the West, then anything might happen."

BOLSHEVIKI MAKE DEMAND ON CHINA

Want Semenoff Barred from Manchuria or Leave for Soviet Troops to Cross Border.

AMERICA DENIES CHARGES

Ambassador Francis Publishes Lansing's Statement Explaining Attitude of This Country to Russia.

MOSCOW, May 26, (Associated Press.)—Foreign Minister Tchitcherin has sent another protest to China, charging the Chinese government with officially protecting General Semenoff, the anti-Bolshevist leader in Siberia, in his activities against the Soviet power. The note requests that China either prevent General Semenoff from using Manchuria as a base for his operations, or to permit Soviet troops to cross into Chinese territory and quell General Semenoff, if China considers herself too weak to do so.

Russia, the Foreign Minister's communication states, has determined once for all to end the unendurable situation on the Manchurian border. Friendliness to China, however, is expressed in the note, which states that Russia makes this "urgent friendly request."

VOLOGDA, Russia, May 25, (Associated Press.)—Ambassador Francis has made public a statement from Secretary Lansing denying that American Consuls aided General Semenoff, anti-Bolshevist leader in Siberia, or others who are seeking to bring about a counter-revolution in Siberia. The statement says the American Government has received appeals from several groups in Siberia, but has ignored them. Specifically, the United States refused a request by General Semenoff for assistance from American engineers, and instructed the engineers not to aid the General or to assist in any civil war movement.

The statement declares the friendly attitude of the United States toward Russia has not changed, and has not been affected by the withdrawal of diplomatic courtesies. (This apparently refers to Russia's refusal to transmit code messages between the American Embassy and American Consulates in Siberia.) In his communication to the Ambassador Mr. Lansing says further:

"The Department desires you to reflect the friendly purposes of the United States toward Russia, which will remain unaltered so long as Russia does not willingly accept autocratic domination by the Central Powers."

Mr. Lansing's communication was in reply to the charge of the Russian Foreign Office that the American Consult at Vladivostok had assisted anti-Bolshevist movements in Siberia. Mr. Francis made a denial of the charge last month, and announcement was made at Washington on May 9 that Mr. Lansing had instructed the Ambassador to inform the Bolshevist Government that there was no basis for the charge.

The demands presented by the Bolshevist Foreign Office to Mr. Francis included removal of John Caldwell, American Consul at Vladivostok, and definition of the attitude of the United States toward the Bolshevist Government.

TWO AIR VICTORIES ON TOUL FRONT

But One American, Forced Down in No Man's Land, Is Captured.

OUR "FLYING CIRCUS" WON

Team Work of Four Pilots Fatal to a German Observer, Who Fell Firing.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 30, (Associated Press.)—An American aviator was captured by the Germans today after his machine had fallen into No Man's Land. The fight in which the American's machine was damaged took place when five American pursuit machines engaged with a German aerial squadron while protecting a party of British bombers who were returning from a raid early this morning. Two of the enemy machines were shot down and another was forced to land out of control.

The American's airplane came down between the lines. He was immediately covered by German riflemen and ordered to walk into the enemy trenches, which he did with his hands above his head.

The sun had hardly reached the horizon, on this cloudless, windless day, when large numbers of enemy airplanes made their appearance. The American aviators took the air, one after another, as the Germans came into sight.

Within fifteen minutes four battles were fought over No Man's Land.

Exploit of our "Flying Circus."

May 29.—Confirmation has been received that the German airplane brought down in flames on Monday near St. Mihiel was a victim of four American airmen working together as a "flying circus."

The American "circus" was composed of Lieutenants George F. Fisher of Chicago, Edward Curtis of Rochester, Edward Buford of Nashville, and Alexander McLanahan of Philadelphia.

Because of the nature of the fight it is impossible to credit any one aviator with the victory. Lieutenant Fisher, however, got in the finishing stroke, firing the last shots at the German before his machine broke into flames and following down the flaming plane for as long a time as was possible.

The observer in the German machine, although plunging to certain death, kept his gun working amid the flaming swirl as he fell, training it first on one American machine and then on another.

Campbell Saved a British Comrade.

Lieutenant Douglas Campbell of California rescued a crippled British bombing machine from two German airplanes which attacked it near the Toul sector today.

Two patrols of American pursuit airplanes had gone out to protect a large squadron of British bombing machines returning from a raid into Germany. Just before they all crossed behind the American line, one of the British machines became separated from the party and was attacked by two German Albatross machines. The British observer had been wounded by the machine-gun fire of the Germans, who were about to finish him when Lieutenant Campbell dashed in. He emptied his machine gun at the German machines, and the enemy replied, but Campbell's fire became so hot for the Germans that they withdrew. The Lieutenant then escorted the British machine to safety behind the American lines.

After seeing the crippled British bomber alight safely on its own field, Lieutenant Campbell circled around once, waved his hand over the side of his airplane and soared into the clouds and disappeared.

The pilot was helped out of his machine and his wound was dressed. Then he went to the telephone and called up the American aviation field. He got Lieutenant Campbell on the wire and thanked the American profusely for saving his life.

Hospitals Deliberately Bombed.

The German air attack of Tuesday night on American hospitals in a town many miles behind the front was carried out with the utmost apparent deliberation. The enemy airmen used umbrella flares to aid them in picking out their targets. Their bombs also started a fire in a garage which lighted up the neighborhood, in which is located one of the four finest cathedrals in France, built in the twelfth century. The airmen also turned their machine guns on the firemen engaged in fighting the flames, and upon ambulance drivers.

One French nurse was killed, and another probably mortally injured, while flying glass slightly wounded a number of Americans, and patients in one American ward were in some cases hurled out of their beds by the shock of a bomb explosion. In some of the hospitals it was necessary to remove the patients, including some Americans, to the cellars for safety.

Nearly every window in one of the largest of the hospitals was shattered, as were the windows in the historic church adjoining, now also used as a hospital. Scores of American patients and hundreds of sick and wounded French soldiers were in the various hospitals attacked.

VOTE TRUST IN PERSHING.

French Mayors Record Their Confidence in Him and Clemenceau.

PARIS, May 29.—Mayors of towns within the military zone met in congress at Paris today. The Mayor of Chaumont presided, and the Mayors of Verdun, Calais, and Belfort were present.

The proceedings were opened by voting an address to Premier Clemenceau which recognized his noble patriotism and his immutable tenacity.

An address to the Americans also was voted. It expressed to General Pershing the absolute confidence felt by the French Mayors in the "assistance furnished by these allies, whose admirable and powerful efforts" are testified to by the Mayors in their posts as heads of the cities in the war zone.

ALMOST CAPTURED PREMIER

PARIS, May 30.—Premier Clemenceau had the narrowest possible escape from falling into German hands yesterday, according to the Petit Journal. He left a certain point on the front only a few minutes before the arrival of a patrol of forty Uhlans.

When the Germans entered the little town the Premier had just quitted; they cornered a few of the French who had remained, including a General who was examining positions with a field glass, the newspaper adds. The General was killed in the encounter.

The Premier again left Paris this morning for the front.

According to the Havas correspondent at the front, the General killed was General Pierre de Vaillères. He was struck by a shell fragment, while leading his men. General de Vaillères was 59 years of age.

SAYS MILLION TROOPS HAVE GONE ACROSS

But Washington Doubts Senator Lewis's Figures—Huge Output of Material.

CHICAGO, May 30.—Senator James Hamilton Lewis said in a speech here today that the United States now had 1,000,000 soldiers in foreign lands, and that by Dec. 1 they would be numerically equal to that of England.

He said that 700,000,000 pounds of explosives were in process of manufacture. The ordnance department had spent $776,000,000 for projectiles, and 75,000,000 projectiles were on their way to Pershing. One thousand rifles were being manufactured daily, and 8,500,000,000 rounds of small arm ammunition had been contracted for. Last month, he said, we produced 275,000,000 rounds. He placed the machine guns contracted for at 350,000, and said that 100,000 had been delivered. By July 1, he added, "we shall be producing 18,000 a month."

The American Navy, the speaker added, had climbed from fourth to second position among the world's fleets. We had 120 warships in European waters and fifty others of a war character. There were 400,000 men in the navy, and by Oct. 1 there would be half a million.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—From a well-informed military quarter the statement was elicited tonight that Senator James Hamilton Lewis overshot the mark when, in his Memorial Day speech at Chicago today, he asserted that the United States had more than a million men in Europe. This number has not been reached, and is not expected to be reached for three months.

Secretary Baker, when his attention was called to the Senator's speech, declined to comment on the statements it contained. The Secretary said he was not prepared at this time to add to his statement of several weeks ago to the effect that we had passed the 500,000 mark in the shipment of troops to Europe.

TO SEND 200,000 MEN TO CAMP THIS MONTH

Movement for New Draft Call Will Begin June 24—10,000 Will Go to Upton.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 30.—Word has been received from the War Department that 200,000 men will be inducted into the military service through the draft and sent to twenty-two camps throughout the country during the five-day period beginning June 24. Of these, 12,000, it was said, will be sent to Camp Zachary Taylor and 12,000 to Camp Sherman.

Contingents to be sent to camps other than those at Louisville and Chillicothe, Ohio, were said to include:

Camp Lee, 15,000; Camp Custer, 7,000; Camp Devens, 5,000; Camp Dix, 9,000; Camp Dodge, 9,000; Camp Funston, 12,000; Camp Gordon, 10,000; Camp Wheeler, 7,000; Camp Grant, 15,000; Camp Jackson, 5,000; Camp Lewis, 12,000; Camp Travis, 12,000; Camp Upton, 10,000; Camp Pike, 15,000; Camp Meade, 5,000; Camp Cody, 6,000; Camp Kearney, 7,000; Camp Greenleaf, 6,000; Camp Riley, 3,000; Camp Wadsworth, 4,000.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—No official statement is available as to the number of fighting men to be called in the next draft movement, further than that the time and number will be determined by the condition of the cantonments and camps to receive them.

WOULDN'T LET GERMAN RAIDERS GET AWAY

Our Men Near Bremenil Killed or Captured All Who Entered Their Trenches.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 29, (Associated Press.)—The purpose of the German attack today against the American positions near Bremenil, east of Luneville, was to capture Americans. The determined American resistance, however, drove the enemy back with heavy losses, and no Americans were taken prisoner.

The Germans attacked at three points, and at one point a group of fourteen got into the American trenches. It never went back. Nine of the fourteen Germans were killed outright, four are prisoners, and one is dead of wounds.

The prisoners reported that they were ordered to capture Americans at any cost, their superiors being anxious to determine where American troops were stationed and their present fighting strength.

At the point in question, west of Bremenil, after a heavy barrage, fifty German soldiers attempted to reach the American line. They were in three groups, and the two larger ones were held up and then dispersed by the American machine gun and rifle fire. The third group, consisting of fourteen men, managed by reason of terrain conditions to reach the American trenches and jump into them.

Under the leadership of a lanky youth, who was a farmer until he enlisted, a group of Americans gave the Germans a hot reception. Bayonets on the end of American rifles flashed white and then red almost as quickly as it takes to tell it, and the enemy party was soon overpowered.

During the engagement a big German noncommissioned officer, who directed the enemy party, stood on a parapet. He raised his arm to hurl a grenade at an American soldier, but he never threw it. Another American, who had come through a severe gas attack last Monday morning, reached the German with his bayonet. The grenade fell from the dying German's hand and exploded harmlessly on the parapet.

The gas bombardment that preceded the infantry advance by the enemy began at 12:40 o'clock this morning. The Germans had brought up additional eight-inch projectors to replace those that had been destroyed by the American guns Monday night, and mustard, phosgene, and chlorine shells fell by the hundreds on the American positions. In one small area alone 300 of these arrived. Many of the Americans, as a result, began to show the effects of slight gassing and were harboring a large grudge against the enemy on this account.

When the gas shells began to fall there was hardly any wind, making it certain that the fumes would remain in the localities where the Germans placed them, and the men in the American trenches hoped the enemy would follow up the shelling with an infantry attack.

The hopes of the resentful defenders were fully realized, and the result completely satisfied the Americans, for in one trench at daybreak this morning lay the nine dead Germans who perished in the bayonet attack, while to the east, where the men in the trenches had gone to work with their machine guns, the ground was dotted with gray-clad bodies.

Many of the machine gunners, still wearing their gas masks, stuck to their guns throughout the preliminary bombardment, and when they saw the advancing forms of the Germans just outside the American wire, they cut loose with their fire.

After a period of almost unprecedented quiet, the American sector northwest of Toul suddenly has become very active. Last night and today the Germans threw over hundreds of shells of all sizes and kept up a destructive and harassing fire. The American guns have been just as busy and are giving the enemy more than he sends. The artillery duel continues strong tonight.

It is not improbable that the Germans have some plans in which they may employ their infantry.

REPULSE ATTACKS NEAR CANTIGNY

ing party of about fifty men attempted to surround one of our advanced posts. The attempt was a complete failure, the enemy losing ten dead and four wounded. Of these some were killed in bayonet fighting. In this case also our casualties were very light. During the night two other attacks on our lines were prevented by our barrage and machine gun fire, the enemy failing to penetrate our wires.

In the late afternoon of May 27 Lieutenants Fisher, Curtis, Buford, McLanahan, flying at 4,000 meters on patrol duty, encountered hostile planes in the region of St. Mihiel. In the fighting which ensued one of the hostile planes broke into flames and fell.

Credit for bringing down the airplane reported in yesterday's communiqué is given to Lieutenant Rickenbacker and Lieutenant Hambleton, and not to Lieutenant Rickenbacker and Lieutenant Campbell, as reported.

This morning an English aviator returning from a bombing expedition was wounded in the arm. He was chased by two enemy machines. Lieutenant Campbell drove the hostile airplanes off, enabling the English aviator to return to his airdrome safely.

AMERICAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, May 30, (Associated Press.)—General Pershing's official communication covering the operations of Wednesday says:

In the Cantigny salient we have consolidated our positions in spite of heavy artillery and machine gun fire.

In Lorraine we repulsed three raids during the night, taking several prisoners and killing a number of the enemy.

242 Prisoners at Cantigny.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 29, (Associated Press.)—The first German counter-attack against Cantigny took place at 5:10 o'clock Monday afternoon. It was preceded by a barrage.

The second counterattack was launched at 6:14 P. M. One enemy wave passed beyond the American barrage, but our infantrymen drove off the Germans in No Man's Land.

The third counterattack was made at 5 o'clock this morning, when two German raids were repulsed with heavy losses. The number of German prisoners has been increased this afternoon to 242. A score were captured this morning. They had hidden in deep caves yesterday and last night.

The American field hospitals won the admiration of all yesterday. On one occasion officers abandoned their messroom to nurses who were making bandages, and ate in the yard in the front of the building.

A pathetic aftermath of yesterday's advance into Cantigny was the funeral service for several of the Americans this afternoon. It took place in a picturesque little cemetery near the front, which has been recently shelled the same as the American hospitals. Aged French women and little children stripped their gardens of flowers to cover the graves of the Americans.

PRAISES CANTIGNY VICTORS.

London Paper Notes "Swift Precision" in Doing Their First Job.

LONDON, May 30.—Commenting on the capture of Cantigny by the Americans, The Evening News says:

"Bravo the young Americans! Nothing in today's battle narrative from the front is more exhilarating than the account of their fight at Cantigny. It was clean-cut from beginning to end, like one of their countrymen's short stories, and the short story of Cantigny is going to expand into a full-length novel which will write the doom of the Kaiser and Kaiserism.

"We expected it. We have seen those young Americans in London, and merely to glance at them was to know that they are conquerers and brothers in that great Anglo-Saxon-Latin compact which will bring down the diabolical Prussian idol, with its poisons and calculated infamies, to enthrone chivalrous humanity again.

"They do not swagger, and they have no war illusions. They have done their first job with the swift precision characteristic of the United States, and Cantigny will one day be repeated a thousandfold. On that day the Kaiser's crown will go to the allied museum."

BLOW UP GERMAN DUMP.

American Shells Cause Terrific Explosion Near St. Mihiel.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 30, (Associated Press.)—The American heavy artillery today obtained direct hits on a big ammunition dump of the enemy east of St. Mihiel, which blew up with a terrific explosion, the burst of flame and pillar of white smoke shooting many hundreds of yards in the air.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 29.—Lieutenant John A. Hambleton, the American aviator, was the hero in an air encounter yesterday over the American sector. When the alert signal came into the American hangars three Boche machines were in the air. Three Americans went up a minute later. Hambleton picked his Boche two-seater Albatross and dived on to him. The German gunner ranged his machine gun on Hambleton, who received a bullet through the arm, paralyzing it. About the same time his gun got the Boche pilot. Hambleton, with one arm working, then brought his machine back to the American field and refused medical aid, while ground officers were confirming his victory.

OUR MEN AWAIT THE CALL.

Expect Foch's Orders to Join in the Great Battle.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 30, (Associated Press.)—The American soldiers are considering the part they may play in the battle that is raging to the northwest of their positions. There is no doubt that every available man in France will be thrown into the combat whenever the French high command deems it necessary. What is to be done will not be known, however, until the Americans are actually engaged, for it would be inadvisable to discuss troop movements of any character.

The battle between Soissons and Rheims has drained all activity from the zone in which the main body of the American Expeditionary Forces hold positions. Except for aerial fighting, quiet is reported from all the fronts.

LAUNCH FIRST SHIP OF STANDARD SHAPES

Thousands Cheer as Agawam, Steel Cargo Carrier, Slides Into the Water.

SCHWAB TELLS PROGRESS

Bay 250,000 Tons of Ships in May Were Put Into Commission—Predicts Greater Output.

The steamship Agawam, hailed as the first "fabricated" ship in the world, fabricated being the technical term applied to vessels built from numbered shapes made from patterns, and the first of the standardized steel cargo vessels of the Emergency Fleet Corporation's program, was launched yesterday in the yards of the Submarine Boat Corporation on Newark Bay. Thousands of employes of the Government and the company and invited guests cheered as the vessel slid down the ways. From a platform built about the bow Charles M. Schwab, Director General of the Emergency Fleet Corporation; Thomas A. Edison, Henry R. Carse, President of the Submarine Boat Corporation; H. R. Sutphen, Vice President of the company; A. C. Pessano, head of the Great Lakes Engineering Works, and a score or more of men engaged in the Government's shipbuilding program watched the launching.

The Agawam is the first vessel to be launched by the use of a device that releases the hull by the pulling of a trigger. This is said to the invention of Clark Henderson, the Chief Engineer of the Submarine Boat Corporation. It worked efficiently yesterday. When the word was given, instead of sawing through a timber, a workman cut two ropes with a knife and another pulled back the lever of the machine. In a moment the vessel began to glide toward Newark Bay. At that moment Miss Mary Eurana Ward, a niece of Mr. Schwab, broke a bottle of champagne on the side of the Agawam and named the vessel as a great shout went up from yard and stand.

At the exercises following the launching Mr. Schwab made a speech and introduced to the audience many of the men who were responsible for the building of the new steamship.

Quotes Mrs. Schwab's Slogan.

After congratulating the officials of the company, Mr. Schwab said:

"There is little that I can add to what has been said regarding the necessity for shipbuilding. I asked my wife the other day for a real slogan, and she gave me this: 'More caulking and less talking.' I think she is pretty nearly right."

Mr Schwab said that he wanted personally to congratulate the men responsible for the Agawam. He said that they had done a remarkable piece of work.

"If this war is to be won, and won it will be," he continued, "then one of the great forces that are going to do it is the industrial army of the United States. The men who are working with patriotic enthusiasm are just as worthy of the consideration of the people of this country as are the men who are doing their duty in the trenches.

"I am endeavoring in Washington to bring about some method of reward for the men who lend a hand for the country in this direction as in any other. The people in Washington who have high-sounding names can do no more than direct the task; they can only define policy. It is my intention to see that the men who carry out those tasks get their just reward."

Tells of Ship Construction.

Mr. Schwab then told of the progress of the Government's program of ship construction. "In the month of May," he said, "the United States put into commission 250,000 dead weight of tons of ships available for the sea. Think what this means. It means that two great ships were finished on every working day in May. I believe that that is a small number and it will increase by leaps and bounds."

Mr. Schwab then called for three cheers for the President, for the "boys in the trenches," and for the officials of the Submarine Boat Corporation. They were given with a will and in the pause that followed some one shouted, "Three cheers for Charley Schwab." There was a great shout in response.

President Carse of the Submarine Boat Corporation said that the Agawam was the first of 150 vessels of the type that would be constructed in the yard. The parts were made, he said, in bridge and tank shops throughout the country east of the Mississippi River, and were assembled at the yard. Then he continued:

"Ninety-five per cent. of the work in forming the parts entering into the hull of this vessel and punching rivet holes is done at shops widely separated from drawings furnished by this company, and these drawings have been of such exactitude and the work has been so carefully performed by the different bridge shops that when they are brought together at this yard they fit perfectly and the ship, as you see, is absolutely fair.

"The construction of the hull of this vessel requires the driving of over 400,000 rivets, and by our method more than one-quarter of these rivets are driven at the distant shops; the different parts being brought to the yard in sections as large as can be transported on the railroads. Each part is numbered and lettered, and, as they are shaped perfectly, all that is necessary is to place them in position, bolt them, and finally fasten them with rivets."

Dr. Charles A. Eaton, who was introduced as the spiritual director of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, also spoke. He told of the patriotism of the workers as he had found them when he inspected the plants.

The name of the Agawam was selected by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, and, according to the official announcement, the literal translation is "Great salt meadows of the Atlantic Coast."

Built of Bridge Steel.

The vessel is constructed from structural steel shapes and plates, formerly used only for the construction of bridges and buildings. Approximately 27 steel mills, 56 fabricating plants, and 200 foundries, machine, pipe, and equipment shops were engaged in the production of the parts.

Along the waterfront of the Submarine Boat Company's yard are 23 ways upon which are already rising sister ships of the Agawam. Each vessel will be made ready for sea service in the yards.

The keel of the Agawam was laid on Dec. 20, but construction was delayed by the tardy arrival of materials and adverse weather conditions of the Winter. Little was accomplished in the first month. Officials of the company said yesterday that they expected to launch another standardized ship within ten days or two weeks. After that it was planned to launch one a week and later two in each week.

The Agawam will have a displacement of approximately 7,800 tons when loaded to the Plimsoll mark, and a deadweight carrying capacity of about 5,500 tons. The length of the vessel is 343 feet on deck, the molded breadth being 46 feet and the molded depth of hull 28 feet and 6 inches. The maintained speed of the vessel at sea, fully loaded, will be at least 10½ knots per hour on a mean draft of approximately 23 feet.

The main machinery consists of a Westinghouse steam turbine operating at 2,000 revolutions per minute, driving the single-screw propeller at 90 revolutions per minute.

Woman Jumps Before a Train.

An unidentified woman jumped from the platform of the subway station at Eighty-sixth Street in front of a northbound local train yesterday afternoon and was killed. A letter was found on the body which bore the imprint, "Robert J. Borden, 2 C. O. R. Infantry, Draft 25, Army Post Office, London, England." The letter was addressed, "My dear wife." The woman was about 35 years old.

AMERICA BUILDING DESTROYERS BY SCORE

Daniels Promises That They Will Be Turned Out by Hundreds to End U-Boat Menace.

WILKES-BARRE, Penn., May 30.—Declaring that the navy is doing noble work in keeping open the road to France for the American soldiers, of American soldiers already there, Secretary Daniels, in an impromptu address here today, declared that troop movement would reach the million mark in a few weeks; that in a few months the two million mark will have been reached, and that ten million or more men will be sent, if need be, to win the war.

Secretary Daniels's speech was unexpected, as he stopped here only for breakfast while en route to Scranton. He was informed that the G. A. R. was holding ceremonies in honor of sailors who fell in the civil war and was quick to respond to an invitation to speak.

The Secretary expressed unlimited confidence in the navy's ability to wipe out the submarine evil.

"We are building destroyers by the scores and we will build them by the hundreds," he declared. "We will equip them with able men, such as you have sent from Wilkes-Barre, until it will not be possible for a submarine to exist in the ocean. In this war the navy's business has been to hunt submarines. We have hunted them and will continue to hunt them until they shall not dare to appear as assessins of the sea."

SCHWAB TO BUILD TURBINES

Will Increase Westinghouse Plant to Turn Out Ship Engines.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—New plants to produce turbines and the construction of two or more large fabricating plants are contemplated by Charles M. Schwab, Director General of Shipbuilding.

Mr. Schwab's plan to build turbines is a result of the refusal of Secretary Daniels to send engines to Hog Island, which are being built at Erie, for destroyers.

"I expect to increase the Westinghouse works at Essington at least 40 per cent.," said the Director General. "I will see that plants are increased or built so that we will get engines and other accessories for Hog Island, the Merchant Shipbuilding Corporation at Bristol, and the Submarine Boat Corporation at Newark.

"It is up to the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Company to meet the demands of shipbuilding. If they don't do it, we will build plants to produce the turbines. We shall have the motive power in time, and I am not worrying about it. Every facility in the United States will be brought into play to give us ships quickly.

"My trip West had the most gratifying results. I visited about fifteen shipyards on the Great Lakes and I marveled at their wonderful development. The Emergency Fleet Corporation will put into service this month 250,000 tons of steel ships, equal to a 10,000-ton ship every working day."

HURLEY OPPOSES CONTESTS

Says Eagerness for Riveting Records Hurts Efficiency of Men.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—Riveting contests carried to the point of speeding up one man's work at the cost of the general efficiency are not favored by E. N. Hurley, Chairman of the Shipping Board.

"What we are trying to do is to encourage a spirit of sportsmanship that will stimulate all the men to do their very best at all times," he said today. "We are not trying to make a man run a mile faster than he can.

"The record for a month is much more important than a record for a day. Contests which cause men to overwork themselves for the sake of establishing new records, with the result that they are incapacitated for work for several days afterward and the general system of the yard is demoralized, are to be discouraged. In fact, they should not be permitted.

"Personally, I do not see how it is possible for some of the records that have appeared in the newspapers to have been made at all. Certainly, it seems to me, they would cause serious demoralization among the other workmen and be an injury to the men who made them."

CABRERA'S MISSION ENDS.

Discusses Project for Mexican-Argentine Steampship Line.

BUENOS AIRES, May 29.—Luis Cabrera, head of the Mexican mission to South America, accompanied by Foreign Minister Pueyrredon, paid a farewell visit to President Irigoyen today.

Señor Cabrera will leave on Friday for Mexico. He discussed with the President plans for increasing the facilities for commerce between the two nations by means of a direct line of steamers between Mexican and Argentine ports. It is planned to have Mexico send fibre and similar products in exchange for Argentine corn.

The Argentine Government has appointed Leguisamon Pondal as First Secretary of the legation in Mexico, and Ricardo Acuna as Consul General in Mexico. The former has been attached for several months to the Foreign Office.

It is reported that Señor Fabela, Mexican Minister here, who has been on a special mission to Cuba, is about to return to Buenos Aires with the aim of further strengthening the relations between Mexico and Argentina.

CONFER DEGREE ON WILSON.

Lincoln Memorial University Trustees Also Send Eulogy to Him.

HARROGATE, Tenn., May 30.—The degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon President Wilson today by the Trustees of Lincoln Memorial University. In announcing the degree, Dr. Randall J. Condon, one of the trustees, said:

"In behalf of the trustees of Lincoln Memorial University and in the spirit of him whose name it bears, I confer upon you the degree of Doctor of Laws, earned by right of service in the cause of humanity.

"On this Memorial Day we pay our tribute to you—greatest living American—who with Washington and Lincoln—greatest of our dead—have done most to make the world safe for democracy. You who by your own choice and by the will of the American people are resolved in war and in peace that the world shall have a new birth of freedom and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

Mist Stops the Air Mail.

BELMONT PARK, L. I., May 30.—Bad weather conditions prevented service today over the air mail route, of which this is the northern terminal. No plane started from here, and the service between Washington and Philadelphia also was abandoned. Telephone advices from Philadelphia this morning said that the mist was much thicker there than here, so that even had a flier taken the chance of leaving from the station here he would have found great difficulty as well as danger in making a landing in Philadelphia. Letters for the air mail were forwarded by train.

PRESIDENT DRIVES RIVET IN NEW SHIP

With Mrs. Wilson, He Aids in Keel-Laying of the Gunston Hall at Alexandria, Va.

CONGRESS LEADERS ATTEND

Yard, Which Is Directed by C. W. Morse, Was Constructed in 85 Days—Employs 7,000 Men.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., May 30.—President Wilson lent a hand today in driving a rivet in the keel of what will be the steamer Gunston Hall, a 9,400-ton freighter, for the Shipping Board. Mrs. Wilson also played a part in the keel-laying, guiding the last vertical plate into position and naming the ship as she did so.

"I haven't got my union card, but I guess it's all right," said the President as he slapped a sturdy workman on the shoulder after the white-hot end of the rivet had been beaten to a round head, neatly edged against the keel-plate.

"Pretty fair work," commented the shipbuilder with a grin.

A great crowd saw the beginning of the first ship to be built in Alexandria since the days when four-masters flourished on the Potomac and Chesapeake Bay. Charles W. Morse of New York, representing the controlling financial interest in the Virginia Shipbuilding Company, builders of the Gunston Hall, welcomed the President and Mrs. Wilson, and in the party from Washington were Senators Martin of Virginia, Simmons of North Carolina, and Fletcher of Florida, Speaker Clark, former Speaker Cannon, and Representative Carlin of Virginia.

A shrieking siren in the shipyard shops announced that the President had arrived, and when he mounted the wooden ladder to the top of the concrete ways he was greeted with a roar of cheers.

President Loses No Time.

President Wilson proceeded immediately to business. The signal was given and a gigantic traveling crane slowly lowered the last heavy plate of the keel into position, temporary bolts were placed to hold it firm, and then Superintendent Charles Andrews, as heater, drew from the furnace a blazing nub of iron and placed it through one of the multitudinous holes in the keel-plates.

As the President stepped forward to take hold of the airgun several motion picture cameras began to click. Some one asked Mr. Wilson if he objected.

"Not at all; I'm not camera shy," he replied, and joined in the laughter which followed. Robert Mooney, rivet foreman, placed the heavy pneumatic hammer in position against the rivet head and William Sims, on the other side of the plate, leaned his weight against the "holder-on hammer." President Wilson then slowly pressed down the trigger of the riveter.

"Rat-tat-tat," sang the hammer, driven with tremendous force. Suddenly the noise ceased. The jarring had shaken the President's finger loose from the trigger.

"Keep on," Mooney ordered sharply, fearing the rivet would cool before the job was finished.

Again the President pressed the trigger, and as Mooney guided the gun around the edge the rivet was beaten cleanly to a buttonlike head, guaranteed to hold in all kinds of seas.

When the applause subsided the Shipyard Band played "The Star-Spangled Banner," and the Presidential party returned to Washington.

Claim a World's Record.

Officials of the company claim a world's record in establishing a permanent shipyard in eighty-five working days. Less than three months ago the site of the yard was swamp land, originally ceded by James II. to the "Associated Adventurers of the City of London," but never, from that time until now, used for any purpose. Approximately 78 per cent. of the construction work has been under ground, because of the necessity of sinking concrete piles on which to build shops and ways. The yard is one of four in the United States having concrete ways.

The Gunston Hall is to be delivered before Oct. 1, and from the yard's four ways eleven other ships of the same type are slated for delivery by Feb. 15, 1919. The yard will have 7,000 employes.

In naming the vessel Gunston Hall, Mrs. Wilson chose the name of the famous old home of George Mason, author of the Virginia Bill of Rights and one of the foremost thinkers of Colonial days. Mason surveyed the District of Columbia, and a marker established by him still stands within a short distance of where thet Gunston Hall will take the water to aid in the fight against autocrats.

FLOAT SHIP OF NEW TYPE.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 30.—The first composite wood and steel ship to be built for the Emergency Fleet Corporation was launched here today in the presence of officials of the Shipping Board and the Southern Commercial Congress.

The vessel was named the War Cloud. Nine minutes after the craft left the ways the keel for another ship was laid.

EPIDEMIC SPREADS IN SPAIN.

Over 150,000 Cases in Madrid—Mortality Continues to be Low.

MADRID, May 30.—The epidemic which is sweeping over Spain, a disease which somewhat resembles grip, is increasing in severity.

There are more than 150,000 cases in Madrid. The mortality, however, continues to be low.

The King arose from a sick bed today, but is still unable to attend to matters of State. The fact that more than 600 doctors have been stricken hampers an efficacious fight against the epidemic.

And if there is a bargain in the music world, be sure it's right here at GIMBELS.

Now, this brings us to why you ought to buy at GIMBELS. GIMBELS is a Department Store. MEAT EXPORTS CUT BRITISH PRIVATION

London Food Ministry Grateful for the "Splendid Response from America."

HOOVER WARNING ON WHEAT

Must Stint More to Help Allies, He Says—People Refusing Sauerkraut.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—A cable dispatch was received today by the Food Administration from the British Ministry of Food announcing that the normal meat ration had been restored there as a result of the heavy shipments from the United States. With it came an appeal that conservation measures be continued here so that a surplus may be built up and the danger of another crisis averted.

It is stated that the huge shipments from America during the last three months have accomplished invaluable results in sustaining the morale of the war workers and others of the civilian population. Conditions are being contrasted with those in Germany, where it has been found necessary to reduce the ration to about five ounces a person each week.

A statement by the Food Administration showed that in April 359,038,000 pounds of beef and pork products were exported to the allied nations, as compared with 161,000,000 pounds in April, 1917, and 48,700,000 pounds in April, 1914. The total exports of meat products in April last, therefore, were about 220 per cent. above the exports of the same month last year and 880 per cent. above those in April, 1914.

The Food Administration has representatives in England and France who are co-operating with officials there in arranging for storage facilities and the unloading of the shipments. Storage facilities in France are admittedly inadequate, but steps are being taken to improve this condition. The situation in England is much better.

Urges Surplus for Army.

An appeal has been made to the American people to conserve the supply so that a surplus may be built up abroad in anticipation of the transportation of larger forces of American troops. It is believed that a safe reserve can be established if rigid conservation is practised at home and the heavy shipments are continued.

The dispatch from the British Ministry of Food read:

"Thanks to the splendid response from America, the shortage which was threatened in beef and bacon is now no longer as serious as it has been during recent weeks, and the meat ration, which was reduced, from the workingman's point of view, almost to the vanishing point, has now been restored to the normal amount under the compulsory rationing system. The willingness with which the population as a whole has accepted compulsory rationing and the success of the rationing arrangements have produced a marked decrease in consumption, and this also naturally eases the food situation.

"Supplies of butter and cheese, however, are still inadequate to meet the requirements, but it is hoped that imports from America will remove anxiety as regards our position in these commodities.

"The fact that it is now feasible to maintain the scale of compulsory rationing must not be taken to mean that there is any surplus of food in the country. Under conditions of war such as this it would obviously be an elementary precaution to build up as large a reserve of food as possible in an island which is menaced by submarine blockade. No such reserve is yet in sight and there should be no slackening in American efforts to provide foodstuffs for the allied nations."

Essential to Save More Wheat.

The necessity for the most rigid conservation of wheat was emphasized today by Food Administrator Hoover, who pointed out that the United States must make continued sacrifices if the situation abroad is to be met.

"The Food Administration," Mr. Hoover said, "declares that every aspect of the wheat situation, both present and prospective, intensifies the need for the greatest possible limitation in the American consumption of wheat and wheat products. If present restrictions should be in the slightest degree relaxed it would result in serious want for the people of Europe before the new crop can reach the market.

"The Food Administration's estimate of the position on the first of June indicates a total available supply until the new harvest, including the grain which will be available from the farms, in country and terminal elevators, and mill elevators, of about 50,000,000 bushels. Of this, 30,000,000 bushels must be exported before new wheat is available for export if we are to maintain the absolutely necessary shipments to our army and the Allies. That leaves about 20,000,000 bushels for domestic consumption for the next two months.

"Normal American consumption is something over 40,000,000 bushels a month, so that the most liberal consumption at home would be only one third of normal.

"There is, further, an inclination to include new crop prospects with present conditions, which has led to confusion. The harvest will not be generally available in flour until the middle of August or early September, although in the extreme South it will be somewhat earlier.

Wants Provision for Bad Year.

"At a meeting of the Federal Food Administrators in Washington yesterday, representing all forty-eight States, it was the unanimous view that even if the harvest does prove abundant it will be the first duty of the American people to place every grain they can save into storage against possible bad years ahead. In consequence there should be no anticipation of unlimited wheat bread until the war is over.

"Some of the most inconvenient restrictions can no doubt be modified with the arrival of a large harvest, but if we are honest with ourselves we will maintain restrictions requiring the use of some substitutes, both domestic and commercial; we will continue the requirement of high milling extraction and the elimination of the non-essential use of and waste of flour and bread.

"It is worth remembering that the famine in Egypt centuries ago was stopped by a little governmental foresight, and it does not require any illuminating dream to anticipate that, so long as the war lasts, with its increasing drafts for soldiers and munition workers, the world will steadily produce less food. If we are wise, a great harvest will mean the willing building up of great national reserves."

Many reports have reached the Food Administration also that the consumption of sauerkraut has fallen off because of the unpopularity of its supposedly German name. Sauerkraut, it is stated, is of Dutch rather than German origin. Its use is urged as an aid to the Food Administration's campaign for the consumption of perishable foodstuffs.

MOBILE FORCE FOR HARVEST

Government Recruiting Workers to Traverse Grain Belt.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Shortage of farm labor to harvest the western wheat crop will be met by a mobile force of workers recruited for this purpose, the Federal Employment Service today announced. These workers will start early next month, harvesting the Winter wheat crop in Oklahoma, then going into Kansas, afterward moving into the Spring wheat section of the Northwest, and finally crossing the border and assisting Canadian farmers late in the Summer.

The army of workers will return in time to assist in harvesting the corn crop in the early Fall. Each State will contribute volunteer community workers to supplement any demands for help not met by these transient harvesters.

Recruiting and direction of these workers is in charge of A. L. Barkman, former chief of the Farm Service Division of the Employment Service, who is now Employment Director for the district comprising the grain belt.

Members of the President's official family are looking over their establishments to see if they have any servants engaged in "nonessential" occupations, who might be employed more to the country's advantage elsewhere. Secretary Redfield told friends today that the blisters on his hands were due to work in his yard and garden, formerly done by two men, whom the Secretary released to go to work in shipyards.

"I'm afraid it's not going to be so much of a garden as it might have been," Mr. Redfield said, his eyes twinkling.

Food Administrator Hoover recently dismissed his chauffeur, put in storage his large automobile, and announced that he would do his own driving hereafter in a small car.

TO DISCUSS MILK PRICES.

Commission Will Try to Arrive at a Fair Price for June.

In an effort to regulate the price of milk for June State Food Commissioner John Mitchell, Chairman of the Federal Food Board, yesterday instructed Dr. W. H. Jordan to call a meeting of the Milk Commission this morning. A statement issued by the Federal Food Board yesterday said:

"It is understood that Mr. Mitchell is not at all satisfied with the result of the last conference, at which the commission passed a resolution declining to fix prices for the month of June in view of the fact that the Distributers' and Dairymen's League had agreed beforehand to prices which could not be accepted. Mr. Mitchell believes that the commission can reach some agreement as to what the consumer shall pay. This, of course, will call for a rearrangement of the prices agreed to by the dairymen and the distributers."

In a letter to the Governors of clubs yesterday William V. Griffin of the Federal Food Board urged greater conservation of wheat foods. "Fish is now plentiful," he said, "fresh vegetables and fruits are coming to market, and your menu should contain a larger number of vegetables, fresh fruits, and salads."

TO CARE FOR 150 SOLDIERS.

Government to Build Hospital on Farm at Lawrenceville.

TRENTON N. J., May 30.—A United States convalescent hospital, it was learned today, is to be erected at Lawrenceville, between here and Princeton, on a farm which has been donated by Dunlevey Milbank. It is planned to take care of 150 soldiers at this time, who, as fast as they recover sufficiently, will be taught agricultural pursuits.

The farm contains 500 acres, and is at present in charge of Dr. J. E. Russell, Dean of the Teachers' College, Columbia University. E. C. Higby of the Minnesota Agricultural School is Acting Superintendent.

NO TIME FOR STRIKES, M'ADOO'S WARNING

Notifies Railroad Shopmen They Are Government Employes and Must Obey Orders.

PROMISES JUSTICE TO ALL

But Declares National Authority Will Not Be Intimidated in Hour of Peril.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Forewarned by the recent walkout at the railroad shops at Alexandria, Va., and at Rock Island, Ill., and in anticipation of further possible labor troubles, Secretary McAdoo sent an identical telegram tonight to the heads of the various organizations of railroad shopmen machinists declaring their status as employes of the Government.

The Secretary's message was sent to John E. Bray, Kansas City, Mo., President of the Metal Workers' International Alliance; Charles P. Ford, Springfield, Ill., President of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers of America; J. F. Anderson and F. H. Knight, Washington, D. C., of the American Federation of Labor; James W. Cline of Chicago, Louis Weyand of Kansas City, and A. O. Wharton of St. Louis of Amalgamated Shopmen Machinists' organizations. The telegram read as follows:

"The strike of certain shopmen machinists, &c., in the railroad shops at Alexandria, Va., has created a very painful impression on the public mind. I cannot believe that these men knew what they were doing. They are all employes now of the United States Government. They are not employes of any railroad corporation, therefore, this was a strike against the Government of the United States. It is the first time in the history of our Government that any of its employes have attempted a strike against their Government. Such action is incredible. For the good of our beloved country and for the honor of railroad men in the service everywhere, I hope that there will be no repetition of what every one must condemn as unpatriotic in the highest degree.

Can't Coerce the Government.

"The Government cannot, of course, be coerced or intimidated by any of its employes. It is anxious to do justice to all, and will do justice to all as far as it is possible to measure justice. Recognizing that there are probable inequalities in the recommendations of the Wage Commission which should be impartially considered and dealt with, I appointed in my General Order No. 27, dated May 25, a Board of Railroad Wages and Working Conditions, composed of three representative labor men and three representative railroad men, whose duty it is to hear and to pass upon all petitions and complaints. Every class of employes or parts of classes of employes who feel that they have just ground for complaint under the wage decision should submit their cases promptly to this board, and they will be given just and impartial consideration. The American people have just been called upon to pay largely increased freight and passenger rates for the purpose of paying in part the increased wages, amounting to more than $900,000,000, awarded to railroad employes.

"Suppose they should strike against the Government because they do not think they are fairly treated in being forced to pay these increases for the benefit of railroad labor, what would happen to our country? Suppose the railroad officers should strike because they disliked the orders of the Government, and should refuse to obey them, what would happen to them? Suppose that railroad employes should strike against the decisions of their Government and hamper the operation of the railroads at a time when transportation is essential to protect the hundreds of thousands of American boys now fighting on the battlefields of Europe to save the lives and property and liberty of railroad employes serving here at home, what would happen to our country?

"The Kaiser probably would get it. We cannot all get exactly what we want in this world, nor can we win this war unless each and every citizen is willing to submit to the laws of the land and to the decisions of those in authority.

Demands Unswerving Loyalty.

"We railroad men particularly must give unswerving and loyal support to our Government, no matter what our individual views and disappointments may be, relying upon a fair hearing of our complaints and the justice of our cause, and accepting patriotically the final decisions of those in authority who under our laws are charged with the responsibility of making them.

"While in the German drive now going on the sons of railroad men and the sons of Americans of every class are dying on the battlefields of France to save America and democracy in the world, shall there be found among us any set of men who are unwilling to sacrifice something of their personal views and individual desires to support America's heroes, who are making the supreme sacrifice for us?

"I earnestly hope that from one end of this great land to the other it may never be said again that any railroad man, officer or employe, was so unpatriotic as to strike against his own Government when it is in the midst of the most perilous war of all history. It is the highest duty of patriotic men to remain at their posts with the railroads, where they are so urgently needed for the safety of the country, and to rely upon the Board of Railroad Wages and Working Conditions and the Director General for the just consideration of their claims.

"I am sure that I can count upon you to immediately urge upon your men by wire the wisdom and patriotism of the course I have suggested.

"W. G. McADOO,
"Director General of Railroads."

STRIKE HEARING ON SUNDAY.

Taft and Walsh to Take Up Scranton Car Case on June 2.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—William H. Taft and Frank P. Walsh, Joint Chairmen of the National War Board, will go to Scranton, Penn., next Sunday, to conduct a hearing in the strike of 800 street railway men. Because Scranton is in the heart of the great anthracite coal region, Messrs. Taft and Walsh agreed to drop everything else and go there at once. Telegraphic arrangements were made for a hearing tomorrow, but Mr. Taft, who is in New Haven, discovered he could not possibly reach Scranton in time for a hearing tomorrow.

As the entire National War Labor Board meets in New York on Saturday, it was likewise impossible for him to visit Scranton that day. Mr. Taft then proposed that he leave New York at midnight on Saturday and hold the hearing on Sunday morning. Meanwhile, H. S. Hanna, chief examiner for the War Labor Board, has been sent to Scranton to assure the strikers that the board will take jurisdiction in the controversy and urge the men to return to work at once. He will reach Scranton tomorrow morning.

Several important questions will be considered by the War Labor Board in New York on Saturday.

GRACE LUSK SEEKS DEATH.

Sentence on Convicted Woman Delayed Because of Her Condition.

WAUKESHA, Wis., May 30.—When Grace Lusk, convicted of murder in the second degree last night, awoke today from a sleep induced by opiates she moaned, "I don't want to live! I don't want to live!"

The conviction, which was for the killing of Mary Newman Roberts last June, carries a sentence of from fourteen to twenty-five years' imprisonment. Owing to the prisoner's condition, however, Judge Lueck intimated that he would not pronounce sentence until Miss Lusk is more composed.

Meanwhile every instrument by which she might do herself injury has been removed from her cell and beyond her reach.

Who Discovered RICORO?

"The Junior Member of our firm discovered Ricoro," said the Cotton Broker. "It was in the smoker—on our way home.

"'Here's a cigar I'm thinking of buying for our customers,' he said, offering me an expensive looking smoke.

"I took three lingering pulls. 'Good heavens, man, we can't afford to buy these for customers. We're giving them 15c cigars now, and that's plenty.'

"'Too much, you mean,' he came back,—'these are Ricoros at 8c—and your own remark proves how good they are.'

"And now I grin as I smoke my daily Ricoros out of the customer's box."

Sooner or later you'll discover—

Ricoro
the "Self-Made" Cigar

Because you can afford 15c or 25c cigars is no reason for smoking them if a 7c, 8c, or 10c Ricoro will prove as enjoyable. A trial is the only test that tells. Discover Ricoro today. You'll find out why we call it the "self-made" cigar and why millions of Ricoros were sold the first year they were on the market. A dozen sizes and shapes, from 6c to 2-for-25 cents.

he had never been in the Secret Service. He was born in America and had never been naturalized in England.

In the German book to which he had referred there was a note after each name indicating the particular way in which the person could best be approached.

Captain Spencer described how he had been detained in a cabin in France, being told by the doctors that he was suffering from most unusual hallucinations and that he ought to be locked up. Eventually an air officer carried certain documents to Downing Street which procured his release.

Linked Book with Theatre List.

The trial of Noel Pemberton-Billing, M. P., began before Sir John Dickinson at Bow Street Police Court on April 6, and since that date has been adjourned several times. He was charged with having unlawfully published a false and defamatory libel upon Miss Maude Allan and Jack Thomas Grein in a paragraph in the issue dated Feb. 16 of the newspaper called the Vigilante.

A passage in this paragraph made reference for the first time to the mysterious book said to have been compiled by German secret agents, with the intimation that the subscribers' book of the Independent Theatre would show a similar list of "undesirables."

There was also the suggestion in the case that the most sacred secrets of state were threatened. It was asserted that German agents, by certain liaisons, could obtain information as to the disposition of the British fleet, and that "the thought that 47,000 Englishmen and women were held in enemy bondage through fear calls all clean spirits to mortal combat."

The second prosecutor in the case, Mr. Grein, was a naturalized British subject of Dutch birth and the proprietor of the Independent Theatre. Mr. Grein had intended in January to revive Oscar Wilde's play, "Salome," with Miss Allan in the title rôle.

Travers Humphreys, in opening for the prosecution, according to an account in The London Daily Telegraph of April 8, described the play and stated that its revival had been advertised in the newspapers. He admitted that the fact of its being advertised would make any reasonable criticism of the play or of Mr. Grein or Miss Allan perfectly justifiable, but what it did not justify, in his submission, was that the occasion should be used for what he must call a filthy attack upon Miss Allan and those concerned in the production. He contended that what had been done by the defendant was to make an attack on Miss Allan, such as it was, unworthy of any man to make upon any woman.

Dancer Defends Reputation.

"The alleged libel was printed in a paper founded in 1914 under the title of the Imperialist, but now known as the Vigilante, which was conducted by the defendant, and which claimed that as it did not accept advertisements it was free to speak the truth. The paragraph complained of as libellous had been said by the defendant not to have been written by himself, but the context of the page on which it appeared showed that, at any rate, it was intended the readers should suppose it was written by him.

"Defendant: 'I take full responsibility.'

"Mr. Humphreys, continuing, said the coupling of the name of Miss Allan, or any woman, with the heading of the paragraph could only mean one thing—that the lady, either in her private or professional capacity, was associated with something that could not be regarded as otherwise than disreputable. Many a woman might naturally have hesitated to come into court and make it known to the world that some person had dared to say of her that which was suggested in the paragraph complained of, but when her attention was called to it Miss Allan had to face the fact that if she allowed it to pass unchallenged some of those persons whose mental food was garbage might be able to say hereafter, 'You have this said of you, and you took no steps to stop it, and, therefore, there must be something in it.' Consequently she had taken the only course open to her by law for her protection by instituting these proceedings.

"The obvious meaning of the paragraph in The Vigilante, he contended, was that there was some connection between nameless vice and the performances at the Independent Theatre. That that was intended to be conveyed was made clearer by a cryptic suggestion that if Scotland Yard were to seize a list of the members subscribing to the Independent Theatre there was no doubt they would 'secure the names of several thousands of the first 47,000.'

Called Deterrent to War.

"When these proceedings were initiated, neither Mr. Grein nor Miss Allen understood what was meant by the 47,000, but the explanation had since been discovered in certain sentences which had appeared in previous issues of The Vigilante, and particularly in that of Jan. 26. The latter contained an article in which the libels were directed, it was right to say, not against Miss Allen or Mr. Grein, but against whole classes of people, not excepting the very highest in the land. The writer said, for instance, that there had been many persons who had been prevented from putting their full strength into the war by corruption and blackmail, and the fear of exposure, and that there were reasons for supposing that the Germans, with their usual efficiency, were making use of the most productive and cheapest methods. The article also said:

"There exists in the cabinet noir of a certain German Prince a book compiled by the secret service from the reports of German agents who have infested this country for the past twenty years, agents so vile and spreading debauchery of such a lasciviousness as only German minds could conceive.

"The book in question, it was said, contained more than 1,000 of the names mentioned by German agents in their reports, and they were included in the 47,000. The suggestion in the paragraph which was the subject of the present prosecution was that if the police were to seize a list of subscribing members of the Independent Theatre they would find the names of several thousand people addicted to the hideous vices hinted at. Counsel, in conclusion, said he proposed first to prove publication of the paragraph, and then, if in the judgment of the Magistrate it constituted a libel, to ask for the committal of the defendant for trial at the Central Criminal Court.

"Salome" as a Propaganda Drama.

"Mr. Grein said he had carried on business in the City of London as a merchant for twenty-five years. For some forty years he had been a dramatic critic. In 1891 he founded the Independent Theatre. It was only a name—an idea—there was no building. The office was in Duke Street, Adelphi. He had produced a number of plays in England by means of the Independent Theatre, and he had advertised the intended production of Oscar Wilde's tragedy 'Salome,' which had been before the public for about twenty years in many editions. He regarded the paragraph in The Vigilante as a libel upon himself as the proprietor of the Independent Theatre.

"Defendant: Is it a fact that you have recently been appointed to some official position in connection with the propaganda of British drama in neutral countries?—Yes.

"Will 'Salome' be one of the répertoire?—Yes, if we have sufficient money.

"So it is only a question of money? You see no other reason?—No.

"Do you wish to say so?—Yes. The play is a masterpiece and contains some of the finest prose in modern English. It is cherished and honored in every civilized country beyond the waters, and in the countries where I propose to go the education is such that every third person can understand it.

"Will they be public performances?—Of course.

"Why are the performances in this country private?—Because the play is not yet licensed.

"Am I to understand that that is because our authorities are not sufficiently educated to understand it?—I don't express an opinion.

"Did you say just now that it would be a success in foreign countries because people understood it?—Because they understood British art.

"Is it because we understand English and not art it is not produced here?—I do not know.

"Questioned as to his nationality, witness said he was of Dutch origin.

"Defendant: You founded the German colony in London?—I did.

"You hold the Fourth Class of the German Eagle?—I did hold it.

"You hold the Order of the Prussian Crown?—It was given to me in 1907, on the occasion of Sir Herbert Tree's visit to Berlin, but I did not apply for the license.

"What steps have you taken to cancel it?—None, but as soon as the posts are open I shall send it back.

"Miss Allan has German associations, has she not?—Not to my knowledge.

"Defendant was proceeding to ask questions about Miss Allan's book, 'My Life in Dancing,' when Travers Humphreys successfully objected.

"Witness said he was a producer for art's sake, and, provided there was sufficient money, 'Salome' would be produced in various countries.

"Defendant: Are you to receive a Government subsidy?—Of course, but not a Government salary.

"Are you still in negotiation for this purpose?—Yes.

"Reference was made by Mr Billing to Lord Beaverbrook, (head of the Department of Information, then Minister of Propaganda,) and witness replied, 'I render an account of everything to Lord Beaverbrook.'

"Do you consider it fair to appeal to the public for donations?—Certainly.

"What? To send plays to neutral countries before the public know the type of propaganda which they are supporting?—Certainly."

HALDANE OFTEN ATTACKED.

Mrs. Asquith Also Once Accused of Favoring German Prisoners.

Lord Haldane, on account of the attacks of the British press accusing him of pro-Germanism, alleging that he had reduced the military efficiency of the empire when Secretary of State for War in 1905-12, was obliged to resign as Lord High Chancellor in 1915, before the war was a year old.

As a lover of German literature and speaking the language perfectly, Lord Haldane went to Berlin early in 1912 for the purpose of promoting more cordiality in the relations with Germany, which had been severely shocked the year before by the German Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann Hollweg, declining to accept Great Britain's invitation and reduce armaments.

His report to the British Cabinet on his return is said to be an interesting commentary on Prince Lichnowsky's memorandum as showing Great Britain's efforts to maintain peace.

From the beginning of the war Lord Haldane in speeches and articles has attempted to overcome the antagonism which he had aroused in England. Again and again he has explained his attitude both as War Secretary and as envoy at Berlin, but to little purpose. One of his most eloquent speeches, made while still Lord Chancellor, on Nov. 10, 1914, contains this uncompromising passage:

"We must win if we only have the qualities, which I believe we have, of spirit, courage, resolution, and dogged determination. [Cheers.] Germany may be admirably prepared, but preparations wear off against people who have the resources that we have. [Cheers.] It is two months since Germany made her attempt to crush the French, but she is not at Paris yet. [Cheers.] She was to have been there at the end of August; but our splendid little army, with the great French Army, has driven her back, and today her army is cooped up in a comparatively small part of France."

Mrs. Asquith, whose husband was Prime Minister when the war began, was accused by The Globe of London of treating German prisoners in England in a manner hardly becoming in the wife of the head of the Government, which was at war with Germany. Suit was brought against the paper. Mrs. Asquith explained her visits to the prisoners on humanitarian grounds, and The Globe apologized.

A brilliant, well-read woman, Gladstone had once written versea to her, and she was the heroine of "Dodo," a novel by A. C. Benson, one of the two literary sons of the late Archbishop of Canterbury.

In October, 1900, her name was spread over the world as the person described in a poem by William Watson called "The Woman With the Serpent's Tongue." The poet himself finally said that the theme was "a composite photograph of Mrs. Asquith and her stepdaughter Violet."

In January, 1911, Mrs. Asquith again came prominently before the public as a witness in the case of Mrs. Horace West against her father-in-law, Sir Algernon West, claiming damages on the ground that he had spread an untrue report of the reasons why she had separated from her husband. Mrs. Asquith was called by the plaintiff and helped her to secure $6,000 damages.

From the death of Queen Victoria in 1901 throughout the reign of her son Edward VII., Mrs. George Keppel was a leader of London society. With the succession of George V. and Queen Mary in 1910 other customs prevailed and London saw little of Mrs. Keppel for two years, when, on the anniversary of King Edward's death, she reappeared and gave a great ball at her house, 16 Grosvenor Street, introducing her daughter, Violet, to society. This is the house which she had just completed on the eve of the King's death at an expense of $200,000 in alterations alone.

At the height of her popularity it was said of her:

"There you have Mrs. George Keppel, not to know whom is not to know the sovereign of Great Britain, for his Majesty considers her the cleverest woman in the world, and proclaims the fact from the housetops."

Before her marriage in 1891 to the Hon. George Keppel, third son of the seventh Earl of Albemarle, she was Alice Frederica Edmonstone, daughter of Admiral Sir William Edmonstone.

WOULD DISCUSS WAR AIMS.

Lord Buckmaster Opposes the View That the Time Is Inopportune.

LONDON, May 30.—Lord Buckmaster, the former Lord High Chancellor, presided at a dinner tonight at the National Liberal Club, at which Major George Haven Putnam, President of the American Rights League, was the guest of honor.

Lord Buckmaster, in his address, said he did not share the view that the moment was inopportune for a discussion of the subject of the allied war aims. These were and must always be independent of the fluctuations of the battle on the fields of France. Great Britain, he said, had entered the war as a protest against the wanton and open violation of public law and the breach of public faith by Germany and to protect a weak nation against the aggression of a strong nation, which was bound by solemn ties and treaties to protect it. What was desired was that in the future a weak nation should be able to depend upon the justice of its cause.

With respect to the idea of a league of nations, he contended that such a league must include Germany, but it must be a reconstructed Germany. There must be evidence that Germany had abandoned her schemes of military aggression.

69 SINN FEINERS DEPORTED.

Taken to England for Internment, Shortt Announces.

LONDON, May 30.—Sixty-nine Sinn Feiners have been deported from Ireland for internment in England, according to Edward Shortt, Chief Secretary for Ireland, who spoke in the House of Commons today. The statement was made in reply to a question whether the deportees would be tried in England or in Ireland. Mr. Shortt said that the conditions under which they would be detained were being considered.

With the recent changes in the Government in Ireland and the arrest of Sinn Fein leaders, the Parliamentary correspondent of The Daily Telegraph says he understands the British Government considers it desirable to refrain from pressing forward at this time anything calculated to produce a disturbance. A more settled feeling prevails in Ireland, and it is hoped the improvement will grow in every direction.

The Irish Home Rule bill is not expected to be ready for introduction for a few weeks, and meanwhile conscription will remain in abeyance. This is believed to be the policy in which the Lord Lieutenant and the Chief Secretary are in agreement with Walter Hume Long, Secretary for the Colonies, and the War Cabinet.

Ireland seems to be settling down in a wonderful manner, despite the short time the new régime has been in existence, continues the correspondent, who has just returned from Dublin. The Nationalists, and even some Sinn Feiners, accept the coming of Lord French as Lord Lieutenant with relief. Chief Secretary Shortt also has made an excellent impression.

GERMANS SHELL PARIS ON CORPUS CHRISTI DAY

Resume Bombardment Despite Request That British Refrain from Attack on Cologne.

PARIS, May 30.—Although the British Government has promised not to carry out air raisd today—the Feast of Corpus Christi—on German cities which are not in the vicinity of the front, the German long-range gun resumed the bombardment of Paris this morning. The firing began at an earlier hour than is usual, but stopped soon afterward, and was not resumed until sunset.

The removal of children from Paris was begun this morning when 1,000 from the Montmartre district were placed on board a special train bound for a vacation colony in the Department of Allier, in central France. This is the first action taken under a plan for removing Paris children from the possibility of harm from a long-range gun shell striking a school filled with pupils, as a church where worship was in progress was struck on Good Friday.

One shell struck a church. An official statement making this announcement, adds:

"This fact should be compared with Cardinal von Hartmann's request to the British Government that Cologne not be bombarded today—the feast of Corpus Christi. This is another example of German bad faith, for the least that could be expected was that Germany would have the same forbearance toward Paris as was asked for Cologne."

The British promise regarding Corpus Christi Day was given upon the receipt through the Vatican of a request recently made by Cardinal von Hartmann, the Archbishop of Cologne, that there should be no bombing in Cologne during the time of the Corpus Christi procession in that city, which recently had been seriously damaged by British air raids.

AIR RAIDS ON PARIS FAIL.

Germans Driven Back on Two Successive Nights; Lose One Machine.

PARIS, May 30.—Some airplanes crossed the line in the direction of Paris tonight. The alarm was sounded at 11 o'clock, and the "all clear" signal was given at midnight. The enemy machines were under a heavy fire from the defenses of Paris, and some bombs were dropped on the region about the city. There were no casualties.

An enemy airplane was brought down by French anti-aircraft guns in the course of an attempted raid on Paris last night. None of the German machines was able to fly over the city. A few bombs were dropped in the suburbs, and several points behind the battle line were bombed by the enemy.

Following is the official statement recording the Germans' failure of last night:

Enemy airplanes were most active last night and bombed various localities behind the front. Several were observed making toward Paris, and an alarm was given at 11:24 o'clock. The air defense organization got to work, and no enemy machine got past our curtain of fire, and none flew over Paris. A few bombs were dropped in the suburbs.

An enemy airplane was struck by a shell from an anti-aircraft battery and fell in flames. "All clear" was sounded at 12:34 A. M.

Seven Children in 32 Months.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PANAMA, May 30.—Mrs. Elie Tourgeman, wife of a local Syrian merchant, in giving birth today to twins has become the mother of seven children within thirty-two months. On July 1, 1916, Mrs. Tourgeman gave birth to twins, in June, 1917, triplets were born, and this morning two additional sons were welcomed. The records of Panama birth statistics reaching back for many years disclose no other instance of this sort.

WANT NEW IMPERIAL PLAN.

Colonial Interests Ask Division of British Administration.

LONDON, May 30, (via Ottawa)—The Colonial Institute at its annual meeting today passed a resolution urging that control of imperial matters be separated from the domestic affairs of the motherland.

The resolution also set forth that the settlement of the future constitution of the United Kingdom was an essential preliminary to the discussion at the special imperial conference to be summoned after the war of the future government of the empire.

Daniels—the Man Who Came Through

Making fun of our own Navy was, not so very long ago, the great American sport.

Whenever a little editor or cartoonist ran entirely out of ideas, he had only to devise a jibe at the Secretary of the Navy—and everybody would laugh bitterly.

The hue-and-cry of disgruntled officers and petty politicians spread into a great public misunderstanding; few men in office have faced the parrotlike, unreasoning hostility that everywhere assailed Mr. Daniels.

Fortunately for America, however, its Secretary of the Navy chose to devote his energy to the defense of his country rather than the defense of himself. As a result, the United States Navy today stands second only to Great Britain, and is within sight of becoming the greatest sea power in the world.

Secretary Daniels has at last broken his own rule. For Hearst's Magazine he has personally written a stirring statement on the New Navy.

Every real American—every lover of fair play—every admirer of courage and efficiency—will appreciate this opportunity to set himself right on the real facts about our magnificent Navy.

PROPER style, quality fabric, appealing pattern, comfortable fit, long service, attractive price—those are the things men, young men and boys demand in clothing—all these essential qualities are combined in our Spring and Summer clothes. Their incorporation in every garment we make does not tend to pyramid the price, which in the final analysis, is far lower than might be expected under prevailing conditions.

HOME RUN BAKER HOME RUNS AND THE YANKEES TOPPLE ATHLETICS ONCE MORE

BAKER'S BAT HELPS RAY CALDWELL WIN

J. Franklin Hits Homer, Tying Score, and Later Starts a Rally That Beats Macks.

VEAN GREGG SHOWS SKILL

Veteran's Efforts Wasted, However, New York Taking Half of Double Bill Permitted by Weather.

Aided and abetted by J. Franklin Baker's potent bat and the wabbly attitude of Connie Mack's pony infield, Ray Caldwell achieved his second pitching victory of the season by defeating the one-time proud Athletics, 2 to 1, yesterday at the Polo Grounds. Possibly had the weather been more to the liking of baseball owners, Caldwell might have won two games, but the rain of the night before left the field in such a soggy condition the first contest of the scheduled double-header had to be abandoned. The second started at 3 o'clock with some 8,000 fans present. Most of the fans had been present for nearly two hours waiting for the game.

The contest was worthy of a sunshiny day, rather than the cloudy, bleak, cold day foisted upon the holiday crowd. It was essentially a pitching duel between the veterans, Caldwell and Vean Gregg, the latter of whom in the last decade has twirled triumphantly and otherwise for Cleveland, the Red Sox and the Athletics, not to mention a minor league team or two. As far as the art of pitching is concerned the battle was almost even, but Baker was with Caldwell and the pony-infield of the Athletics hardly could be said to be with Gregg.

Gregg turned back the Yankees without any trouble at all for the first five innings, but made a slight mistake beginning the sixth when he served a fast ball to Baker. J. Franklin had been waiting all the afternoon and for many days before for a fast ball such as Gregg offered and Baker did not allow the opportunity to get by. He swung his bat and the ball sped on a line toward right field grandstand. A fan, seated in the front row, was so pleased with Baker's thump that he leaned over the balustrade in front of the stand and tried to catch the ball. He muffed the ball and it dropped back onto the field, but Baker got his home run just the same, as the rules cover just such possibilities.

Yanks Get Into Fray.

This smash really put the Yankees into the argument, for they had been trailing one run behind. Like Gregg, Caldwell had pitched cleverly for three innings, turning back the Athletics without great exertion, and especially easily since the fast traveling and efficient Yankee infield was playing at its best.

In the fourth Caldwell wabbled momentarily, and with him went his supporters, the result being a run for the Athletics, carried around by Tillie Walker. That was the last chance for the visitors, since Caldwell never lapsed again. He allowed the Athletics only five hits, judiciously distributed, and fanned six invaders and walked three.

The Yankees were wideawake, and played the brand of baseball that should be expected from a team safely riding in second place. In the first inning, with one out, Jake Muench, another stranger drafted by Connie Mack, was sent to first base for the Athletics in hopes of adding hitting strength. George Burns went to left field. With one out, Muench brightened the hopes of the tail enders by sending a single to centre, but his effort was nullified when Walker hit into a double play.

Peck raised hopes of a run in the Yankees' half of the same inning when, with one out, he drew a pass. Baker gave an inkling of what was to come later by sending Jamieson to the distant parts of the park to haul down his fly. Peck then stole second, catching the young infielders of Connie Mack so sound asleep that there was no one to take McAvoy's throw, and Peck got to third before Walker could retrieve the ball out in centre field. Pratt fanned trying to bring Peck home.

Bodie Halts a Run.

Elmer Miller got as far as the keystone sack in the second inning on his infield hit and McAvoy's error, but again the pinch hit was lacking. With two out in the Athletics' half of the second, Shannon and Dugan were passed, and McAvoy made a desperate attempt to bring at least one of them in, but Bodie made a pretty running catch of McAvoy's drive and retired the side.

Walker opened the fourth inning with a slow shot to Baker, which Walker had no trouble beating out. As Burns fanned Walker stole second. Gardner grounded to Peck, who had to hurry his throw to Pipp, and the throw was so wide it pulled Pipp off the bag, Walker getting to third and Gardner being safe at first. Shannon brought Walker across with the only run of the Athletics by lifting a long fly to Miller.

The Athletics had only one more good chance to score, this being in the sixth inning, when with one out, Walker walked. Burns flied out, but Gardner bounced a hit to right which put Walker on third. Shannon shoved the ball toward Baker, who made a one-handed stop and a fast throw which just got Shannon at first in a decision which brought a howl of displeasure from the Athletics.

Caldwell made a bid for victory in the fifth inning when he doubled to left with one out. Marsans was substituted for Gilhooley, but produced only an infield grounder, which put Caldwell on third but retired Marsans at first. Peck flied out and left Caldwell stranded.

Then in the sixth Baker tied up the contest with his home run. Pratt followed with a single which brought visions of more runs, but Gregg tightened up again and stopped further damage until the eighth, when his support disappeared entirely.

Baker was responsible in a way for the downfall of Gregg in the eighth when he doubled to right after Peck had fanned. Pratt took a vicious swipe at the ball and started it on a journey across second base, but Gregg stuck out his hand and intercepted it. Wisely Gregg threw to Gardner, heading off Baker, and starting a hare and hound's chase of the Trappe mauler along the second base line. Gardner threw to Shannon and Shannon made a wild throw in return when Baker started back again, the ball rolling toward the stand. Baker raced past third and headed for home, only to be stopped when Gregg retrieved the wild throw.

Baker was so far off third he could not get back and again he was in a chase. This time Gardner took no chances on a wild throw, but ran down Baker and tagged him out. During all this time Pratt had been speeding around the bases and was safe at third. Pipp slammed the first ball pitched to him toward Dugan, who fumbled, Pratt scoring the winning run, while Pipp was safe at first.

GIANTS TAKE GAME BY EARLY BATTING

McGraw's Men Bunch Hits Off Oeschger, Defeating Phillies by 6 to 3 Score.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 30.—By bunching their hits off Joe Oeschger in the first two innings of this afternoon's game the Giants compiled a lead which the Phillies failed to overcome and captured the holiday combat, 6 to 3. Al Demaree was hit hard at times and in the sixth inning had rather a hard time. However, he pulled himself together after the Phillies had registered a brace of runs and from then until the finish he held them off without trouble.

The morning game was postponed because of rain. The weather was decidedly threatening this afternoon, but about 8,000 fans turned out for the game.

An error by Luderus put Young on first base in the opening inning. Fred muffed Stock's throw of the fleet outfielder's grounder. Then Kauff pushed Young around to third with a single to right. Burns boosted a short sacrifice fly to right, which McGaffigan pulled down, Young scoring. Kauff went to second on Zimmerman's out and Fletcher drew a pass, after which Holke tripled to left centre, scoring Kauff and Fletcher.

The Phillies came right back at the Giants and scored a run in their half of the opening inning. With two out, Stock singled to left and stole second and Luderus drove him in with a double that bounced off the screen at top of the right field wall.

Oeschger was mauled by McGraw's men again in the second inning and gave way to Mule Watson in that frame. Niehoff singled to left and Demaree dumped a sacrifice bunt in front of the plate. Oeschger threw to second to head Niehoff off at that bag, but the throw was late and both runners were safe. Young forced Demaree, Niehoff reaching third, and on Kauff's single to right Bert tallied and Young advanced to third.

Burns was thrown out by Stock, who made a fine stop of his bounder back of third base, but Young scored on the play and Zimmerman's single to centre scored Kauff. At this point Pat Moran called Watson to the rescue, and on the first ball the Mule pitched to Fletcher Zimmerman was thrown out stealing.

Watson remained in the box until the fifth, when Ben Tincup batted for him and the Indian assumed the pitching burden in the following frame. The Giants made only two hits off Watson and three off Tincup and threatened to score only once after the second inning. In the fifth Kauff was nipped at the plate by Bancroft on a close play.

The Phillies earned their two runs in the sixth by nicking Demaree for four hits, one of them a double. Two men had been retired before the rally was begun. Luderus singled to right and scored all the way from first on Cravath's double to left, a screeching drive which George Burns knocked down as it was about to wing its way into the left field bleacher.

Meusel singled to centre, scoring Cravath, and McGaffigan singled to left, but the rally came to an end when Burns caught a short fly from Dilhoefer's bat.

VAUGHN CHECKS THE REDS.

Earns Even Break for Cubs by Hitting and Pitching.

CHICAGO, May 30.—Chicago by defeating Cincinnati 2 to 1 in the afternoon game broke even on the holiday bill today, the visitors having won the morning contest 9 to 6. The work of Jim Vaughn was the deciding factor in the afternoon game. He struck out twelve of the visitors and allowed only six hits. His three-base hit, which preceded a triple by Flack, scored the winning run.

The game was marked by a fist fight between Catcher Killifer and Outfielder Earl Neale. Bressler, in the seventh, hit a little pop-up in front of the plate. Killifer tried for the ball, but missed it and it went foul. Neale, who was coming up to bat, claimed it a fair ball, and said that Killifer touched it before it went foul.

Words were exchanged between the players, and while Killifer held his mask in one hand and his glove in the other Neale attacked the catcher, threw him to the ground, and hit him in the face several times. Killifer had to leave the game. Neale was led off the field by Umpire Rigler.

DARTMOUTH HELD HITLESS.

Holy Cross Pitcher Allows Only Two Men to Reach First.

Special to The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., May 30.—Holy Cross won its eighth straight game here today, shutting out Dartmouth 4 to 0. Ryan pitched a no-hit game, the first ever pitched on the college diamond. Not a Dartmouth man reached second base and only two got to first, and these by errors.

Captain O'Neil's home run drive to deep centre in the fifth was one of the longest hits seen on the field this year.

WILLIAMS DOWNS AMHERST.

Three Runs in Eighth Inning Decide Annual Game.

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., May 30.—Williams romped away from Amherst in the closing innings of their annual game here today, winning by 9 to 4. Up to the eighth it was anybody's victory, but the purple then came through with three runs which settled the issue.

Amherst put up a wretched fielding game; weakness on the defense being the chief cause of defeat. There was little to choose between the two twirlers, neither of whom was batted hard. Zink of Amherst had better control, but Burrows of Williams was steadier.

ROBINS NOW ROOST ON LOWLIEST RUNG

Double Defeat by Braves Sends Superbas to Bottom of Pennant Ladder.

The Brooklyn Robins succumbed to a double-barreled defeat yesterday at Ebbets Field, at the hands of the Braves. Boston won the first half of the double bill, 2 to 1, and the second by 4 to 3. As a result, Colonel C. H. Ebbets's clan slid smoothly into last place in the National League standing.

There wasn't any sunshine on the Flatbush frontier during either of the conflicts. During the entire afternoon a steady drizzle fell on the biggest portion of the 8,000 fans who witnessed the contests. Umbrellas were much in evidence in the lower stand, and overcoats prevailed everywhere.

One bright ray glistened through the gloom, but it was only a ray of hope in the breasts of the Brooklyn fans. This was in the ninth inning of the second encounter, when the Robins needed three runs to tie the count and four to win. An assault on the slants of Bunny Hearne gave the Robins three men on base before any were out.

Jimmy Johnson arose to the emergency and drove in two runs with a ripping single to centre, and then Mack Wheat, brother of the versatile Zach, approached the plate as a pinch hitter for Mike Doolan. Mack lined to Rawlings, who doubled Johnston at second. Then Hy Myers, becoming impatient, tried a steal of home, and therewith the dull, drab day became more so.

Opposed to Hearne in the second game was Dan Griner. While Dan was toiling his good right arm off, Ollie O'Mara, the Robin third sack guardian, did a lot to discourage him in the third inning. Henry grounded to O'Mara and Ollie threw low to Johnston at first. Hearne sacrificed and Rawlings flied to Wheat. Buck Herzog then bumped a grounder to O'Mara and Ollie foozled, allowing Herzog to reach first and Henry third. From third Henry tallied on Powell's single to right, after which Wickland flied to Olson.

That run gave the Braves confidence, and in the seventh they added two more, another Brooklyn error, by Hickman this time, adding to the visitors' success. Griner started the inning by fanning Red Smith. Ed Konetchy singled to left and took second on Rehg's safe rap to right. Then Henry singled to right, scoring Konetchy, and when Hickman's low throw to O'Mara went sailing on its way to the grandstand back of third base, Rehg romped home with Boston's third run.

A luminous error by Buck Herzog caused Brooklyn's first run to trickle over the plate in the seventh. The error came on O'Mara's grounder and Ollie went to second on Hickman's sound thump to left. Zach Wheat forced Hickman at second and Hy Myers popped to Konetchy, but on Johnston's single to right O'Mara scored.

Griner was relieved of his duty in the eighth and Rube Marquard finished the game without trouble. The Rube had also filled in as relief twirler in the opening fracas.

Burleigh Grimes and his right-hand flinging carried the hopes of the Robins in the opener, but Burleigh did not size up to the occasion as had been planned. Al Wickland waded into Burleigh's offerings and with a double and a triple pounded in Boston's 2-to-1 victory. Wickland's double came in the first and sent Powell, who had previously singled, home with the first Braves run. In the eighth Herzog got a life at first when Johnston fumbled his grounder and Wickland tripled to right, scoring Buck. Miller's single, an error on Olson's single to centre by Powell, and a wild pitch gave the Robins their only tally.

Dick Rudolph, the Braves twirler, was about the field during practice in the Boston uniform, evidently having reconsidered his decision to remain a holdout. No details of Rudolph's return, however, were given out by the club officials.

ANITA HOME FIRST IN RACE ON SOUND

Eleven Yachts Compete in Initial Wartime Regatta of L. I. Association.

Wartime yacht racing was attempted on Long Island Sound yesterday, under the auspices of the Harlem Yacht Club. It was the first open regatta scheduled by the Yacht Racing Association of Long Island Sound since the United States entered the world's war. Only eleven yachts raced, poor weather conditions being largely to blame for the small fleet.

Throughout the morning a nasty wind whipped down the Sound from the east, kicking up a sea that was entirely too large for small craft. Owing to Government restrictions the courses were all within East Chester Bay. Inside the bay, the breeze was not so strong, although it had enough body to bury lee rails of the smaller craft in true racing form. The course chosen by the committee, made up of T. B. Bates, Chairman; J. J. Lyons, and P. J. Fox, gave the yachts a reach on the port tack, a jibe and a reach on the starboard tack, and a beat home.

G. P. Granbery's Anita won on both actual and corrected time in the first and second division of the handicap class. R. W. Fraser's Sirene turned the same trick in the third and fourth division of the same class. Sirene also won in the Larchmont inter-club class.

F. J. Robinson's Mahaska was the first home in the Manhasset Bay one design class and Belle Seven won in the Cats.

KNAPP'S FILLY, ELFIN QUEEN, SHATTERS RECORD FOR JUVENILE STAKES AT BELMONT PARK

ELFIN QUEEN SETS MARK FOR JUVENILE

Historic Turf Event Is Won by H. K. Knapp's Filly from Fast Field of Colts.

TOBOGGAN TO NATURALIST

J. E. Widener's Imported Colt Outruns Stars of Turf in Six-Furlong Sprint.

More than 15,000 persons crowded into Belmont Park yesterday to see turf history made when H. K. Knapp's filly, Elfin Queen, defeated a fine field of two-year-old colts in the historic Juvenile Stakes, and Joseph E. Widener added to his many turf triumphs this season by capturing the Toboggan Handicap with the imported four-year-old colt Naturalist.

Both victories were achieved over a track covered with water, and both races were run in fast time. The palm in this respect, however, rested with Elfin Queen as the daughter of Disguise-Sprite skimmed lightly over the soft surface and established a new record of 0:58 3-5 for the event, displacing the figures of 0:59 made by Lena Misha in 1915 and last year by Lucullite.

The holiday card was the most attractive presented this season and included a steeplechase handicap which resulted in a popular victory for Al Reeves, owned by the Greentree Stable, the racing establishment of Mrs. Payne Whitney. That the stand accommodation had been reduced by the fire of last Spring made no difference to the enthusiastic racegoers, who knew that the thoroughbred tests would take place no matter how bad were the weather conditions. Every train from Manhattan and Brooklyn was crowded and as the time approached for the first race there was a crush outside the gates that taxed the excellent arrangements for taking care of the public.

Those who were so fortunate to get inside the park early quickly occupied the available seats, but the grand stand was soon crowded and the late comers had to stand on the lawn or in the aisles and be content with an idea of the thrilling races gained from the shouts of the lucky ones holding points of vantage. Though there was no crush in the clubhouse that inclosure was well filled by sportsmen well known in business circles.

Major Belmont, who was in uniform, was busy looking after the comfort of the thousands of guests, and he expressed gratification of the management at having attracted such a representative crowd to pay tribute to the horse.

Lord Brighton Public Choice.

There was an exodus to the paddock while the youngsters were being saddled for the Juvenile, for the experts realized that the future stars of the turf were on view, many of them for the first time. Except for Elfin Queen all of the eleven starters were colts, with the Brighton Stable's Lord Brighton receiving the most attention prior to the race. This son of Ballot is a well-turned chestnut, which looked fit to race for a kingdom, but ran disappointingly in the going.

Many of the turfmen preferred the lines of Elfin Queen, a stately looking black, that looks big enough now for the three-year-old class. The paddock inspection caused this future Queen of the turf, for such she seems destined to become, to be warmly supported, so that she closed a strong second choice to Lord Brighton. The Wanderer, one of the fleet youngsters raced in Maryland; Walter M. Jefford's Routledge, and R. T. Wilson, Jr.'s, Hannibal, all were admired by the critical crowd.

The race itself requires little description as Elfin Queen was at all times mistress of the situation and scurried through the five furlongs throwing mud in the faces of the sturdy colts, which strained every effort in trying to follow her giddy pace. The purple and gold squares of the Oneck Stable were in the van by a good three lengths as soon as the horses could be distinguished by the thousands in the stands. The filly was moving freely and easily under the mild riding of Shuttinger, while McTaggart, on Hannibal, was urging his mount to keep in touch with the flying leader. Some distance back came Lord Brighton, Routledge and Blairgowrie, with most of the others floundering in the mud and entirely outpaced.

McTaggart never gave up the attempt to get on even terms with the filly, but the stern chase was hopeless and at the sixteenth pole Shuttinger, on Elfin Queen, realized that the race was already won and eased up the filly so that Hannibal began to cut down the lead. That Elfin Queen would have had a much larger margin of victory if ridden out was apparent, but as it was she sailed smoothly over the line with a clear length to spare. Hannibal's desperate attempt to catch the unbeatable filly carried him four lengths in front of Routledge, which beat Lord Brighton by half a length for show honors.

Papp Has First Race.

More interest was given to the Toboggan by the adding of George W. Loft's Papp to the field, which was brought up to eleven speedy sprinters by the further addition of Green Gold to make up for the scratching of Kalitan. It was the first appearance this season of Papp, which had won the Futurity in similar going last year, but his chances were not seriously considered in view of the great race run by Motor Cop, another three-year-old, that had won the Stuyvesant Handicap from Jack Hare, Jr., and Sun Briar. Motor Cop, in spite of the fact that he had to carry two and a half pounds extra so that Loftus might ride, was a strong favorite, even though the field contained such proved sprinters as Roamer and Old Koenig.

Naturalist, which had been only a moderate performer last season, was accorded considerable support because of the recent success of the Widener entries. He was in with the light weight of 107 pounds, and was in receipt of actual weight from three of the three-year-olds.

As in the Juvenile the race was almost a procession, Buxton sending out Naturalist at the start and hustling the son of Rabelais along so that he held a lead of two lengths at the bend in the track. Loftus was doing his level best on Motor Cop to cut down this advantage, but the younger horse never had a chance to catch the French-bred horse, which reveled in the going. The vigorous riding of the crack jockey brought Motor Cop a little nearer at the finish, but Naturalist had a length and a half to spare as he passed the judges. The time of 1:10 has only been beaten once since the Toboggan has been run at Belmont Park.

The other races were full of interest, Troise landing N. K. Beal winner by a head in the fifth, while W. R. Coe's Under Fire just managed to stave off the challenge of Grimalkin in the sixth.

AIREDALE BEST IN SHOW.

F. C. Hood's Elm's Primus Winner of Long Island K. C. Display.

Frederic C. Hood's Airedale bitch Elm's Primus won the silver trophy for the best dog or bitch at the Seventeenth Annual Dog Show of the Long Island Kennel Club held yesterday at Gravesend Race Track. The best of opposite sex was the Lismore Kennels' mahogany-colored Irish setter, Champion Lismore Freedom, which won the first award for sporting dogs at Montreal last week.

Mr. Hood's bitch, which is three years old and weighs 43 pounds, was the best Airedale of her sex at the show of the Westminster Kennel Club in New York last February.

A large crowd attended the show, in spite of the threatening weather. Dogs of forty-six breeds were exhibited, competing for trophies worth more than $5,000.

An unexpected episode was the winning of three blue ribbons by a dog that had never been shown before, John Richardson's Chinese Girl. She is a light brown Chow Chow, eight months old, and she was first among the puppies, the novices, and the winners of the bitches of her breed.

The biggest German sheepdog that has been seen at recent shows, Miss Coot's Artluss Mercedes, won the blue ribbon for his breed and sex. He weighs 91 pounds.

NORSE GIRL BEATEN IN MIXED DOUBLES

Miss Bjurstedt and Julian Myrick Lose in Tourney of Leading Tennis Stars.

Mixed doubles play that was worthy of a national championship tournament was seen on the courts of the Pelham Country Club yesterday afternoon, where there were gathered many of the leading men and women tennis stars of the metropolitan section. To those who were not in the secret it was an unexpectedly imposing array that the draw disclosed, the tournament being by all odds the most pretentious in many a day.

Play in two rounds was completed, and one team—that composed of Miss Marion Chapman and J. B. Hughes—advanced through the third round of the event into the semi-finals. So keen was the doubles competition that it almost overshadowed the semi-final match of the women's singles, when Mrs. Edward Raymond triumphed over Mrs. Rawson L. Wood in straight sets at 6—3, 6—3. The other semi-final between Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Miss Marie Wagner was not played.

The mixed doubles, after two rounds, showed several prominent players among the defeated. The most notable instance was the downfall of Miss Molla Bjurstedt, who was paired with Julian S. Myrick, Acting President of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association. In a first-round encounter these two were forced to acknowledge the superiority of Miss Elizabeth Moore, onetime holder of the women's national singles championship, and H. B. O'Boyle, the former Georgetown player, at 7—5, 4—6, 6—4. It must be said for Miss Bjurstedt, however, that it was not so much her fault that they were forced to accept defeat as it was Myrick's. Prestige of office carried no weight on the courts, and the head of the national association showed an inclination toward errors that were especially costly at critical moments in the fray.

Some of the finest playing of the day was done by Miss Florence Ballin and William T. Tilden 2d of Philadelphia. It was this team which was runner up for the mixed doubles laurels in the national patriotic tournament at the Philadelphia Cricket Club last summer. Tilden has twice been a national champion in mixed doubles, having held the title with Miss Mary Brown. In the first round Miss Ballin and Tilden vanquished Mrs. Spencer Fullerton Weaver and W. A. Campbell at 6—3, 6—2 and in the second round earned a brilliant triumph over Mrs. Homer S. Green and J. S. O'Boyle. Only two sets were necessary in this case, the score being 6—4, 6—2.

Miss Marion Chapman and J. B. Hughes, who reached the semi-final round, won their way through the first round by defeating Miss Clare Cassel and Jacques Thiebault by the rather surprising score of 6—1, 6—1. In the second round they advanced because of the default of Mrs. Marshall McLean and partner and ended the day's play with a victory over Mrs. E. V. Lynch and W. Touissaint at 6—4, 7—5.

One of the most hotly-contested matches was the first round encounter which Miss Marie Wagner and Herbert Forster, the Yonkers schoolboy, won from Miss Margaret Grove and G. Carlton Shafer. This was a marathon which took the better part of an afternoon to bring to a conclusion, the winners taking the contest at 8—6, 7—9, 6—3.

In the women's singles the advance of Mrs. Raymond was foreshadowed by her play earlier in the event, but it was hardly expected that she would defeat Mrs. Wood quite so decisively as was the case. Both women played largely a baseline type of game with the exception that Mrs. Raymond came to the net occasionally to finish off a point after having forced the opening for such an advance. During the early part of each set Mrs. Wood played admirably, but somehow when it came to the final games her play weakened as Mrs. Raymond's gained aggressiveness. In the last set Mrs. Wood was leading at 3—2 on games only to have Mrs. Raymond run off four straight games for the set and match.

The summaries:

Singles, Semi-Final Round.—Mrs. Edward Raymond defeated Mrs. Rawson L. Wood, 6—3, 6—3.

Mixed Doubles, First Round.—Miss Marion Chapman and J. B. Hughes defeated Miss Clare Cassel and Jacques Thiebault, 6—1, 6—1; Mrs. Homer S. Green and J. S. O'Boyle defeated Mrs. W. H. Pritchard and H. A. Wyckoff, 6—0, 6—2; Miss Florence Ballin and W. T. Tilden, 2d., defeated Mrs. Spencer F. Weaver and W. A. Campbell, 6—3, 6—2; Miss Helene Pollak and D. William Rosenbaum won from Miss Elizabeth Holden and T. Walsh by default; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Raymond defeated Mr. and Mrs. Ingo Hartman, 9—7, 3—6, 6—4; Miss Elizabeth Moore and H. B. O'Boyle defeated Miss Molla Bjurstedt and Julian S. Myrick, 7—5, 4—6, 6—4; Mrs. R. S. Leachman and Elliott Binger defeated Mrs. Albert Humphries and Embree Henderson, 6—4, 6—4; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Thurber won from Miss Grace Gillieaudeau and H. A. Wyckoff by default; Miss Marie Wagner and Herbert Forster defeated Miss Margaret Grove and H. J. Steinkampf, 8—6, 7—9, 6—3.

Second Round.—Mrs. E. V. Lynch and Walter Toussaint defeated Miss Caroma Winn and Alexander Iler, 6—3, 6—4; Miss Marion Chapman and J. B. Hughes won from Mrs. Marshall McLean and partner by default; Miss Florence Ballin and W. T. Tilden, 2d, defeated Mrs. Homer S. Green and J. S. O'Boyle, 6—4, 6—2; Mrs. Leachman and Elliott Benyen defeated Miss Elizabeth Moore and H. B. O'Boyle, 6—4, 7—5; Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin F. Briggs defeated Miss Edith Handy and Norman Johnson, 8—6, 6—3; Mrs. George L. Chapman and R. E. Black defeated Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Morris, 6—2, 5—7, 6—1; Miss Helen Pollak and Dr. Rosenbaum defeated Mr. and Mrs. Edward Raymond, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4.

Third Round.—Miss Marion Chapman and J. B. Hughes defeated Mrs. E. V. Lynch and W. Touissaint, 6—4, 7—5.

WEIGHT RECORD SHATTERED

McDonald Throws 35-Pound Missile 63 Feet 5 Inches.

Patrick J. McDonald, Olympic champion at putting the shot, and a member of the Police Department's traffic squad, yesterday established a new world's record for the 35-pound weight throw for distance, at Celtic Park, when he heaved the missile a distance of 63 feet 5 inches. This eclipsed the previous figures of 57 feet ⅞ inch, made by Pat Ryan, hammer throwing champion, in 1913. Matt McGrath, of the New York A. C., lately promoted to a Lieutenancy in the Police Department, also bettered the old record, in finishing second to McDonald. McGrath accounted for an effort of 61 feet 8 inches. John Conway, of the Irish-American A. C., was third with 53 feet 6 inches.

McDonald made his record in an all-around weight throwing competition held at the old athletic field in Long Island under the auspices of the Irish-American A. C., as a memorial to the memory of the late Martin J. Sheridan. The purpose of the games was to raise funds for the memorial fund. McDonald also won the 16-pound shot put, and got second in the 16-pound hammer event. This gave the big traffic policeman the individual honors of the all-around event. McGrath was second and Conway third.

The summaries:

Putting 16-Pound Shot.—Won by Pat McDonald, unattached, with 50 feet 6 inches; Matthew J. McGrath, New York A. C., with 37 feet 3 inches, second; John Conway, Irish-American A. C., with 34 feet, third.

Throwing 16 Pound Hammer.—Won by Matthew J. McGrath, New York A. C., with 176 feet 9 inches; Pat McDonald, unattached, with 149 feet, second; John Conway, Irish-American A. C., with 139 feet 8 inches, third.

Throwing 35-Pound Weight for Distance.—Won by Pat McDonald, unattached, with 68 feet 5 inches; Matthew J. McGrath, New York A. C., with 61 feet 8 inches, second; John Conway, Irish-American A. C., with 53 feet 6 inches, third.

CLOSE MATCH AT DOUBLES.

Alexander and Shafer Win Tennis Contest at Sleepy Hollow.

Somewhat as a consolation for the calling off of the annual invitation tennis tournament at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club an exhibition doubles match was played there yesterday between four star racquet wielders. The victors were Frederick B. Alexander and G. Carlton Shafer, who defeated Beals Wright and Walter Merrill Hall in a sparkling five-set match at 2—6, 4—6, 6—2, 6—4, 7—5. Wright and Hall played remarkably clever tennis during the first two sets, and held Alexander and Shafer to a defensive game. Shafer was the target during this time, but instead of his play showing the effects of the fast pace it seemed to improve, and in the last three sets Shafer was a tower of strength.

He came to the net with Alexander and smashed and volleyed with amazing proficiency, and his repeated kills were whipped down so viciously that there was no chance of making a return. Furthermore, he was steady and brilliant in his ground strokes, and, with Alexander playing at top speed, Wright and Hall were completely at sea during the third and fourth sets. In the last set there was a determined effort to halt the progress of the rival pair, but Alexander and Shafer established the set to their credit after it had once gone to deuce.

TO PLAY ON GRASS COURTS.

Women Will Compete for Metropolitan Tennis Title June 10.

Additional prestige has been given this year to the women's metropolitan tennis championship, which will be played on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills during the week of June 10. It has been the contention of the women players for some time that there were not enough grass court tournaments preceding the national championship at the Philadelphia Cricket Club to furnish adequate practice. Heretofore the Metropolitan women's championship has been played on clay courts, but this season it is to be played on grass.

Furthermore, the event has the place of honor among the preliminary tournaments, for it scheduled only a week ahead of the national championships at the Philadelphia Cricket Club. Miss Molla Bjurstedt is the present holder of the Metropolitan championship. Entries for the singles tournament close with Miss Florence Ballin at the West Side Tennis Club on Saturday, June 8.

BINZEN ENLISTS IN NAVY.

Former National Junior Indoor Net Champion Joins Service.

Elliott Binzen, former holder of the national junior indoor tennis championship and one of the most proficient of the younger players in this section, announced yesterday that he had enlisted in the navy and would report at the Pelham Bay Naval Training Station within a short time.

Frederick B. Alexander is also about to enroll at Pelham Bay, where there are already several prominent tournament players, among them Ward Dawson of California and J. S. and H. B. O'Boyle, both of Georgetown. It has also been announced that Harold Throckmorton is about to enter the service, but it is expected that he will go into the artillery branch.

SHADOW OVER LINE FIRST.

Leads Star Class Yachts at Regatta of Bayside Y. C.

Twelve yachts, representing three classes, crossed the starting line in the Memorial Day regatta over the triangular course of the Bayside Yacht Club in Little Neck Bay yesterday afternoon. A variable eastern wind proved intermittent flashes of power, and every one of the boats, except Jack Robinson's Great Dipper, in the Star class, finished.

W. L. Inslee, who scored marked success last year in his yacht Shadow, in the Star class, started the season with a victory, leading a field of six across the line. He won by a margin of 2 minutes and 15 seconds over George Abbott's Aria.

H. H. Clark's Befirst of the Bee class joined the Peggy and Mavro in a triangular race of the one-design class. The Peggy, owned by F. B. Smith, won by a comfortable margin, while the Bee entry just reached the finish ahead of the Mavro, which is owned jointly by Messrs. Purchase and Bell.

Before the races started yesterday the burgee was raised by Commodore William B. Teller with patriotic ceremonies. During the singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner" the Stars and Stripes, the service flag, and the club burgee were raised and the club declared formally in commission. The service flag contains sixty-nine stars.

Travers and Marston Defeat Pros in Four-Ball Match for Red Cross, 5 and 4.

Jerome Travers and Max Marston sprang a surprise in a four-ball Red Cross match on the links of the Baltusrol Golf Club yesterday afternoon by defeating the well-known professionals, Jim Barnes and George Low, 5 up and 4 to play. It was a late contest such as Baltusrol has been conducting since the clock was pushed forward an hour. The match yesterday did not get under way until 4 o'clock, and supper bells were ringing before they holed out on the eighteenth green.

As was the case at Greenwich last Sunday, Marston and Travers worked in perfect harmony, the only difference being that they both knew Baltusrol. In fact, these amateurs have scored brilliantly there many times in the past, and it was only three years ago that Travers gained his last notable triumph there, winning the national open title.

Barnes had his customary length off the tees, but when it came to putting the Western open champion let several opportunities slip by. As for Low, it was one of the Baltusrol professional's off days when nothing seemed to go right.

Travers won the second hole for his side, the pros getting into trouble. Both Travers and Marston won the fifth in 4 and Marston accounted for the sixth with another 4. The professionals were 3 down then, and they made the turn 4 to the bad when Barnes took three putts on the ninth green. Marston drove that green and Travers, after being trapped, recovered beautifully, laying his niblick shot dead.

Barnes might have halved the tenth hole had he not taken three putts again. Neither he nor Low, however, had a chance at the short eleven, where Travers laid his tee shot close to the pin and ran in the putt for a 2. The amateurs were 6 up then, and to that point their opponents had not won a hole.

Barnes scored with a 4 at the twelfth, but that only prolonged the match a little, as the halves at the next two holes ended matters on the fourteenth green. Finishing the bye holes, the amateurs had a best ball of 72 as against 76 for the opposition. Travers and Marston made the round in 77, Barnes 79 and Low 83.

A large gallery of more than 500 members and guests followed the players, and nearly $800 was raised for the Red Cross.

The best ball card follows:

LOCAL OARSMEN VIE FOR HARLEM TITLES

Annual Regatta Brings Out Spirited Contests, Although Few Events Are Held.

Compared with other years the annual regatta of the New York Rowing Association on the Harlem River yesterday was little more than a remnant. Only six events were on the program, and while there were spirited brushes in these, the entry was hardly large enough to command the usual degree of attention from the spectators along the Speedway. Except in one race there were not more than two contestants in any event. The Harlem River clubs for the most part were absent from competitions.

One of the best races was the quadruple sculls event, in which the Metropolitan Rowing Club and the Nonpareil Rowing Club were the rivals. The Nonpareil men got away to a good start and kept the nose of their shell slightly in front for three-quarters of the distance. The last quarter mile, however, saw the Metropolitan crew call into the race its reserve power and with it they swept across the line winners by about half a length in the remarkably good time of 5:43 1-5.

The single sculls race went to the credit of George Froelich of the Metropolitan Rowing Club. He made the pace from the crack of the gun and crossed the line victor over Albert Kalbac by a wide margin. D. Andras of the Active Boat Club was entered in this race, but came to the starting line a bit too late to start.

The event of chief interest was the race for naval cutters, but unfortunately this was marred by a bad start. The Pelham Bay Naval Station entered two crews of twelve oars and there were two boats representing the Granite State Training Ship. The Pelham Bay first crew won the event by some three lengths, with the Granite State first crew second. It was this latter crew which was the victim of a bad start. The men were actually backing their boat into position when the starter's gun was fired, and the Pelham jackies pulled away to quite a lead. The Granite State crew made a heroic endeavor to overhaul the rival oarsmen, but fell short.

New Rochelle High School and Morris High School divided honors in the two schoolboy races. The honors in the eight-oared event fell to New Rochelle, the crew rowing a nicely judged race. To the half-mile mark there was a close contest, Stuyvesant for a time having a slight lead. New Rochelle was rowing 36 strokes to the minute and Stuyvesant 33. Both crews tried to raise the stroke after the half-way mark but could not do so.

Morris High School was victor in the high school double gig event, Stuyvesant again being the defeated crew.

7-year old Pierce-Arrow Truck repeats its run made May 28, 1911

from New York to Boston

No other truck in America could give this evidence of longevity, dependability and fundamental economy, because

No other truck today continues the same design and construction it used 7 years ago.

Were another truck to duplicate the run it would either not have had 7 years' service behind it, or its design could not be duplicated by its manufacturer today.

This Pierce-Arrow truck was the first to be marketed. It was tested thoroughly. Its New York to Boston run in 1911 was one of many tests.

Its sound design and construction, 7 years' service has demonstrated. Through these years, this basic design and construction has been proving itself day by day in service in 130 different lines of business.

It first employed the worm gear in America. Makers who then ridiculed it have since adopted it. It is the recognized standard today. This is equally true of other fundamental features of the Pierce-Arrow.

We do not think this run extraordinary, for any Pierce-Arrow truck, after 7 years' service, should be able to duplicate it.

We announce it because it proves conclusively that true economy demands the selection of a truck of sound design, built as well as possible. It pays to pay the price necessary to get these qualities.

This truck has run over 130,000 miles in service. Long ago its cost was written off the books. For several years every mile run represented PROFIT.

WHEN Pierce-Arrow truck No. 1 rolled into Boston at noon on Wednesday, completing its 230 mile run from New York in 18 hours and 7 minutes actual running time, duplicating the run it made over the same route 7 years ago, it performed a feat which cannot be equaled for years by any other truck.

Seven years ago it made its run to demonstrate the practicability of intercity motor transit and incidentally to prove the then much discussed worm gear. It completed the run with a full load in exactly 20 hours' running. Not a tool was touched and not a stop made except to replenish gasolene supply and for meals.

On its seventh anniversary run it bettered this time by 1 hour and 53 minutes, although compelled by road repairs to make a detour of nearly 10 miles. Its running schedule for the two trips is shown below:

	Miles.	1911. Hrs.	1911. Min.	1918. Hrs.	1918. Min.
Reached New Haven	73.6	6	22	5	28
Hartford	37.1	2	55	2	50
Springfield	25.6	2	15	2	15
Worcester	51.0	4	13	3	54
Boston	44.1	4	15	3	40
	231.4	20	00	18	07

It carried a load of 5 tons of oil and operated under precisely the same conditions as it would have encountered in commercial employment. Indeed its task was not dissimilar from that in which it has been engaged for most of the last seven years.

In that time it has traveled more than 130,000 miles in commercial service. It has been overhauled but once and long ago it paid back its original investment and has been earning net profits ever since. By this run it proved itself as efficient a transport as the day it originally left the factory at Buffalo. It plainly showed it had many years of service yet before it.

PIERCE-ARROW

Irrespective of initial cost Pierce-Arrow delivers a greater aggregate of work in a given time;

Pierce-Arrow loses less time, on and off the job;

Pierce-Arrow costs less to operate and less to maintain;

Pierce-Arrow lasts longer, depreciates less, and commands a higher resale price after an equivalent service.

GENERAL WOOD'S CASE.

EX-President TAFT has been and is a loyal and earnest supporter of his successor in this war, and has never wavered for a moment in that loyalty. He is beyond the suspicion of partisan motives when he offers the grave and well-considered suggestion to the Administration which we reprint today from The Philadelphia Public Ledger. When Mr. TAFT says that "the country is seriously disappointed that General WOOD has not been permitted to go abroad with the division which he has been training," the President and Secretary BAKER may rely absolutely on the sincerity of Mr. TAFT's concern and the accuracy of his information.

The country does not know why General WOOD was permitted to train a division for service abroad, to make his preparations to go abroad with it, and was then suddenly halted on the eve of sailing and ordered to stay at home. No information has been given it. It has heard rumors that the order was given for political reasons and counter-reasons, that it was given because of the jealousy of other officers. It does not know what to believe, and it is undoubtedly disturbed.

Whether it is the Administration's duty to itself to make known the real reason is a question for the Administration to decide; but it is obvious that it is the Administration's duty to the country. If the Administration's reason is good, it may decide to bear unjust imputations in silence, regarding that as the nobler part. But it is not merely a matter of the feelings of the Administration. It is a serious matter concerning the country. For the uncontradicted rumor that political grudges, personal spite, or military jealousy is responsible for the withholding of any capable officer from giving the country the service it needs from him will have a bad effect on the country's morale. It will spread doubt, chill enthusiasm. The Administration cannot permit such a chilling and disheartening suspicion to spread among the people at a time so critical as this. It owes it to the people to dissipate this doubt and depression by giving its facts and its reasons.

"The consideration that dominates every other now," said the President last Monday, "and makes every other seem trivial and negligible, is the winning of the war." Nothing that tends to spread doubt, discouragement, or suspicion should be permitted. The Administration should stifle these things at the beginning by giving frankly the reasons which governed it in the action it took regarding General WOOD.

INVESTIGATE IT AT ONCE.

It is the duty of the American Newspaper Publishers Association to demand at once from Congress an investigation of the charge made by CLAUDE KITCHIN in the House of Representatives that the association maintains a lobby in Washington which controls the action of President WILSON and Secretary MCADOO. Mr. KITCHIN charged that when the President appeared before Congress and urged the passage of a tax bill at this session, so that the taxpayers may know now what they will have to pay and adjust their businesses accordingly, he was not acting in the interest of the taxpayers, but at the behest of a lobby "maintained by the great publishers," who hoped that such a bill would nullify Mr. KITCHIN's attempt to prevent them from circulating their newspapers outside their own cities.

Mr. KITCHIN was fairly specific in his insinuations about how this lobby had acquired control of the President and the Secretary. He did "not think" that the lobby had approached these statesmen personally, but he roundly asserted that its influence had been exerted upon them "by some one" in whom the Secretary of the Treasury had great faith." This lobby, he admitted, was "unseen by most of us," but, he added, "I know their game," and I want to warn this House and the country of it."

The American Newspaper Publishers Association has a duty to perform. It should lose no time in demanding an investigation with such emphasis that the House will be compelled to grant it; and at that investigation Mr. KITCHIN should be forced either to make good his charge or retract it.

RETAIN GENERAL GORGAS.

The petitions of several national medical associations to President WILSON asking that the services of Surgeon General WILLIAM C. GORGAS be not lost to the Government during the war, because he will reach the statutory age of retirement, 64, on Oct. 1, reflect the desire of the American people, who know the career of General GORGAS and how brilliant and merited his international reputation is.

At 64 a surgeon or scientist—General GORGAS is both—may be at the meridian of his usefulness. Some of the most eminent medical men in this city are well past that age, and they still practice their profession. In France or England there would be no question of retiring an army surgeon of the attainments of General GORGAS while the war lasted. It would be considered fatuous, without the shadow of reason. The President has authority to keep the present Surgeon General in active service, notwithstanding the statutory requirement, and it would seem that it was not necessary to memorialize the President to hold fast to our most distinguished army doctor.

AMERICA FOR THE SLAVS.

Secretary LANSING announces that "the proceedings of the Congress of Oppressed Races of Austria-Hungary, which was held in Rome in April, have been followed with great interest by the Government of the United States," and that "the nationalistic aspirations of the Czecho-Slovaks and the Jugoslavs for freedom have the earnest sympathy of this Government." On account of the earlier imperialistic Italian war claims, there was until recently a sharp division between the South Slavs and the Italians. In the last six or seven months the liberal and democratic feeling of Italy has altered radically Italian sentiment in regard to South Slav problems. In London, in March, an understanding was reached between Mr. TORRI, the head of an Italian committee, and Mr. TRUMBISH, the President of the Jugoslav Committee. The extreme demands of the London Convention of April, 1915, had been thrown away. Neither in Italy nor in any other Entente country were jingo ideas in favor. The time of concession and compromise on a basis of democratic freedom had been reached. Thus the Congress of Oppressed Nationalities, which met in Rome April 8 to April 10, was able to lay down a common policy for Italians, Czecho-Slovaks, Jugoslavs, Rumanians, and Poles. The congress adopted without dissent both the agreements made by Mr. TORRI and Mr. TRUMBISH and the resolutions formulated by the representatives of the different nationalities. The platform of joint action declares the right of each of the peoples to national unity and complete independence, economic and political; declares that the Hapsburg Monarchy is the means of assuring German sway and the basic impediment to the attainment of the national ambitions of each people; declares that they must struggle unitedly against their oppressors, so that each people may be liberated and united.

The Jugoslav and Italian representatives declared that Jugoslav unity and independence is vital to Italy as the completion of Italian national unity is vital to the Jugoslav nation. They pledged themselves to make every effort in war and at the peace council for the complete attainment of those vital interests. "The liberation of the Adriatic Sea, and its defense against every present and future enemy," is a vital interest of the two peoples. They bind themselves to settle in a friendly manner their territorial disputes on "the basis of the principles of nationality and of the right of peoples to decide their own fate, and in such a way as not to injure the vital interests of the two nations, such as shall be defined at the moment of peace." Each people guarantees to a minority of the other included within its frontiers the right to use its language, culture, and moral and economic interests.

Mr. ORLANDO, the Italian Premier, drew a sympathetic parallel between the aspirations of Italy, in the past, and those of the Slavs. The "firm resolve of the Bohemian people," he said, "to revive the Glorious Kingdom which had so valiantly stemmed the onset of the Germans, is the same resolve with which our ancestors and our fathers conspired and revolted, that Italy might become a united State. The impetuous and vigorous conscience of the Southern Slavs and the Rumanians of Transylvania already has its heroes and martyrs; and here they are met by the endless stream of our own heroes and martyrs, who across time and space fraternize on the scaffold erected by their common butcher." Italy makes common cause with the oppressed nationalities of Austria-Hungary, and the United States expresses its "earnest sympathy" with the aspirations of these nationalities for freedom. The statement of Mr. LANSING, if, in a sense, of military purpose as encouraging revolution in Austria-Hungary, is primarily a detail in the general democratic policy of freedom.

WHY TEACH GERMAN?

Before the war it was possible to urge the teaching of the German language as a cultural study. Since the war Kultur has gained such odium that the cultural argument has not merely ceased to have force. The thoughts unfit to be thought even by adult thinkers are surely unfit to be printed or to be taught to youthful minds in a formative stage. That culture is worse than useless which is acquired at the cost of character and morality. Already there is complaint that our schools are deficient in teaching that first quality of citizenship. Dr. PARKHURST's last sermon in the Madison Square Presbyterian Church this week lamented that our public schools teach their pupils "to be keen, and qualify them to plot mischief, to break the laws without detection, to set loose restless ideas, and to talk revolution." The teaching of German Kultur is no antidote to that tendency toward Bolshevism. And the teaching of German gives nothing which cannot be got as well in other languages equally cultural and of greater utility in the conditions of this continent.

Our situation is not like that of the countries which are neighbors of Germany. A few hours put the traveler in Europe into Germany from almost all countries near Mitteleuropa, and carry the Germans into those countries. Where there is such an interchange of citizens there is a similar interchange of trade, and German language is among the near necessities. The same is true of all the European languages, and it is true of any of them here in far less degree. We are fortunate enough not to be neighbors of Germany. We can do all the trade we are likely to do with Germany without the use of German. Let the Germans learn our language if they want to trade with those who will prefer to trade with others than Germans.

Our continental conditions point to instruction in a language with peoples more compatible with our culture and our trade. Spanish is a better Pan-American language than German, and the better we speak it the better friends we shall be with those with whom it is to our advantage to be friendly, because we and they are opposed to Germany as a common enemy, if there were no other reason. Moreover, the fact that we are not a homogeneous people puts a discount on the teaching of any foreign language in preference to our own as a matter of better citizenship. So long as there is complaint of deficient instruction in English in our lower schools there is a case against teaching even Spanish, and a fortiori German. Unity of language is one prime promoter of unity of citizenship, and that is as well worth thinking of as the acquirement of German thoughts unfit to be printed.

There could be a different argument if it were possible to teach German in a manner which should give access to German thoughts of the 40s, when our citizenship acquired some of its best elements. But the education which puts those thoughts within reach of the young also puts them in the way of acquiring the mental and moral diseases which are to the German nation like blood diseases to the individual.

NATIONALIZING THE EXPRESS BUSINESS.

The settlement of the express problem is on all fours with the settlement of the railway problem. In both cases the trouble arose from "scientific" but impractical regulation, and in both cases the Government had to prescribe to cure the fits into which the Interstate Commerce Commission threw the patient. Nothing could have been further from the intent of the Interstate Commerce Commission than the results of its acts. The Commission meant only good, and expected popularity and power as the result of its reducing the profits and rates of the unpopular express companies. The new scheme of express rates was as symmetrical and logical as the postal zone rates. But they were as bad for the patient as the postal zone rates threaten to be.

The railway and express settlements are alike in that both preserve some of the benefits of both private initiative and public regulation. It might be asked why the Government did not let the express companies fade away and simply absorb their business for nothing. There was a specific proposal of that sort in the suggestion that the Government should establish a "pickup" plan and "store delivery," that is to say, should conduct the entire business of transportation between sender and receiver of goods. That is the foreign custom. Our method resulted in terminal problems which cost more for local delivery than for the line haul, and contributed not a little to the stoppage of all traffic in the manner which needs no description.

Government operation of the express companies should end the terminal problem. Users of the express system should be relieved of the cost and trouble of delivering their freight to the railways, or of removing their consignments from the railway premises, where goods have piled up so that confusion and blockade reigned supreme. The arrangement gives the Government at half price the benefit of an organized and trained system in addition to the value of the plant, which is worth much more than what it would cost to acquire, if indeed it could be got at any reasonable cost under present conditions. The express terminals are already organized in connection with the railways, and they turn over some 30,000 motor vehicles which it would be inconvenient for the Director General to buy under present conditions. The 100,000 employés of the four unified companies will serve the public better under one organization, no doubt, and the Director General is relieved of the unnecessary trouble of organizing a business of considerable size, even when compared with the railways. On the basis of the period for which the railways are guaranteed future earnings, the express companies show earnings of $3,700,000.

There is no guarantee of express earnings, but the partnership of the Government with the express companies can have no difficulty in earning 5 per cent. on the capitalization of $30,000,000. There is rather a prospect that the economies of unification, and the natural growth of improved service, will result in larger profits. Above 5 per cent. the Government is the preferred partner, its share rising as the profit rises, until the Government's share is threefold that of the companies. It is a promising bargain for all concerned, the companies, the Government, and the patrons of them both. Probably the taint of immorality arising from the distress of the companies by Government action will trouble nobody, although the tide now is setting in favor of business as strongly as it had set against it.

MR. WILSON ON THRIFT.

The American people are now engaged in the business of war, but all of them do not seem to know it. Mainly to those who do not know it President WILSON's appeal to practice thrift to win the war is addressed. When a man of moderate means, who likes to pay as he goes, has planned an addition to his house he reduces his budget for a year or two, foregoes pleasures that are expensive, and wastes nothing. He does not regard economy as a hardship, for he is sure of his reward. The addition to his house is built and he is the richer for his self-denial.

To use him as an illustration, that man is now asked to save out of his profits, salary, or wages, in order to lend the United States Government money to carry on the war to victory and to a righteous and enduring peace, with all its blessings. There cannot be victory and such a peace unless all the resources of America are made available, to the last man and the last dollar. Defeat would prove disastrous not only to every man who owns a house or has a deposit in a savings bank but to all men and women who work for wages or salary. The latter would suffer infinitely more than the property-owners, but what a wreck of values there would be, and what industrial chaos, if terms of peace were imposed by a triumphant and relentless Germany!

Secretary MCADOO was right when he said that "the American people are not sufficiently aroused to the necessity of economy and of saving. In this really serious time not only in the life of America but of the nations of the world." It is difficult indeed to make a people divided from the horrible carnage in Europe by the Atlantic understand, as the people of France and Britain understand to their sorrow and alarm, that the war with the Teutonic Powers is a desperate and continuing crisis, and that defeat, with inevitable ruin and loss of liberty, is averted from day to day and hour to hour only by heroic valor and stern sacrifice. But the American people have got to understand it, if their allies are to be saved, if they, the American people, are to save themselves.

When Russia utterly collapsed, the writing on the wall, until then invisible, flamed into the ominous message to America that unless she employed her entire resources, her man power and her wealth, all that was dear to liberty-loving and civilized nations would be lost. But even then purblind and complacent Americans—and what a host of them there were!—did not understand. Now their vision is clearing as the Germans beat back the armies of the Allies in France, and it seems as if only the genius of FOCH and the coming of American reinforcements can turn the tide of battle and give the sorely beset Allies a breathing spell and hope of ultimate victory.

"Everything wasted now is nothing short of criminal," Secretary MCADOO has said. It could be illustrated endlessly. At Gheluvelt, Sir CHARLES FITZCLARENCE, by rushing a Norfolk battalion into the breach, saved Ypres when Marshal FRENCH had already given the order to retire and the day seemed lost. The ammunition fired by the English county soldiers may have cost £100. SANDEMAN CAREY only the other day saved Sir HUBERT GOUGH's army by closing a yawning gap in the line with picked-up troops, some of them Americans. Whatever the gallant enterprise cost, it could have been no more than what is represented by a liberal subscription to a Liberty Loan or by the sum of a good many small subscriptions.

To Secretary MCADOO's appeal President WILSON adds his potential call, which all America hears. Mr. WILSON declares that "the practice of individual thrift is a patriotic duty and a necessity." If there is little thrift, that is to say if the American people are heedless, the next Liberty Loan will not be floated. There must be preparations in every household to take the bonds. There will have to be never-failing economy by everybody. No half measures, no compromise with the universal duty, will do. Economizing may hurt, but there must be no flinching from it. "I earnestly appeal," says the President, "to every man, woman, and child to pledge themselves on or before the 28th of June to save constantly and to buy as regularly as possible the securities of the Government, and to do this so far as possible through membership in the War Savings societies."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Everybody Is "in the War," or Should Be.

There is a relation neither remote nor indirect between President WILSON's appeal to the American people for the exercise by all of them of rigid economy in the use of materials and labor and the offer by CLARENCE H. MACKAY of his Harbor Hill estate and everything it contains to the Government as a temporary hospital and home for soldiers wounded abroad. Mr. MACKAY recognizes in this way, at once so generous and so practical, exactly the obligation to which the President called attention as resting on every one of us—the obligation to realize that now as never before has the old distinction between soldier and civilian tended to disappear, to be in several not unimportant senses entirely lost.

In the narrowly restricted wars of the past, money counted for vastly more than it does now for all who conducted it on an approach to business principles—who were not mere brigands and looters, that is. Today there are great stretches of the world's surface where the necessaries of life cannot be bought even for gold, and over the rest of it the continuance, and especially the successful continuance, of war depends less on the command of money than upon the willingness of rich and poor alike to cut down their consumption of staples—among which labor counts with the first—in order that the soldiers and sailors may be fed and clothed and housed and transported and supplied with weapons and ammunition.

So, to one degree or another, we are all "in the war." The extent to which we share its hardships and sacrifices is the measure of our loyalty to our country and its cause, and the extent to which we insist on living and dressing and eating as our resources would have justified us in other days is the measure of our selfishness, of our unintelligence—in a last analysis, of our treason. The familiar plea about not throwing out of employment the men and women engaged in what may be called the luxury trades is no longer heard with patience, except by profiteers either stupid or ruthless. Better work is calling for all of them—too often without response—and only the simple life is honorable or even decent today.

This, Too, Germany Has Done?

There is a possibly significant sentence in the dispatch from Madrid that told about the prevalence in Spain of what is described as "a grippe-like disease." This malady attacks all classes, from the King down to his humblest subjects, and is said to be spreading among the horses. As to the origin of the infection, there is offered the interesting theory that it was brought to Spain by the crews of the German submarines.

There is at least a chance that this may be true, and true, too, in spite of the fact that no such epidemic has been reported as existing in Germany. It would not be the first time that conditions as new as those attendant upon long service in submersible vessels have resulted, if not in the generation of a new sort of bacteria, at least in so changing an existing species that the disease it produces in a human host differs enough from those previously known to be called new.

It is a part of medical history, and a part undenied, if not treated as really established, that yellow fever was unknown anywhere in the world until after the trade in African slaves had been going on for some years. According to the available evidence, such as it is, that terrible fever was not brought from Africa to the two Americas, for it had not existed in Africa; it originated among the wretched creatures crowded into the holds of the slave ships and kept there in now almost unimaginable filth and torture through the endless weeks and months of a "middle passage." All the first appearances of yellow fever in epidemic form were at the ports where these slave ships landed their cargoes of "black ivory."

It is possible, though of course not very probable, that something of the same kind has happened on the German submarines. Living conditions on board of them, while different from those on the old slavers, are almost as bad, and what they would do in the way of changing familiar germs, such as those of malaria or coryza, is a matter, not of opinion or prophecy, but of experience and observation. That they might produce a malady grippe-like, but not grippe, and worse than grippe, cannot be denied offhand.

Let's Wait to Get the Facts.

There is no need to be much excited over the fact that eleven Yale seniors, when requested by their class statistician to tell who, in their opinion, now deserved to be called "the man of the hour," gave the name of the German Kaiser. Had the question been, as some of our contemporaries put it, "Who is the greatest man now alive?" the answer of the, as yet, unidentified eleven would have approached—perhaps would have reached—a significance as regards their minds and potentialities that would have justified hustling them all off to an internment camp at once. Even then, however, the sequestration might not have been necessary, for "great" is a word with scores of definitions, at the very least, and its application to the Kaiser, while it would have excited suspicion against the applicators, would not have proved admiration of him. Great the Kaiser certainly is, in some ways, and not exactly small in any, and as to deny it would be absurd, to admit it, or even to proclaim it, would not be criminal.

As for "man of the hour," that term is still more vague in its implications, and he who represents and embodies responsibility for the beginning, the continuance, and the termination of the war, no matter how dubious may be the reality of his personal influence, can truly enough be called "the man of the hour."

The situation is complicated by the fact that the class official who took this "vote" refuses to tell who voted for the Kaiser. He denies that it was the eleven German seniors that did it. Sooner or later he will have to tell the names of the boys who did this queer thing, and after their explanations have been heard, the case will be clearer than it is now.

Meanwhile, the loyalty of Yale as a university is too well established to be affected by the presence of a few pro-Germans among its students or of a pacifist or two among the members of its Faculty. Unlike King DAVID and King SOLOMON, it probably will not be said of them in song that they have "lived delightful lives." The life of a pro-German or a pacifist cannot be delightful at Yale, nowadays—and how delightful it is that it isn't!

WOMEN AT THE FRONT.

Dr. Lambert's Suggestion for a Change in Rule Barring Relatives.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Permit me to call attention to an article in today's TIMES, headed "Would Permit Women to Visit Wounded Kin," in which Major LAMBERT, Surgeon in Chief of the American Red Cross, was quoted as saying, in an address at St. Andrew's Methodist Episcopal Church on Sunday night:

"If you have any influence at Washington, use it to have rescinded the rule which does not permit sisters or other women relatives of soldiers to visit them in hospitals in France."

As a woman who has been denied a passport to go to France because I have a brother in the military service, I was particularly interested in what Major LAMBERT said concerning the need of American women in France. He referred to well soldiers rather than wounded ones, and emphasized the good which would result from having their sisters working in many capacities with the various relief organizations in France.

At the present time there is a great need for experienced business women to go to France to do office work for the American Red Cross and Y. M. C. A., and many capable women are eager to be of service in this way, but are prevented from doing so by the rule which denies a passport to a sister of a soldier.

Since a man of Major LAMBERT's standing declares that the presence of soldiers' sisters in France would be one of the greatest forces for good that could be provided, cannot an effort be made to have the rule modified in such a way that those women whose services are required may not be prevented from doing their share in this world conflict? Where the Housewife Is Appreciated

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Perhaps your correspondent today, in her spirited defense of housewifery as a noble and necessary occupation, has unconsciously given the reason why the women of Brooklyn enrolled in larger numbers than those of other parts of New York City. In that borough of homes homemaking is distinctly recognized as honorable, and the women engaged in it realize in growing numbers the ever-increasing scope of Government enactments that touch the housekeeping, that province where our grandmothers used to rule supreme.

Last Saturday in Brooklyn the Inspectors of the Board of Enrollment, when a woman hesitated to answer the question of occupation, showed appreciation of the chief work of the wife and mother by saying with a rising inflection "Housewife?" to which a grateful and smiling "Yes" was the usual response. We are impressed these days with the fact that the sensible saving and the wise spending of money are no less important and worthy of recognition than the bringing of that money into the home.

High Cost of City Elections.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In examining the 1918 budget of Mount Vernon I notice the following items of expense: Elections, $14,000; special election, $8,000; total, $22,000. A tidy sum for the taxpayers to meet in times like these. It seems to me and others whom I have spoken with that a radical reduction in the high cost of municipal governments all over the country is in order. The sooner the taxpayers of the United States form an organization for their own protection the better. ANHORA.

SUPPLICATION.

(Recalling Demosthenes' invocation to the gods in "The Oration on the Crown.")

Afar we seem to hear o'er centuries
Athena's greatest orator invoke
The gods whose will sways human destinies,
Revealed by Delphi or Dodona's oak.
The winged words that then, inspired, he spoke
Have flown across the mighty gulf of Time
With something still of might with which they broke
Awed silence of the throng that heard their chime
In ancient Greek, majestic, solemn and sublime!

Now once again as in the days of old,
In our own land of Freedom, comes a pause
Like that when Athens heard in accents bold
Her greatest son invoke, in prayer that awes,
The gods from whom our reverence Time withdraws.
Now to one God alone of lands and seas,
Who suns and planets guides by His fixed laws,
Sways worlds and men by His divine decrees,
Our Nation bows in prayer, as did Demosthenes!

For now to Freedom's land a time has come
For supplication and for reverence high,
Midst roar of cannons and the roll of drum,
While War's dun canopy o'erspreads the sky
And on great battlefields dead thousands lie!
A day of prayer to Him whose law is Right
To be our Nation's Shield lest Freedom die,
And all the world be shadowed as at night
By triumph of a foe whose only law is Might!

Unto our fathers' God our Nation now
In reverence comes as in the days of old:
All hearts to Him in supplication bow
That still secure our Freedom we may hold;
That He whose hands the Heavens wide unrolled
May guide us now as in the olden days;
Give to our sailors and our soldiers bold
The victory o'er a foe who, ruthless, slays
The weak and helpless, and whose guns Thy altars raze!

H. T. DUDUTH.

GENERAL WOOD AND THE ADMINISTRATION.

By WILLIAM H. TAFT.

[From The Philadelphia Public Ledger of May 30.]

General Wood is one of the ablest men of the army. He has rendered long and effective service as a general officer. A graduate of the Harvard Medical School, he entered the army as an Assistant Surgeon and became a Captain and regular Surgeon. He received a Congressional medal of honor for his service "as medical officer and in the line" in an Indian campaign. He was Colonel of the Rough Riders, and was made a Brigadier General of volunteers. He cleaned up Santiago and was made Governor General of Cuba. He became Major General in the regular army on Aug. 8, 1902.

Those who know him know that General Wood is a natural soldier; that, though he entered the army as a Surgeon, his whole life has been devoted to military matters and their study. He has given much attention to the German system of military science. Wherever he has been in command he has earned the sincere respect of those under him and stimulated in them an admirable esprit de corps. He has been charged with undue ambition and a willingness to secure advancement at the expense of others; but intense energy in the line of his duty and highly efficient service were the means by which he secured promotion. This was true, of his service in Cuba, in the Philippines, and as Chief of Staff.

Just before the present war General Wood was as much concerned at our lack of preparation for possible war as Lord Roberts was over the lack of preparation in England. Both advocated conscription, both universal service, and both have been vindicated by the event. When General Wood was relieved as Chief of Staff, in April, 1914, he was sent to command the Eastern Division at Governors Island, which gave him an opportunity at the most conspicuous post in the country to continue his propaganda of preparation. He was not careful in his propaganda, however, to avoid the impression that he was criticising his superiors for failure to prepare. He stimulated more than any man in the country, soldier or civilian, the Plattsburg idea. The year before the Plattsburg camp was formed he had induced many young collegians to take a course in military Summer training.

When we entered the war, in April, 1917, the public supposed that General Wood would be consulted and given an important place in the organization of the army. Instead he was relieved from duty at Governors Island and sent to Charleston. It is now known that this was personally directed by the Commander in Chief, probably for the purpose of indicating displeasure at General Wood's criticism of the policy of non-preparation. He was finally sent from Charleston to Camp Funston, one of the National Army camps, and from there went abroad, with other commanding officers, to gain a more intimate knowledge of conditions of the war. On his return he passed a physical examination successfully. The division at Camp Funston received orders to go to France and with it General Wood as its commander. On his way East the orders were changed, and he was directed to report to San Francisco and take charge of the Western Division, at the Presidio—a command not for the training of troops, but a mere administrative post.

No official explanation is given of this change. Some who are supposed to be in the confidence of the Administration suggest that the change was made at the instance of General Pershing, but no official authority is given for this statement. General Wood has now applied for active command in the training of troops rather than a position on the shelf. The country is seriously disappointed that General Wood has not been permitted to go abroad with the division which he has been training. The New York World refers to the change of orders in his case as likely to leave a bad taste in the mouth of the friends of the Administration.

Those who are not thick-and-thin followers of the President are even more disturbed. The previous treatment of General Wood creates doubt of the explanation that his shelving is due to General Pershing's request. The suspicion that it is but a continuation of the discipline of General Wood, this time for his recent frank evidence before the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, will find strong lodgment in the minds of the people. The public properly has no patience with a policy which would deprive us of the services of a valuable and able military leader at the front merely because he has not restrained himself as he should from pointing out the military mistakes of the Administration. The public will not approve his impropriety, if it was such; but it will not think this a reason for holding him unfit or for denying to the country the benefit of his great military knowledge and ability in this crisis.

One may well recall Lincoln's long patience with McClellan's rude remarks and insulting conduct toward him, and Lincoln's remark that he would hold McClellan's horse for him if McClellan would only render the service the country needed. With a like spirit, Lincoln called Stanton to the War Office in spite of Stanton's previous bitter criticism of him and his Administration.

Is there not time to retrace the unwise step?

TEARS OF THE KAISER.

Are They for Himself, His Allies, or His Victims?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We hear the Kaiser is weeping, shedding tears of compassion. We wonder whom he is weeping for. Could his tears be shed for his own people who follow him blindly to the battlefield and death? Could they be for impoverished Belgium, or starving Poland, or Russia reduced to anarchy and famine? Of course they are not for France or England whom he wantonly attacked, nor for America whom he forced into the war by repeated aggressions on her rights and repeated assassinations of her citizens. They must be either tears for the offerings of his gentle allies, the Moslem Turks, whom he aided and abetted in the merciless extermination of Christian Armenians, or they are crocodile tears—tears of maudlin hypocrisy, squeezed out for "home consumption" by the arch-pretender of the ages, while all the world wonders.

One word from this weeping Kaiser, who brought upon the world all the woe of these four horrible years, and the fighting and carnage would cease. All the world desires is peace with justice—peace that can endure unendangered by the prospect of a further assault of insane ambition and ruthless craving for conquest. But the Kaiser will not yet speak the word. He still dreams that German arms can accomplish the impossible though all the hosts of civilization are arrayed against him.

Can it be possible that any man or woman in America, of whatever racial antecedent, should lean back now and not help to the utmost to check the course of such a war mad despot?

Let the Kaiser weep his crocodile tears now, (for popular effect;) let him graciously patronize God in his speeches and dispatches; let him congratulate the people of Aix that they have escaped such horrors as he has caused in France, (as though any human beings but Germans could be guilty of such atrocities!) let his heart glow with "proud joy" at the Reichsbank's report; let him pick violets from German graves on battlefields of yesteryear to send to the Kaiserin, (always with a reporter as his shadow,) but all these things cannot blind the German people to the fact that the great drive to the west that was to reach the sea and end the war, war with a "German peace," has failed. Countless thousands of lives have been sacrificed; countless more are to be thrown as "rubbish to the void." But the Allies stand, and every day more and more Americans are joining them, determined that right and not might shall be the ruling principle of the future.

A LOYAL WOMAN.

In Praise of the State Guard.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The press would confer a favor upon thousands of men, who are anxious to render some service to their Government but don't know how, by publishing information about the New York Guard. I, like many others above military age, wondered how I could do something. I was told that the New York Guard would take me in, but when I broached the subject to a friend he said: "Why, don't you go to that outfit! You will be sent upon the aqueduct to do guard duty for the duration of the war." Of course, I, being a man of family, couldn't entertain such a thought. I went to the 71st Armory, though, and learned that this guard duty on the aqueduct is purely voluntary, and that there are so many who want to do this work that it is impossible to place all of them, and that unless I wished it I wouldn't be sent. If I had dependents, I learned, I certainly would not have to go.

I was further informed that the New York Guard was organized to render service in the event of insurrection or riots, and all that was required of me was to give up an average of one night a week.

I enlisted and have learned the most important part of the soldier game, the art of shooting. I know the bayonet manual, and I know how to act in case of being ordered out to riot duty. Further, I am able to see my waist line, which disappeared many years ago, and I no longer suffer from dyspepsia.

If more information is wanted—and I can assure men over military age that it is time they were doing something instead of talking about it—I will be glad to meet any one at the rooms of Company F, 71st Regiment Armory, Thirty-fourth Street and Park Avenue, any Tuesday or Thursday evening.

IRELAND AND PEACE.

Mr. Devlin's Views Rejected by the American Irish.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"If conscription does come in Ireland the force of the Irish race the world over will be thrown into a movement for a general peace."

These are not the words of a member of the Sinn Fein movement, but come from a very responsible leader of the Irish Parliamentary Party, Joseph Devlin, in an address at Dungannon, County Tyrone, Ireland. Mr. Devlin goes on to say that "Germany's position is as difficult now as it is likely to be two or three years hence, and if Germany is willing to negotiate a peace now is it not a crime against civilization to prolong the war even for a day?"

"If [and this seems to be the logic of Mr. Devlin's argument] we once get a peace conference together the question of Ireland might well be submitted to it since British statesmanship has proved incompetent."

Let me remind Mr. Devlin that we in America have consistently supported the Irish Parliamentary Party for almost forty years, and in all these years we have never even tried to dictate to the party or the Irish people what policy they should adopt. We therefore consider it in very poor taste of Mr. Devlin even to suggest that the Irish race the world over, particularly here in the United States, should favor a peace by understanding with Germany at this time, which could be only a German peace. It would appear that Mr. Devlin would be satisfied if before that conference the Irish question was satisfactorily settled even at the cost of the civilization and democracy of the world. Let me inform Mr. Devlin that here in the United States there are millions of the Irish race who are heart and soul with their Government in the prosecution of this war, and who would spurn any peace that would carry with it even the semblance of a German victory. I might also inform him that there are thousands of Irishmen here as old as he who are desirous of an opportunity to go to France to fight the common enemy of civilization shoulder to shoulder with their sons, while he and the other so-called Irish leaders are advising Irishmen to stay at home, as this is not Ireland's war.

NO GERMAN AT ALL.

Would Stop Advanced Classes as Well as Beginners.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Yesterday you published an excellent article by Professor G. W. Thompson of the University of Maine, in which he calls attention to the danger of using Germans to teach German because some of them have used their positions to further German propaganda. Today you call attention in an editorial article to the fact that a substitution of Americans for Germans in the teaching of German will still leave us subject to the same danger, because such teachers would almost certainly be admirers of German ideals. These are real dangers, but they overlook one element of danger.

The Board of Education of the City of New York yesterday voted unanimously to discontinue the beginners' classes in German. But the study of German grammar does not inculcate German ideals. That is done by the advanced courses. This is an evil which Professor Thompson does not mention. We are dallying with this whole matter. Why not drop all courses in German for the period of the war, and then revise them according to Professor Thompson's suggestions and any others that will help us to make the study of German contribute to the making of American citizens with American ideals?

America is not yet fully awake and does not appreciate the seriousness of the war or the difficulty of winning it. We need unified public opinion and the whole-hearted support of every citizen. This and every other channel through which German propaganda can be carried on which may weaken the whole-hearted support of all citizens ought to be cut off.

FRANK C. BAKER.

New York, May 30, 1918.

MRS. A. G. VANDERBILT TO WED R. T. BAKER

Widow of Lusitania Victim to Marry Director of the Mint at Her Lenox Home in June.

HEIRESS'S THIRD MARRIAGE

Daughter of Capt. Emerson Divorced Her First Husband, Dr. S. H. McKim—Baker's Career.

Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, whose husband lost his life in the sinking of the Lusitania, and Raymond T. Baker, Director of the Mint, will be married at Homewood, Mrs. Vanderbilt's country estate at Lenox, Mass., early in June. This announcement was made by Mrs. Vanderbilt's father, Captain Isaac E. Emerson of Baltimore, in Washington yesterday.

Although the date for the wedding has not been announced, some of the plans have been made known. It will be a comparatively quiet affair, and among the small group from Washington that will attend will be Secretary McAdoo, whose son married Mrs. Vanderbilt's stepsister; Secretary to the President Tumulty, and Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the President's aid. Mr. Baker has accompanied the President and Secretary Tumulty on several trips.

Mrs. Vanderbilt has not as yet announced her attendants. Mr. Baker's best man will be Senator Key Pittman of Nevada. After the ceremony Mr. Baker will take his bride for a trip to Nevada and the Pacific Coast, and upon their return they will live in Washington.

Devoted to War Work.

Since the death of Mr. Vanderbilt by the Lusitania three years ago Mrs. Vanderbilt has devoted almost all of her time to charity and war work, having been prominently identified with the Red Cross service during the last season at Palm Beach and also in New York. She has two sons, Alfred Gwynne, Jr., who is 5, and George W. Vanderbilt, who is aged 4.

The announcement of the approaching marriage of Mrs. Margaret Emerson Vanderbilt is of widespread interest, especially to New York society and the Summer colonies at Newport and Lenox, where she has long occupied a position of prominence.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's first husband was Dr. Smith Hollins McKim, from whom she obtained a divorce in 1910. They became engaged while on a trip around the world on board her father's yacht, and were married in Baltimore in 1902. They separated early in 1909, Mrs. McKim going to Reno with her father and establishing a residence.

On Dec. 17, 1911, at the age of 27, she was married to Mr. Vanderbilt, the second son of Cornelius Vanderbilt, at Reigate, a small town in Surrey, England, twenty-five miles from London, near which he had purchased a residence known as The Stream. At this time Mr. Vanderbilt had a house in London.

This was Mr. Vanderbilt's second marriage. His first wife was Miss Ellen French, daughter of Francis O. French, who was better known as Elsie French. They were married in January, 1901. In 1908 Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt began suit for divorce, which was granted and the papers ordered sealed. Mrs. Vanderbilt took her maiden name, and received the custody of the only child, William Henry Vanderbilt, who is now about 18 years old.

Left His Widow $2,000,000.

Mr. Vanderbilt was the second son of Cornelius Vanderbilt, and his share of his father's wealth was estimated at about $50,000,000. He left to his widow $2,000,000 free and clear of all taxes, in accordance with a pre-nuptial agreement, entered into two days before his marriage to the then Mrs. McKim.

Mr. Baker, who is 38 years old, was nominated by President Wilson as Director of the Mint in February of last year. He is a native of Eureka, Nev., and has had a rapid rise in public life. His father was a lawyer and chief counsel for the Southern Pacific Railway system. Following a short period of mining work in Nevada, Mr. Baker, who had shown intense interest in reform work among criminals, was appointed Warden of the Nevada State Prison. Cleve Baker, his brother, and a graduate of Stanford University, was at that time Nevada's Attorney General.

About four years ago Mr. Baker went to Russia as Secretary to Ambassador Marye, and it was upon his return to Washington that he was appointed Director of the Mint. While in the legation service he carried out one of the longest messenger trips on record, coming to Washington with dispatches from Ambassador Marye by way of Finland and England, and then returning, after a two or three days' stop at the capital, to Petrograd by way of California and Siberia.

MRS. VANDERBILT GREETED.

New York Friends Telephone Their Congratulations to Lenox.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., May 30.—Scores of messages of congratulations for Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt were received at Homewood today from her intimate friends, who had learned of her engagement. Many telephone calls from New York kept Mrs. Vanderbilt so long within doors this afternoon that she finally had the telephone disconnected and ordered her automobile, and was driven to Lenox, where she witnessed the Memorial Day parade, in which many of her friends marched in the Red Cross division. She was accompanied in the motor by her sons. She wore semi-mourning, a large black hat, and her pearls.

After the parade had passed her automobile Mrs. Vanderbilt gave an order to her chauffeur to drive back to Homewood around the lakes. At her home tonight she denied herself to newspaper men who called, sending word that she had nothing to say with regard to her plans for the wedding.

LADY CHURCHILL TO WED FOR THIRD TIME

Former Jennie Jerome, Divorced Wife of Lieut. G. Cornwallis-West, Engaged to Montagu Porch.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 30.—The Chronicle learns that Lady Randolph Churchill is to be married within the next few days to Montagu Porch, an officer in the British Army and member of an old English family. Seen last night, Lady Randolph said: "My marriage will not in any way interfere with my war work. I shall go on just as before, but I do not want to say yet what my plans are."

Lady Randolph Churchill, formerly Miss Jennie Jerome, daughter of the late Leonard Jerome of New York, is probably better known to the American public than any other of the many American women who have married into the British aristocracy. She is a politician, a musician, an editor, a writer, an artist and a notable amateur actress, and has figured in the careers of both her husband and her son, Winston Spencer Churchill, Minister of Munitions.

In 1874 she married Lord Randolph Churchill, second son of the Seventh Duke of Marlborough, and the uncle of the Duke, who married Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, having met him in France while on a trip around the world on her father's yacht. She was one of the first modern American women to marry an English nobleman. Following her marriage Lady Churchill became much interested in politics, and her husband was soon one of the most successful politicians of his day. He continued to be a leader in the House of Commons until shortly before his death, in 1895.

Five years after the death of Lord Churchill, his widow caused a sensation in London society by announcing her engagement to Lieutenant George Cornwallis-West, son of her former dearest friend, and a close friend of her son, Winston Churchill. In spite of the great difference in ages the marriage was a happy one for several years, but in 1914 Mrs. Cornwallis-West obtained a divorce and was allowed by the courts to use her more famous name, Lady Randolph Churchill. On the day the decree was granted Lieutenant Cornwallis-West was married to Mrs. Pat Campbell.

Miss Aldrich Wed to Col. Biscoe.

The marriage is announced of Miss Edith Marion Aldrich, daughter of Mrs. William Paine Aldrich of the Hotel Vanderbilt, and Lieut. Col. Earl Biscoe of the Field Artillery, N. A., which took place last Monday in Grace Church.

FIGHTING SEDITION WITHOUT HYSTERIA

Gregory States Attitude of Department of Justice in a Letter to Georgian.

ALL CHARGES INVESTIGATED

But Wilson's Warning Against Harassing Peaceful Aliens Is Being Obeyed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Attorney General Gregory today made public a letter addressed to Judge S. H. Howard of the Superior Court of Georgia, setting forth the attitude of himself and of the Department of Justice toward disloyal acts and violation of the various war statutes enacted by Congress.

In brief the Attorney General's attitude is that every case of disloyalty or violation will be vigorously prosecuted, but persons, whether aliens or citizens, who are law-abiding and loyal should not be subject to unjust suspicion and discrimination by private citizens or others. In his letter to the Georgia Judge the Attorney General urges the co-operation of citizens everywhere in the work of the Department of Justice.

Mr. Gregory's letter follows:

Honorable S. H. Howard, Superior Court Chambers, Columbus, Ga.:

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter under date of the 15th of this month, wherein you say in substance that you have some apprehension that there is danger that through the well-intentioned activities of State or municipal officers or of bodies of citizens in endeavoring to bring about the surveillance or the prosecution of persons suspected of acts of disloyalty, many loyal citizens will suffer loss of business and may suffer otherwise by reason of the fact that it may be reported that they are under suspicion by the Government.

The Department of Justice is actively engaged in the prevention and detection of disloyal acts and the prosecution of violations of the various war statutes. It welcomes any information giving definite facts of specific instances of such offenses, and appreciates deeply the interest of the citizens of the country and the aid which they render to the department.

Much of the information and many of the suspicions that are communicated to the department do not, of course, upon an investigation by the department, disclose facts justifying any action. Nevertheless, all such information is investigated and, wherever the facts warrant it, the proper action promptly follows. On the other hand, the department deprecates unjust and unfounded criticism or suspicion of citizens or aliens who are law-abiding and loyal, and certainly it should not come about that by unwarranted suspicion such persons should be caused loss of business, loss of employment or other loss.

The Federal statutes punishing seditious acts, malicious destruction of property and other war crimes and the alien enemy laws and regulations are being and will be rigidly and aggressively enforced and the penalties prescribed for their violation imposed without exception, but no possible good will come from any unnecessary hardships or discrimination inflicted by private citizens upon those alien enemies who remain law-abiding and loyal or from any such hardship or discriminations unjustly inflicted upon loyal citizens of the United States. All persons who remain law-abiding and loyal contribute to the resources of the country and, therefore, to the strength of the country during the war.

Perhaps all this is best typified by the language of the President's proclamations of war with Germany and of war with Austria-Hungary, wherein the President expressly stated as to the conduct of citizens toward alien enemies and the conduct of alien enemies themselves that so long as alien enemies "shall conduct themselves in accordance with the law, they shall be undisturbed in the peaceful pursuit of their lives and occupations and be accorded the consideration due to all peaceful and law-abiding persons, except so far as restrictions may be necessary for their own protection and for the safety of the United States; and toward such alien enemies as conduct themselves in accordance with law, all citizens of the United States are enjoined to preserve the peace and to treat them with all such friendliness as may be compatible with loyalty and allegiance to the United States."

I trust that the foregoing clearly sets before you my attitude and that of the Department of Justice in relation to the subject matter of your letter. To sum it up, it is, briefly, that any case of disloyalty or of violation of the war statutes or of the President's proclamations and regulations by aliens or citizens will be vigorously prosecuted, but persons, whether aliens or citizens, who are law-abiding and loyal, should not be subject to unjust suspicion and discrimination by private citizens and others. Respectfully,

T. W. GREGORY,
Attorney General.

N. Y. POST GRADUATE MEDICAL SCHOOL AND HOSPITAL,
Second Ave. & 20th St., New York City.

At a time like the present when all the world is responding so generously to all patriotic calls and our country is unified as never before, our city hospitals are having a very hard time.

After the wonderful success of the Red Cross Drive, I appeal for funds for the New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital, which, besides having its large unit abroad and the changes which this has necessitated in the working forces, has been overwhelmed by work, together with the high cost of living, and the lack of subscriptions makes it very hard to continue the work.

Checks may be sent to the hospital.

MODEL RED CROSS HOSPITAL

British Gift to Americans to be of the Best Type.

LONDON, May 30.—The offer by the British Red Cross and the Order of St. John of a fully equipped hospital of 500 beds as a gift to the American Red Cross, which was accepted yesterday, was made at a joint meeting of representatives of the two societies, at which the following resolution, proposed by Princess Christian, was adopted unanimously:

"The committee, in asking the American Red Cross to accept this gift, desire to mark their admiration of the devoted work which the American Red Cross performs for the cause of humanity, and at the same time their gratitude for the generous help and warm-hearted co-operation which the American Red Cross extends to the British Joint War Committee in the Red Cross effort common to both nations."

In accepting the offer Major William Endicott, American Red Cross Commissioner to Great Britain, expressed gratitude for this further evidence of the close and happy relations between the Red Cross organizations of the two countries.

Preparations for building the hospital are already in hand, and it is hoped that it will be completed early in the Autumn. The site is on high ground in Windsor Great Park, commanding an unequaled view of the Castle. It is intended to make the institution the finest example of a hospital of the hut form which can be built in the light of the experience gained in the war.

SLEEPY HOLLOW FETE AIDS WAR CHARITIES

2,000 Enjoy Club's Frolic in Midway Plaisance and a Farce, 'Bunk,' by Comedy Club.

The Fête de Mai at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club at Scarborough yesterday afternoon and evening proved so successful, in spite of the threatened rain, that the program will be repeated tomorrow afternoon, and the Comedy Club actors will again present their plays. The gross receipts for both days will be turned over to war charities, it being a frolic over here to help the boys over there. The charities include the Soldiers' and Sailors' Entertainment Fund of the Amateur Comedy Club and the National Aeronautic Committee of the Women's Naval Service, Incorporated. There were about 2,000 visitors during the sessions, which began at 1 o'clock with a special club luncheon for 250 at $2 a plate, and before 4 o'clock reservations were already in for dinner for more than 500, and this number increased rapidly.

In the Midway Plaisance, in the club grounds, were a wooden elephant from the Hippodrome, a high swing and large booths, with various amusing stunts inside. In one Albert Sterner made silhouette portraits and Fred Dana Marsh had an Ecole des Faux Arts that illustrated Hylan's fling at Art-Art, and another a take off on statuary. The first head, done in vegetables and very cleverly, was listed as Hoover, while a pair of huge spectacles over a small black brush surmounted by a soft but was numbered T. R. No. 1, marked Wilson, purported to be a telegram from the President, and said that "I am happy to state that I am avoidably detained and unable to be with you today, as I have not succeeded in unhitching my House from the Evening Post."

Ethel Watts Mumford, in Chinese costume, read palms, and at the Midway theatre the Comedy Club presented a new one-act playlet "Bunk," by Henry Clapp Smith, which made a hit and was repeated four times during the afternoon. It was a farce showing the stage and behind the scenes at the same time. Mrs. S. Hinman Bird, Lloyd Aspinwall, Theodore E. Steinway, Henry Clapp Smith, Arthur R. Townsend, Harry M. Curtis, and Charles F. Bostwick were in it, and also presented De Mille's "Food."

On the Terrace there was a pavilion for dancing and music by a string orchestra. Josephine Forsythe did folk dances and songs in costume. Alma Clayburgh sang "The Long, Long Trail" and other songs, and at the Au Café Lion d'Or Mrs. Henry Clapp Smith, Mrs. Bird, the Misses Claire Van Lennep, Eva McAdoo, Margery Clinton, Howard Greenley, Albert Sterner, H. C. Smith, with H. C. Quinby at the piano, sang or danced. Austin Strong pantomimed and J. S. Lamb told Scotch stories.

The Garden Theatre, the little open air theatre with its rows of grassed terraces and camp chairs, seating 1,500 people, leading sharply down to the stage, was the setting at night for the Amateur Comedy Club's most ambitious offerings.

The plays presented were "A Sunny Morning," a Spanish comedy, the players being Mrs. Theodore E. Steinway, Sterling T. Foote, Mrs. Henry Clapp Smith, C. C. Townsend, Lloyd Aspinwall; "Moonshine," with Austin Strong, T. E. Steinway, H. C. Smith, and Harry Bennett, and "The Door," with Mrs. Harry M. Curtis, and the Messrs. Curtis, J. G. Lamb, A. R. Townsend, H. W. Gould, Sterling T. Foote, and Mr. Steinway.

Frank A. Vanderlip made a brief speech in one of the intermissions.

Fully $2,000 was netted. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Miss Dorothy Scheffelin, Mrs. C. Monteith Gilpin, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Bacon, Mrs. Drelincourt Martin, Mrs. Josephine Daskam Bacon, John W. Herbert, James Carr, Mrs. Frederic Van Lennep, Mrs. H. C. Quinby, Mrs. Langdon Geer, Mrs. H. C. Gould.

SWEDEN IN TRADE COMPACT

LONDON, May 30.—The Swedish Minister announced today that a commercial and navigation agreement between Sweden and Great Britain and her allies was signed yesterday.

WORK ON ALL SUBWAYS MAY STOP TOMORROW

Men to Quit Unless Estimate Board Joins Service Board in Granting Higher Wages.

Unless the Board of Estimate, at its meeting today, signifies willingness to join with the Public Service Commission, in assuming the contracts for the new subways and agrees to pay the 5,000 workmen the increased wages demanded from May 15, all of the work will stop tomorrow. Frederick L. Cranford, President of the General Contractors' Association, yesterday said:

"The men have decided by resolution to quit work on June 1 unless their demands for increased pay are granted, and we see no reason why they should not keep their word, viewing the matter from the standpoint of labor. All of the men can readily get work with the Government at the same rate of pay they are asking, and so they will risk nothing by going out. If the men leave us it will be almost impossible, I am sure, to fill their places."

Mr. Cranford was asked whether the men would stick to the work if the Board of Estimate promised to see that the higher wages were paid and would be willing to wait until the details of the new arrangement could be completed. He replied that he thought it could be managed. All the men wanted, he said, was to have the promise of the city that the increased pay would be allowed from May 15.

The Broadway Association has sent to the Board of Estimate a letter expressing a fear that the subway construction would stop on June 1, and urging the board to take the necessary action to avoid such a public calamity. Then the letter ran:

"If this strike takes place unquestionably the present working force, which is probably only about half of the number that could be used to advantage, will disintegrate and drift to other and more profitable fields of employment. If this force is lost it will be found impossible to replace them and the new systems will not be finished, probably, until after the war is over. The loss which the city will sustain in that event will reach a very large sum, to say nothing of the continuance of the existing conditions upon the lines of travel at present in service."

Since the subway contracts were let the contractors have raised the pay of their men two-thirds and they are now asking another third, which means that the wages have been doubled since the estimates on the contracts were made.

GERMANS ACTIVE IN MEXICO.

Mr. McNenney Says They Seek to Force American Intervention.

Frank McNenney of this city, who has returned from Havana, where he has spent every Winter for fifty years, said yesterday that the strain in relationship between Mexico and Cuba was due to the increasing activities of the German propagandists in Mexico.

The Germans in Mexico seek to make trouble, he said, on the assumption that in case of serious trouble the United States will intervene to protect Cuba. He added that since the outbreak of the war 40,000 Germans have crossed into Mexico, and that it is their aim to have America send troops across the Rio Grande.

Passengers who arrived with Mr. McNenney said that on Cuban Independence Day, May 20, the feeling between Mexico and Cuba had reached a point where the Mexican Minister to Cuba refused to sit on the same reviewing stand with President Menocal. They also said that the Cuban authorities had forced the Mexican Club in Havana to vacate its quarters, the former Miramar Hotel, because of the location of the building on the waterfront.

The food situation in Cuba is still serious, according to Luis A. Baralt, the new Cuban Minister to Peru. He said that flour was worth 80 cents a pound. Since the United States has increased the shipping facilities to Cuba, he said, sugar is now being shipped in larger quantities than ever before.

The vessel, it was said, brought 7,150,000 pounds of raw sugar.

Many Also Injured in Mannheim Following Aerial Raid Alarm.

GENEVA, May 30.—Eighteen women and children were trampled to death and a number of persons were injured in a panic which followed an aerial raid alarm, sounded at midnight in Mannheim yesterday, according to a dispatch received here.

The streets were crowded when the alarm was given and a wild rush for shelter ensued. It developed later that the warning signals were caused by the sighting of a squadron of German aviators returning to their base near Mannheim.

PLANNED SABOTAGE IN ARMY

Soldier of Fortune Reveals Propaganda Work of the I. W. W.

CHICAGO, May 30.—Private Frank Wormkee, alias Frank Woods, testified today at the trial of 112 Industrial Workers of the World that he was asked by members of the organization to teach sabotage in the American Army. This sabotage, Wormkee said he was informed, would include placing a foreign substance in food to cause illness, and the cutting up of clothing.

Wormkee's tale of violence by members of the organization spanned a period of nearly two years, during a part of which he worked as an organizer in the harvest fields, the big lumber camps, the shipping districts, and the orange belt of California. He admitted committing acts of sabotage while an I. W. W. delegate, and said he received I. W. W. literature after he entered the Jefferson Barracks. He told of deserting from the Colorado National Guard, of enlisting last Summer at Minot, N. D., under a fictitious name to obtain release from charges preferred by State authorities, and testified that he, as a delegate, had been instructed to encourage violence.

In the big lumber camps of Washington and Oregon Wormkee said he and other members of the organization drove spikes into logs, well concealed under the bark, to wreck mill machinery. He testified that during the outbreaks in Kansas and Oklahoma harvest fields last year the authorities were intimidated, and in one case the Sheriff was placed in jail. Freight trains were frequently commandeered there as well as in California.

Wormkee has been in custody of Federal authorities for several months pending determination of his status in the army.

QUEEN VISITS HOSPITAL.

Elena Studies Work of Restoring Disfigured Faces of the Wounded.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 30.—Queen Elena visited today the Stomatological Hospital for Jaw Cases, directed by Colonel Perna, who since the beginning of the war has cured through plastic surgery 6,000 patients terribly disfigured. He is ably seconded by Dr. A. T. Webb of Freeport, Ill., who is the first American authorized to enter the Italian Military Medical Corps and wear the uniform of a Captain.

The Queen expressed herself as extremely satisfied with the organization and sanitary arrangements of the place. She stayed a long time among the soldiers, questioning them kindly about their families and asking how they got their wounds.

This hospital was formerly a German academy. It is situated in one of the most beautiful quarters of the Eternal City. The building is surrounded by a magnificent garden, containing a profusion of flowers, century-old cypresses and pines under whose shade the poor soldiers are slowly coming back to life. The chief building, where the German director would have lived, has been turned into an operating room. It has an X-ray room, where the X-ray outfit has been personally presented by Guy Lowell of Boston. There is a room where photographs of plaster casts show horrible mutilated faces half blown away by shells, and also the wonderful miraculous way they have been healed. The students' studies have been turned into beautiful airy wards. The hospital now contains 160 patients, but can house 300.

MISS STINSON DELAYED.

Machine Damaged Again When She Attempts to Resume Flight.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., May 30.—Katherine Stinson's Curtiss plane turned turtle for the third time within a week this afternoon when she attempted to make a start for Sheepshead Bay, where she had a contract for a Memorial Day exhibition. The machine was damaged in exactly the same manner as on the other two occasions, and she escaped without injury. When rescuers reached her she was sitting strapped to her seat with her head a few inches from the ground.

Miss Stinson's trouble has been in getting off from the ground weighted down with enough gasoline to carry her to New York. The only field available is not long enough for this purpose. Her own mechanician arrived today from Chicago in time to witness her third smash-up. He will assist her in getting started again tomorrow. Only the propeller and tail of the machine were damaged.

VESSEL FROM BRAZIL WARY OF U-BOATS

Former Barbadoes Governor Tells of Reports of Submarines—Ship Takes Zig-Zag Course.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 30.—Many of the passengers who arrived today on a Brazilian steamship were convinced that the vessel came near having an encounter with a submarine while on the voyage from a West Indian port. There have been reports among the islands that U-boats have been seen in mid-Atlantic. One of the passengers was Sir Leslie Probyn, former Governor of Barbadoes, who is to become Governor of Jamaica.

"Undoubtedly there are U-boats in the middle of the Atlantic," he said. "On May 16 I got word from officers of an American ship and a British ship that two U-boats were said to have been seen west of Bermuda. Previously we had heard that two German submarines had been seen in the Atlantic going toward the Gulf Stream."

Mrs. James Phillips of 341 West Forty-fifth Street, New York, said that rumors of submarines had delayed the start of the voyage. On Saturday the steamship turned suddenly in her course and started back along the way she had come.

"We continued in that direction for twelve hours," she continued. "Then we headed north again, but on a different course. The officers said there were reports of U-boats. On Sunday, about 9 P. M., there was a sudden flash of light on our forward deck for a second, and it then disappeared. Everybody was ordered below decks, and we zigzagged away."

Other passengers repeated the story, and it was said by some that while the steamship was on another course she appeared to be guided by wireless.

ADMITS DYNAMITE PLOT.

Prisoner Confesses Plan to Blow Up California Governor's Home.

LOS ANGELES, May 30.—Paul Sokal, under arrest here on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, has confessed to complicity in a plot to dynamite the residence of Governor William D. Stephens, in Sacramento, about three weeks ago.

Sokal, the police said, admitted that he and two other men whose names he furnished, arrived in San Francisco from Cincinnati and purchased dynamite there. They cached it at Paso Robles, 200 miles north of Los Angeles. About a week later, they went to the spot, but seeing two men whom they believed to be officers, became frightened and made no effort to carry out the plot.

Sokal is an I. W. W. and a Russian Nihilist, according to his statement to the police.

Governor Stephens's residence at Sacramento was damaged by a dynamite explosion on Dec. 17 last, and a number of members of the I. W. W. are now awaiting trial at Sacramento on charges in connection with the explosion.

MRS. A. G. VANDERBILT TO WED R. T. BAKER

Widow of Lusitania Victim to Marry Director of the Mint at Her Lenox Home in June.

HEIRESS'S THIRD MARRIAGE

Daughter of Capt. Emerson Divorced Her First Husband, Dr. S. H. McKim—Baker's Career.

Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, whose husband lost his life in the sinking of the Lusitania, and Raymond T. Baker, Director of the Mint, will be married at Homewood, Mrs. Vanderbilt's country estate at Lenox, Mass., early in June. This announcement was made by Mrs. Vanderbilt's father, Captain Isaac E. Emerson of Baltimore, in Washington yesterday.

Although the date for the wedding has not been announced, some of the plans have been made known. It will be a comparatively quiet affair, and among the small group from Washington that will attend will be Secretary McAdoo, whose son married Mrs. Vanderbilt's stepsister; Secretary to the President Tumulty, and Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, the President's aid. Mr. Baker has accompanied the President and Secretary Tumulty on several trips.

Mrs. Vanderbilt has not as yet announced her attendants. Mr. Baker's best man will be Senator Key Pittman of Nevada. After the ceremony Mr. Baker will take his bride for a trip to Nevada and the Pacific Coast, and upon their return they will live in Washington.

Devoted to War Work.

Since the death of Mr. Vanderbilt on the Lusitania three years ago Mrs. Vanderbilt has devoted almost all of her time to charity and war work, having been prominently identified with the Red Cross service during the last season at Palm Beach and also in New York. She has two sons, Alfred Gwynne, Jr., who is 6, and George W. Vanderbilt, who is aged 4.

The announcement of the approaching marriage of Mrs. Margaret Emerson Vanderbilt is of widespread interest, especially to New York society and the Summer colonies at Newport and Lenox, where she has long occupied a position of prominence.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's first husband was Dr. Smith Hollins McKim, from whom she obtained a divorce in 1910. They became engaged while on a trip around the world on board her father's yacht, and were married in Baltimore in 1902. They separated early in 1909, Mrs. McKim going to Reno with her father and establishing a residence.

On Dec. 17, 1911, at the age of 27, she was married to Mr. Vanderbilt, the second son of Cornelius Vanderbilt, at Reigate, a small town in Surrey, England, twenty-five miles from London, near which he had purchased a residence known as The Stream. At this time Mr. Vanderbilt had a house in London.

This was Mr. Vanderbilt's second marriage. His first wife was Miss Ellen French, daughter of Francis O. French, who was better known as Elsie French. They were married in January, 1901. In 1908 Mrs. Elsie French Vanderbilt began suit for divorce, which was granted and the papers ordered sealed. Mrs. Vanderbilt took her maiden name, and received the custody of the only child, William Henry Vanderbilt, who is now about 18 years old.

Left His Widow $2,000,000.

Mr. Vanderbilt was the second son of Cornelius Vanderbilt, and his share of his father's wealth was estimated at about $50,000,000. He left to his widow $2,000,000 free and clear of all taxes, in accordance with a pre-nuptial agreement, entered into two days before his marriage to the then Mrs. McKim.

Mr. Baker, who is 38 years old, was nominated by President Wilson as Director of the Mint in February of last year. He is a native of Eureka, Nev., and has had a rapid rise in public life. His father was a lawyer and chief counsel for the Southern Pacific Railway system. Following a short period of mining work in Nevada, Mr. Baker, who had shown intense interest in reform work among criminals, was appointed Warden of the Nevada State Prison. Cleve Baker, his brother, and a graduate of Stanford University, was at that time Nevada's Attorney General.

About four years ago Mr. Baker went to Russia as Secretary to Ambassador Marye, and it was upon his return to Washington that he was appointed Director of the Mint. While in the legation service he carried out one of the longest messenger trips on record, coming to Washington with dispatches from Ambassador Marye by way of Finland and England, and then returning, after a two or three days' stop at the capital, to Petrograd by way of California and Siberia.

MRS. VANDERBILT GREETED.

New York Friends Telephone Their Congratulations to Lenox.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., May 30.—Scores of messages of congratulations for Mrs. Alfred G. Vanderbilt were received at Homewood today from her intimate friends, who had learned of her engagement. Many telephone calls from New York kept Mrs. Vanderbilt so long within doors this afternoon that she finally had the telephone disconnected and ordered her automobile, and was driven to Lenox, where she witnessed the Memorial Day parade, in which many of her friends marched in the Red Cross division. She was accompanied in the motor by her sons. She wore semi-mourning, a large black hat, and her pearls.

After the parade had passed her automobile Mrs. Vanderbilt gave an order to her chauffeur to drive back to Homewood around the lakes. At her home tonight she denied herself to newspaper men who called, sending word that she had nothing to say with regard to her plans for the wedding.

LADY CHURCHILL TO WED FOR THIRD TIME

Former Jennie Jerome, Divorced Wife of Lieut. G. Cornwallis-West, Engaged to Mantagu Porch.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 30.—The Chronicle learns that Lady Randolph Churchill is to be married within the next few days to Montagu Porch, an officer in the British Army and member of an old English family. Seen last night, Lady Randolph said: "My marriage will not in any way interfere with my war work. I shall go on just as before, but I do not want to say yet what my plans are."

Lady Randolph Churchill, formerly Miss Jennie Jerome, daughter of the late Leonard Jerome of New York, is probably better known to the American public than any other of the many American women who have married into the British aristocracy. She is a politician, a musician, an editor, a writer, an artist and a notable amateur actress, and has figured in the careers of both her husband and her son, Winston Spencer Churchill, Minister of Munitions.

In 1874 she married Lord Randolph Churchill, second son of the Seventh Duke of Marlborough, and the uncle of the Duke, who married Miss Consuelo Vanderbilt, having met him in France while on a trip around the world on her father's yacht. She was one of the first modern American women to marry an English nobleman. Following her marriage Lady Churchill became much interested in politics, and her husband was soon one of the most successful politicians of his day. He continued to be a leader in the House of Commons until shortly before his death, in 1895.

Five years after the death of Lord Churchill, his widow caused a sensation in London society by announcing her engagement to Lieutenant George Cornwallis-West, son of her former dearest friend, and a close friend of her son, Winston Churchill. In spite of the great difference in ages the marriage was a happy one for several years, but in 1914 Mrs. Cornwallis-West obtained a divorce and was allowed by the courts to use her more famous name, Lady Randolph Churchill. On the day the decree was granted Lieutenant Cornwallis-West was married to Mrs. Pat Campbell.

Miss Aldrich Wed to Col. Biscoe.

The marriage is announced of Miss Edith Marion Aldrich, daughter of Mrs. William Paine Aldrich of the Hotel Vanderbilt, and Lieut. Col. Earl Biscoe of the Field Artillery, N. A., which took place last Monday in Grace Church.

LONDON, May 19.—(Correspondence of Associated Press.)—Bread crumbs are being collected by school children in certain parts of Austria to be sent to starving children in Croatia. A newspaper in Serajevo reports that forty-eight boxes of bread crumbs were dispatched recently from that town.

The population of Herzegovina, mostly Slavs, is said to be starving as a result of the food shortage. Farmers in that region have received only four pounds of flour since Christmas.

FIGHTING SEDITION WITHOUT HYSTERIA

Gregory States Attitude of Department of Justice in a Letter to Georgian.

ALL CHARGES INVESTIGATED

But Wilson's Warning Against Harassing Peaceful Aliens is Being Obeyed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Attorney General Gregory today made public a letter addressed to Judge S. H. Howard of the Superior Court of Georgia, setting forth the attitude of himself and of the Department of Justice toward disloyal acts and violation of the various war statutes enacted by Congress.

In brief the Attorney General's attitude is that every case of disloyalty or violation will be vigorously prosecuted, but persons, whether aliens or citizens, who are law-abiding and loyal should not be subject to unjust suspicion and discrimination by private citizens or others. In his letter to the Georgia Judge the Attorney General urges the co-operation of citizens everywhere in the work of the Department of Justice.

Mr. Gregory's letter follows:

Honorable S. H. Howard, Superior Court Chambers, Columbus, Ga.:

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter under date of the 15th of this month, wherein you say in substance that you have some apprehension that there is danger that through the well-intentioned activities of State or municipal officers or of bodies of citizens in endeavoring to bring about the surveillance or the prosecution of persons suspected of acts of disloyalty, many loyal citizens will suffer loss of business and may suffer otherwise by reason of the fact that it may be reported that they are under suspicion by the Government.

The Department of Justice is actively engaged in the prevention and detection of disloyal acts and the prosecution of violations of the various war statutes. It welcomes any information giving definite facts of specific instances of such offenses, and appreciates deeply the interest of the citizens of the country and the aid which they render to the department.

Much of the information and many of the suspicions that are communicated to the department do not, of course, upon an investigation by the department, disclose facts justifying any action. Nevertheless, all such information is investigated and, wherever the facts warrant it, the proper action promptly follows. On the other hand, the department deprecates unjust and unfounded criticism or suspicion of citizens or aliens who are law-abiding and loyal, and certainly it should not come about that by unwarranted suspicion such persons should be caused loss of business, loss of employment or other loss.

The Federal statutes punishing seditious acts, malicious destruction of property and other war crimes and the alien enemy laws and regulations are being and will be rigidly and aggressively enforced and the penalties prescribed for their violation imposed without exception, but no possible good will come from any unnecessary hardships or discrimination inflicted by private citizens upon those alien enemies who remain law-abiding and loyal or from any such hardship or discriminations unjustly inflicted upon loyal citizens of the United States. All persons who remain law-abiding and loyal contribute to the resources of the country and, therefore, to the strength of the country during the war.

Perhaps all this is best typified by the language of the President's proclamations of war with Germany and of war with Austria-Hungary, wherein the President expressly stated as to the conduct of citizens toward alien enemies and the conduct of alien enemies themselves that so long as alien enemies "shall conduct themselves in accordance with the law, they shall be undisturbed in the peaceful pursuit of their lives and occupations and be accorded the consideration due to all peaceful and law-abiding persons, except so far as restrictions may be necessary for their own protection and for the safety of the United States; and toward such alien enemies as conduct themselves in accordance with law, all citizens of the United States are enjoined to preserve the peace and to treat them with all such friendliness as may be compatible with loyalty and allegiance to the United States."

I trust that the foregoing clearly sets before you my attitude and that of the Department of Justice in relation to the subject matter of your letter. To sum it up, it is, briefly, that any case of disloyalty or of violation of the war statutes or of the President's proclamations and regulations by aliens or citizens will be vigorously prosecuted, but persons, whether aliens or citizens, who are law-abiding and loyal, should not be subject to unjust suspicion and discrimination by private citizens and others. Respectfully,

T. W. GREGORY,
May 23, 1918. Attorney General.

N. Y. POST GRADUATE MEDICAL SCHOOL AND HOSPITAL,
Second Ave. & 20th St., New York City.

At a time like the present when all the world is responding so generously to all patriotic calls and our country is unified as never before, our city hospitals are having a very hard time.

After the wonderful success of the Red Cross Drive, I appeal for funds for the New York Post Graduate Medical School and Hospital, which, besides having its large unit abroad and the changes which this has necessitated in the working forces, has been overwhelmed by work, together with the high cost of living, and the lack of subscriptions makes it very hard to continue the work.

Checks may be sent to the hospital.

MODEL RED CROSS HOSPITAL

British Gift to Americans to be of the Best Type.

LONDON, May 30.—The offer by the British Red Cross and the Order of St. John of a fully equipped hospital of 500 beds as a gift to the American Red Cross, which was accepted yesterday, was made at a joint meeting of representatives of the two societies, at which the following resolution, proposed by Princess Christian, was adopted unanimously:

"The committee, in asking the American Red Cross to accept this gift, desire to mark their admiration of the devoted work which the American Red Cross performs for the cause of humanity, and at the same time their gratitude for the generous help and warm-hearted co-operation which the American Red Cross extends to the British Joint War Committee in the Red Cross effort common to both nations."

In accepting the offer Major William Endicott, American Red Cross Commissioner to Great Britain, expressed gratitude for this further evidence of the close and happy relations between the Red Cross organizations of the two countries.

Preparations for building the hospital are already in hand, and it is hoped that it will be completed early in the Autumn. The site is on high ground in Windsor Great Park, commanding an unequaled view of the Castle. It is intended to make the institution the finest example of a hospital of the hut form which can be built in the light of the experience gained in the war.

SLEEPY HOLLOW FETE AIDS WAR CHARITIES

2,000 Enjoy Club's Frolic in Midway Plaisance and a Farce, 'Bunk,' by Comedy Club.

The Fête de Mai at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club at Scarborough yesterday afternoon and evening proved so successful, in spite of the threatened rain, that the program will be repeated tomorrow afternoon, and the Comedy Club actors will again present their plays. The gross receipts for both days will be turned over to war charities, it being a frolic over here to help the boys over there. The charities include the Soldiers' and Sailors' Entertainment Fund of the Amateur Comedy Club and the National Aeronautic Committee of the Women's Naval Service. Incorporated. There were about 2,000 visitors during the sessions, which began at 1 o'clock with a special club luncheon for 250 at $2 a plate, and before 4 o'clock reservations were already in for dinner for more than 500, and this number increased rapidly.

In the Midway Plaisance, in the club grounds, were a wooden elephant from the Hippodrome, a high swing and large booths, with various amusing stunts inside. In one Albert Sterner made silhouette portraits and Fred Dana Marsh had an Ecole des Faux Arts that illustrated Hylan's fling at Art-Art, and another a take off on statuary. The first head, done in vegetables and very cleverly, was listed as Hoover, while a pair of huge spectacles over a small black brush surmounted by a soft but was numbered T. R. No. 1, marked Wilson, purported to be a telegram from the President, and said that "I am happy to state that I am avoidably detained and unable to be with you today, as I have not succeeded in unhitching my House from the Evening Post."

Ethel Watts Mumford, in Chinese costume, read palms, and at the Midway theatre the Comedy Club presented a new one-act playlet "Bunk," by Henry Clapp Smith, which made a hit and was repeated four times during the afternoon. It was a farce showing the stage and behind the scenes at the same time. Mrs. S. Hinman Bird, Lloyd Aspinwall, Theodore E. Steinway, Henry Clapp Smith, Arthur R. Townsend, Harry M. Curtis, and Charles F. Bostwick were in it, and also presented De Mille's "Food."

On the Terrace there was a pavilion for dancing and music by a string orchestra. Josephine Forsythe did folk dances and songs in costume. Alma Clayburgh sang "The Long, Long Trail," and other songs, and at the Au Café Lion d'Or Mrs. Henry Clapp Smith, Mrs. Bird, the Misses Claire Van Lennep, Eva McAdoo, Margery Clinton, Howard Greenley, Albert Sterner, H. C. Smith, with H. C. Quinby at the piano, sang or danced. Austin Strong pantomimed and J. S. Lamb told Scotch stories.

The Garden Theatre, the little open air theatre with its rows of grassed terraces and camp chairs, seating 1,500 people, leading sharply down to the stage, was the setting at night for the Amateur Comedy Club's most ambitious offerings.

The plays presented were "A Sunny Morning," a Spanish comedy, the players being Mrs. Theodore E. Steinway, Sterling T. Foote, Mrs. Henry Clapp Smith, C. C. Townsend, Lloyd Aspinwall; "Moonshine," with Austin Strong, T. E. Steinway, H. C. Smith, and Harry Bennett, and "The Door," with Mrs. Harry M. Curtis, and the Messrs. Curtis, J. G. Lamb, A. R. Townsend, H. W. Gould, Sterling T. Foote, and Mr. Steinway.

Frank A. Vanderlip made a brief speech in one of the intermissions.

Fully $2,000 was netted. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Fish, Miss Dorothy Scheffelin, Mrs. C. Monteith Gilpin, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Bacon, Mrs. Drelincourt Martin, Mrs. Josephine Daskam Bacon, John W. Herbert, James Carr, Mrs. Frederic Van Lennep, Mrs. H. C. Quinby, Mrs. Langdon Geer, Mrs. H. C. Gould.

SWEDEN IN TRADE COMPACT

LONDON, May 30.—The Swedish Minister announced today that a commercial and navigation agreement between Sweden and Great Britain and her allies was signed yesterday.

WORK ON ALL SUBWAYS MAY STOP TOMORROW

Men to Quit Unless Estimate Board Joins Service Board in Granting Higher Wages.

Unless the Board of Estimate, at its meeting today, signifies willingness to join with the Public Service Commission, in assuming the contracts for the new subways and agrees to pay the 5,000 workmen the increased wages demanded from May 15, all of the work will stop tomorrow. Frederick L. Cranford, President of the General Contractors' Association, yesterday said:

"The men have decided by resolution to quit work on June 1 unless their demands for increased pay are granted, and we see no reason why they should not keep their word, viewing the matter from the standpoint of labor. All of the men can readily get work with the Government at the same rate of pay they are asking, and so they will risk nothing by going out. If the men leave us it will be almost impossible, I am sure, to fill their places."

Mr. Cranford was asked whether the men would stick to the work if the Board of Estimate promised to see that the higher wages were paid and would be willing to wait until the details of the new arrangement could be completed. He replied that he thought it could be managed. All the men wanted, he said, was to have the promise of the city that the increased pay would be allowed from May 15.

The Broadway Association has sent to the Board of Estimate a letter expressing a fear that the subway construction would stop on June 1, and urging the board to take the necessary action to avoid such a public calamity. Then the letter ran:

"If this strike takes place unquestionably the present working force, which is probably only about half of the number that could be used to advantage, will disintegrate and drift to other and more profitable fields of employment. If this force is lost it will be found impossible to replace them and the new systems will not be finished, probably, until after the war is over. The loss which the city will sustain in that event will reach a very large sum, to say nothing of the continuance of the existing conditions upon the lines of travel at present in service."

Since the subway contracts were let the contractors have raised the pay of their men two-thirds and they are now asking another third, which means that the wages have been doubled since the estimates on the contracts were made.

GERMANS ACTIVE IN MEXICO.

Mr. McNenney Says They Seek to Force American Intervention.

Frank McNenney of this city, who has returned from Havana, where he has spent every Winter for fifty years, said yesterday that the strain in relationship between Mexico and Cuba was due to the increasing activities of the German propagandists in Mexico.

The Germans in Mexico seek to make trouble, he said, on the assumption that in case of serious trouble the United States will intervene to protect Cuba. He added that since the outbreak of the war 40,000 Germans have crossed into Mexico, and that it is their aim to have America send troops across the Rio Grande.

Passengers who arrived with Mr. McNenney said that on Cuban Independence Day, May 20, the feeling between Mexico and Cuba had reached a point where the Mexican Minister to Cuba refused to sit on the same reviewing stand with President Menocal. They also said that the Cuban authorities had forced the Mexican Club in Havana to vacate its quarters, the former Miramar Hotel, because of the location of the building on the waterfront.

The food situation in Cuba is still serious, according to Luis A. Baralt, the new Cuban Minister to Peru. He said that flour was worth 80 cents a pound. Since the United States has increased the shipping facilities to Cuba, he said, sugar is now being shipped in larger quantities than ever before.

The vessel, it was said, brought 7,150,000 pounds of raw sugar.

Many Also Injured in Mannheim Following Aerial Raid Alarm.

GENEVA, May 30.—Eighteen women and children were trampled to death and a number of persons were injured in a panic which followed an aerial raid alarm, sounded at midnight in Mannheim yesterday, according to a dispatch received here.

The streets were crowded when the alarm was given and a wild rush for shelter ensued. It developed later that the warning signals were caused by the sighting of a squadron of German aviators returning to their base near Mannheim.

PLANNED SABOTAGE IN ARMY

Soldier of Fortune Reveals Propaganda Work of the I. W. W.

CHICAGO, May 30.—Private Frank Wormkee, alias Frank Woods, testified today at the trial of 112 Industrial Workers of the World that he was asked by members of the organization to teach sabotage in the American Army. This sabotage, Wormkee said he was informed, would include placing a foreign substance in food to cause illness, and the cutting up of clothing.

Wormkee's tale of violence by members of the organisation spanned a period of nearly two years, during a part of which he worked as an organizer in the harvest fields, the big lumber camps, the shipping districts, and the orange belt of California. He admitted committing acts of sabotage while an I. W. W. delegate, and said he received I. W. W. literature after he entered the Jefferson Barracks. He told of deserting from the Colorado National Guard, of enlisting last Summer at Minot, N. D., under a fictitious name to obtain release from charges preferred by State authorities, and testified that he, as a delegate, had been instructed to encourage violence.

In the big lumber camps of Washington and Oregon Wormkee said he and other members of the organization drove spikes into logs, well concealed under the bark, to wreck mill machinery. He testified that during the outbreaks in Kansas and Oklahoma harvest fields last year the authorities were intimidated, and in one case the Sheriff was placed in jail. Freight trains were frequently commandeered there as well as in California.

Wormkee has been in custody of Federal authorities for several months pending determination of his status in the army.

Drowned at Naval Base.

WEST SAYVILLE, L. I., May 30.—Samuel Finkelstein, 24 years old, a son of Abraham Finkelstein of 60 Second Avenue, New York, a sailor who was recently sent to the naval base here, was drowned while bathing in the bay yesterday. His body was recovered and sent to his home.

QUEEN VISITS HOSPITAL.

Elena Studies Work of Restoring Disfigured Faces of the Wounded.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, May 30.—Queen Elena visited today the Stomatological Hospital for Jaw Cases, directed by Colonel Perna, who since the beginning of the war has cured through plastic surgery 6,000 patients terribly disfigured. He is ably seconded by Dr. A. T. Webb of Freeport, Ill., who is the first American authorized to enter the Italian Military Medical Corps and wear the uniform of a Captain.

The Queen expressed herself as extremely satisfied with the organization and sanitary arrangements of the place. She stayed a long time among the soldiers, questioning them kindly about their families and asking how they got their wounds.

This hospital was formerly a German academy. It is situated in one of the most beautiful quarters of the Eternal City. The building is surrounded by a magnificent garden, containing a profusion of flowers, century-old cypresses and pines under whose shade the poor soldiers are slowly coming back to life. The chief building, where the German director would have lived, has been turned into an operating room. It has an X-ray room, where the X-ray outfit has been personally presented by Guy Lowell of Boston. There is a room where photographs of plaster casts show horrible mutilated faces half blown away by shells, and also the wonderful miraculous way they have been healed. The students' studies have been turned into beautiful airy wards. The hospital now contains 160 patients, but can house 300.

MISS STINSON DELAYED.

Machine Damaged Again When She Attempts to Resume Flight.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., May 30.—Katherine Stinson's Curtiss plane turned turtle for the third time within a week this afternoon when she attempted to make a start for Sheepshead Bay, where she had a contract for a Memorial Day exhibition. The machine was damaged in exactly the same manner as on the other two occasions, and she escaped without injury. When rescuers reached her she was sitting strapped to her seat with her head a few inches from the ground.

Miss Stinson's trouble has been in getting off from the ground weighted down with enough gasoline to carry her to New York. The only field available is not long enough for this purpose. Her own mechanician arrived today from Chicago in time to witness her third smash-up. He will assist her in getting started again tomorrow. Only the propeller and tail of the machine were damaged.

VESSEL FROM BRAZIL WARY OF U-BOATS

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 30.—Many of the passengers who arrived today on a Brazilian steamship were convinced that the vessel came near having an encounter with a submarine while on the voyage from a West Indian port. There have been reports among the islands that U-boats have been seen in mid-Atlantic. One of the passengers was Sir Leslie Probyn, former Governor of Barbadoes, who is to become Governor of Jamaica.

"Undoubtedly there are U-boats in the middle of the Atlantic," he said. "On May 16 I got word from officers of an American ship and a British ship that two U-boats were said to have been seen west of Bermuda. Previously we had heard that two German submarines had been seen in the Atlantic going toward the Gulf Stream."

Mrs. James Phillips of 341 West Forty-fifth Street, New York, said that rumors of submarines had delayed the start of the voyage. On Saturday the steamship turned suddenly in her course and started back along the way she had come.

"We continued in that direction for twelve hours," she continued. "Then we headed north again, but on a different course. The officers said there were reports of U-boats. On Sunday, about 9 P. M., there was a sudden flash of light on our forward deck for a second, and it then disappeared. Everybody was ordered below decks, and we zigzagged away."

Other passengers repeated the story, and it was said by some that while the steamship was on another course she appeared to be guided by wireless.

SAILS WITHOUT AMERICANS.

Only Thus Can Nieuw Amsterdam Get German Safe Conduct.

AMSTERDAM, May 30.—The Holland-America Line steamer Nieuw Amsterdam has sailed for an American port without American passengers, as the German Government made the safety of the vessel dependent on this.

There is one American citizen aboard the steamer, but he is a naturalized Hollander more than 70 years of age.

ADMITS DYNAMITE PLOT.

Prisoner Confesses Plan to Blow Up California Governor's Home.

LOS ANGELES, May 30.—Paul Sokal, under arrest here on a charge of carrying concealed weapons, has confessed to complicity in a plot to dynamite the residence of Governor William D. Stephens, in Sacramento, about three weeks ago.

Sokal, the police said, admitted that he and two other men whose names he furnished, arrived in San Francisco from Cincinnati and purchased dynamite there. They cached it at Paso Robles, 200 miles north of Los Angeles. About a week later, they went to the spot, but seeing two men whom they believed to be officers, became frightened and made no effort to carry out the plot.

Sokal is an I. W. W. and a Russian Nihilist, according to his statement to the police.

Governor Stephens's residence at Sacramento was damaged by a dynamite explosion on Dec. 17 last, and a number of members of the I. W. W. are now awaiting trial at Sacramento on charges in connection with the explosion.

Interment was in the congregation cemetery in Montclair.

Private Cohen was a son of Mrs. Bertha Cohen of 18 North Nineteenth Street, East Orange, and was one of the nine firemen of that city who volunteered for service. A guard of honor marched with the flag-draped coffin.

Letters to The Times on War Topics and Other Subjects of Public Interest

GERMANS IN FINLAND

Sweden Held Off Because of Kaiser's Intervention, Branting Said.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your correspondents who defend the cause of the Finnish White Government overlook one point which, while it may appear at the moment to be immaterial in Finland, is certainly of supreme importance to Americans who are interested in the matter. That is the undeniable fact that at present the Finnish White Government is in active alliance with the Germans. Atrocities by the Red Guard and the accuracy or inaccuracy of Mr. Nuorteva's statements are of a certain interest, perhaps; but they do not alter this one fact, and should be considered only as offering possible explanation.

It has been said by supporters of Judge Svinhufvud's Government that it turned to Germany for help only when its natural ally, Sweden, had refused to lend a hand. If this be true, it may offer a certain measure of excuse, though one cannot have a great admiration for the judgment of a small nation which, with all the evidence before it, believes that Germany will come in only as a disinterested friend. But this statement is denied very circumstantially in a recent issue of The New Europe. The author of the denial, who signs himself "V," appears to be a Swede who supports the present Government in that country and who also sympathizes with the Allies. He bases his argument on public statements by a member of the present Government, and by Mr. Branting, who, while he may not like the Germans and the White Guard, is certainly not a Bolshevik. The writer in The New Europe says:

It is no longer a secret that when the Finnish Government appealed to Sweden for assistance in the civil war they had already appealed to Germany for the same purpose. Mr. Branting, whose evidence will be accepted as unbiased, said in a recent interview given to the Stockholm correspondent of the Temps: "It is important to emphasize that when the Finnish representatives in Stockholm say that their Government first appealed to Sweden for an armed intervention this is in direct opposition to the actual facts. We have reason to believe that the Finnish representatives in Berlin asked for a German intervention long before Finland appealed to Sweden. The Finnish Government informed us later, when it made its official proposal for a Swedish intervention, that it had simultaneously asked in Berlin for a German armed intervention. You will thus see that a Swedish intervention would have meant not only a risk but an absolute certainty of our being dragged into military co-operation with Germany, as Finland had already invited Germany to intervene, and nobody can imagine that Germany would have refused an offer so favorable to her policy of hegemony in the Baltic. But by being dragged in as the third party of this German-Finnish combination Sweden would also have been inveigled into the great war on the side of Germany. Fortunately our Government saw the danger."

Mr. Sarlo, Foreign Secretary in the present White Government, in a brochure published long before the Finnish-German peace treaty was concluded, tells how in Finland German victories were simply called "our victories." The pro-Germanism which was no doubt a natural consequence of the treatment Finland received at the hands of the Czarist Government has not died down in those circles which form and support the present Government since Finland as a result of the revolution has gained her independence.

Mr. F. Löfgren, Minister of Justice in the present Swedish Coalition Government, also spoke openly on this subject at a recent public meeting in Göteborg, where he expounded the Government policy with regard to these questions. "We all know," he said, "that immediately after the declaration of independence the Finns entered into negotiations for a treaty with Germany, which in a commercial-political sense made Finland the vassal of Germany. Germany would therefore always have intervened when the Finnish Government, with which the treaty was concluded, was threatened. The question was only whether Sweden should have in a greater or less degree relieved Germany of her work in assisting her ally."

In their decision not to enter into such an adventure the Swedish Government not only was certainly backed by the overwhelming majority of the Swedish nation, but acted in full accordance with the views of the Governments in Norway and Denmark.

"V" also speaks of the resentment felt by the Swedish people over "Finland's unfortunate behavior toward the State which first recognized her independence and had hoped to see her join the other Scandinavian States in peaceful collaboration"; and he also speaks of the regret of the Swedes "that the only intervention which the Swedish Government considered possible, namely its offer to mediate in the internal strife in Finland—which cannot as easily as is done in some quarters be classified as a mere struggle between legality and rebellion—met with so little understanding in Finland."

These are troublous times, when the burden of proof should surely lie heavily on any one who takes up the cause of those who are in active alliance with the enemy—and not only our enemy, but from evidence gleaned all the way from Finland to the Balkans, the enemy of all small nationalities.

A CONSTITUTION FOR RUSSIA

Can the People Be Taught the Value of a Stable Government?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The whole world is intense in its desire for the success of the Allies. At present it is paying particular attention to Russia, because Russia has been enslaved by Germany through the activity of her representatives, the Bolsheviki. These form one party among many political parties, all of which, with their bands of leaders, who claim to be Socialists, represent the sum total result that liberty has accomplished for the benefit of 180 millions of people. The people of Russia have gone through all the experiences of acquiring democracy through misrepresentation.

The general practices of life prove that the straight way is always the best way. The Russian people never have been given the opportunity to see the straight way to gain human recognition. They have gotten rid of the Czar. Such relief was supposed to lead them into this straight road, but immediately an obstruction blocked their path—a red flag—with leaders who tried to recognize humanity by promising all sorts of wonderful results from a liberty that waves a red flag—for centuries the symbol of terrorism and unrestraint. To be honest with Russia, it is time to relieve her of such leaders, who continually preach only that "what is yours is mine and what is mine is my own."

Which one among the nations of the world, by her record, can show Russia that democracy is the leader of justice, or that her executive always guards the protection which democracy gives for the benefit of the people? Such a record can be shown by the United States. Ever since 1776, through every period of her wars, justice has been the aim of the United States; not the selfishness of commercial schemes for aggrandizement, but the protection of the ideals of her flag, which represents liberty, equality, and justice. If any favors can be extended to Russia, the United States is in a position to grant them without prejudice, by advising with Russia how to gain democracy, how to protect democracy, and how to benefit from democratic ideals.

Suffrage was granted to the Russian people by a provisional Government presumably as a necessary part of freedom. But in reality for what purpose? Was it not that they should be burdened with many political parties, the members of one of which called themselves Bolsheviki? Unfortunately Russia has been troubled always with socialistic revolutionary parties without number who claimed to work for the freedom of the people. Yet from among their members there were some (provocateurs) who were engaged, even by the Czar's Government, on a salary basis, to supply his special bureau with all the inside information of the doings of their coworkers. The Czar has gone and the income to these members has been lost, but the Kaiser immediately took the Czar's place, and it seems that he has engaged the combination of Lenine and Trotzky, not to supply the information as formerly, but to help to destroy the Russian Army, to open Russia's resources for the benefit of the Kaiser and his army. These same men had preached for years democracy and its cause. It seems that they have different ideas about democracy, at least one for use among the people and another for the benefit of themselves only. It is a pity to see such vast numbers of people being sacrificed [illegible] a few [illegible] responsible "misrepresentatives" of ideals.

Let us, the United States, which can work unselfishly, give to the Russian people the benefits gained from the experience of long tests of the ideals for which we stand. Let us show the people of Russia what benefits a constitution similar to that of the United States would give to them. The peasants of Russia were promised and are demanding land. Such a constitution, with due regard to justice, would meet their desires. The Russian people need to be protected against their great enemy—starvation. Such a constitution would provide for this. Over there, I understand, labor is bitter against capital and capital against labor. Such a constitution can protect every one equally against injustice. Such a constitution would give a general, free education; would protect against a narrow commercial market and encourage initiative. It would give the people the right of being served by the Government, instead of being enslaved by it. Such a constitution would place the people in a position to establish a strong, able army, which would be properly fed, equipped, and cared for, beyond the grants of land especially provided for them. Such a constitution would free the Russian people from German barbarism, from socialistic misrepresentation, and from Bolshevist terrorism; and such a constitution would eliminate the red flag, establishing in its stead a flag which would represent for all Russia, as a right, not as a privilege—without limit, without prejudice, without favor—honor, equality and justice, gained through a real liberty and founded upon a true democracy.

Why Women Didn't Enroll.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The true reason, as it appears to me, why thousands of women did not register last Saturday is that they did not know where to go for the purpose, or where they could get information about it. Not every woman sees THE SUNDAY TIMES, nor were all who do careful enough to preserve your instructions for reference later.

I addressed a goodly number of women on the subject on Saturday last, and on the two days preceding, some of whom I spoke to on the street, some in the house, others at a club. Two or three were well informed and knew where to go. A few only were indifferent, else, as an "anti," saying that her husband did not wish her to vote. All the rest were interested and easily induced to register; some were really grateful, having been too busy or forgetful to procure the necessary information.

Some one had said, "Ask the cop." I tried this for the benefit of a busy friend in another district, but being of the traffic squad he was ignorant of this matter, and no other policeman was in sight. When the districts are thoroughly organized and canvassed I have no doubt that a much larger proportion of women will enroll. A man at the club, a fair sample of many, said he never voted at a primary.

Most women, having no vote, have not troubled themselves to become informed on political matters. When they do it will at least be for their own benefit; in time, perhaps, for the benefit of the country also.

The Belgian Flag.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The display of French and British flags around town is a splendid tribute to our allies, but it is generally agreed that if it had not been for the heroic defense of the Belgian Army during the first three weeks of the war the Huns would have reached Paris and the coast. The story of the war would possibly read quite differently. Let us show, by displaying the Belgian colors, that we appreciate the tremendous sacrifice that they made in the cause of humanity.

GOOD HOSPITAL CARE.

Confidence in the Medical Service Founded on Experience.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I add a few words of appreciation to those of Nellie Louise Condon, which appeared in your valued paper of even date? During the late Fall I spent two months at Spartanburg, S. C., and witnessed the very unfortunate period of evolution which was at that time taking place in the base hospital at Camp Wadsworth. It was, therefore, with deep misgiving, which amounted almost to fear, that immediately upon receipt of a telegram from the new commanding officer, Major Dear, notifying me of my husband's operation, I hurried South during the first days of March.

With what relief, however, did I realize the change that had taken place in a brief period! It will always be a source of deep gratitude to realize the care now being given at that hospital. The very atmosphere breathes confidence and cheerfulness. Cleanliness, attention and good-will are everywhere. Specialists in all branches are officers in the Medical Corps, and verily I think Camp Wadsworth has the finest. I found no reason to complain of anything, nor did my husband ever voice other than the deepest appreciation of what was being done for him. He had at one time been a patient in one of the finest hospitals in New York, and we both said he had not received better treatment while a paying patient than he was receiving in the base hospital. At times really we felt he was receiving a more personal care, though instead of a private room he was but one of many in the ward. The diet was wholesome, varied, and appetizing, showing competent talent in the diet kitchens.

I was at the hospital daily for over four weeks, and entertain the deepest feeling of friendship for the patient, self-sacrificing nurses, who most certainly contribute a great deal to the patient's recovery. Never did I leave my husband's bedside feeling depressed, but I knew he was being well taken care of at all times. It was the personal individual sympathy which one was shown which I think is the greatest proof of the efficiency of Wadsworth's Base Hospital. It is therefore with pride that I look back to its splendid evolution, for it was indeed developed out of a wilderness and from chaos, which was perhaps but natural to the early months of our entering the war, and when the camp itself was only beginning to live.

But it is with more than pride that I voice my appreciation of the splendid work done at the base hospital at Camp Wadsworth, it is with a grateful heart and also the certainty that no matter what the future holds I need have no fear, as through the perfect and efficient medical corps of the United States Army our men will be well taken care of, and return some day not alone alive, but well.

Their Uniform, Work, and Standing in the Army.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

From time to time among the different uniforms seen around the city you have probably noticed one which was very similar to that of a commissioned officer of the United States Army. Probably you know of some one wearing this uniform. This uniform is that of an army field clerk, United States Army. His uniform is in every respect that of a commissioned officer, minus the brown braid on the lower part of the sleeve, which distinguishes him from a commissioned officer. Many people think that the name army field clerk means a civilian clerk in the employ of the Government, but this is not so. An army field clerk receives his appointment from the Secretary of War only and is not governed by civil service rules and regulations, and is not enlisted, but sworn into the service the same as any commissioned officer and is part of the army.

The War Department has issued the following letter regarding the military rank and status of army field clerks and showing that their status is a military one, and not that of a civilian:

With the information that army field clerks are not civilians. They have been held to be officers of the army, although not commissioned officers. In consequence of their military status the present uniform has been prescribed for them.

It is settled that under the act of Aug. 29, 1916, creating the positions of army field clerks, occupants of these positions have a military status, and that as they are appointed to office by the Secretary of War they are officers in the military service.

Possibly you have had occasion to meet an army field clerk and you have wondered why he had to wear the uniform, but the above gives you the information that he is in the army and not simply a civilian clerk. A civilian clerk can be discharged at any time by the commanding officer of the department in which he is employed, and he can resign whenever he feels so disposed, while an army field clerk can be discharged only by a general court-martial, with the findings of a board of officers, and same has to be approved by the Secretary of War, and if he wishes to resign his resignation has to be accepted by the Secretary of War, the same as any commissioned officer who wishes to resign.

Army field clerks are ordered from station to station in the same manner as commissioned officers. At the present time there are a very large number of army field clerks "Over There" doing their bit, right in the front line, and every army field clerk is anxiously awaiting his order that will send him to France.

Prof. Cattell Denies "Agitation."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In today's TIMES you say: "Dr. Cattell, who was a professor in the Department of Psychology, was found guilty by the Trustees of sending letters to Congressmen urging them to vote against sending drafted men to Europe and of other acts of agitation." This statement is in error in three respects: (1) No charge was made against me by the Trustees of Columbia University except the sending of a letter to members of the Congress. (2) A letter to members of the Congress in support of legislation before the Senate and the House is not agitation, but the exercise of a constitutional right. The letter was shown by me to no one except the members of the Congress to whom it was addressed. (3) My letter did not oppose the sending of drafted men to Europe, but the requiring of them to fight there against their will. This is substantially the measure for the relief of "conscientious objectors" adopted by the British Parliament and now applied in the United States by order of the President.

How the Latin-American States Might Help the Allies' Cause

By ALEJANDRO RIVAS VAZQUEZ.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It would constitute a grave error to suppose that all the Latin countries of this hemisphere have attained a like degree of political advancement and material progress.

Some of them have reached real stability in their democratic institutions, and under this régime have been enabled to initiate a vigorous development of their many national resources. I may cite as examples Chile, the Argentine Republic, Brazil, and Uruguay.

Others, unfortunately, have been in the recent past, or are yet today, victims of dictatorships of various sorts, which smother in them all breath of democratic life, even though they cannot completely hinder the development of their physical riches. Such is the case of Mexico, which under the dictatorship of Porfirio Diaz grew up in ignorance of democratic usages, and of Venezuela, which under the despotisms of Cipriano Castro and Juan Vicente Gomez has lived during the last twenty years in a state of actual slavery.

In the minds of the Latin-American peoples there is a clear and exact knowledge as to what the hegemonic ambitions of Germany mean to the world. Those among them who enjoy the benefits of real democracy well know that this is the decisive hour of its loss or of its retention. Those who still live in the lethal atmosphere of despotism understand that the hour has rung for the defeat or victory of all autocracies.

Perhaps in the present war there do not exist, in regard to Latin America, those motives which are generally recognized as a basis for the declaration of war. But to the generous Latin-American conception of international life there is a sufficient affront in this outrage on the liberal nations, this dismemberment of right, this threat against liberty, a word which will perhaps sound metaphysical to Teutonic barbarism, but the denial of which entails the death of every noble impulse of life.

Unanimously does Latin America realize the danger, more or less imminent, to the safety of the fatherland, the principle of democracy, the ideal of humanity. Nothing else is necessary to make her long to take her place by the side of those peoples who, offended more directly, struggle for their honor and existence at the same time that they struggle for the good of all humanity.

The independent national existence and the distinct force of reflection which among them form the currents of public opinion which influence their respective Governments will furnish the occasions necessary for the fulfillment of this longing. It is undoubtedly reasonable to suppose that all the Latin-American countries will go to war against Germany, just as Brazil, Cuba, Guatemala, and Panama have already gone.

Would this event represent any benefit to the cause of the Allies?

Leaving to one side the moral value of these national entities—a value, nevertheless, quite noteworthy in any struggle—let us consider that with the prolongation of the war and its fatal destructiveness it is possible that the deciding factor will be the reserve of soldiers. Latin America has more than 70,000,000 inhabitants. Consequently, its military strength is great, and it is of excellent quality, on account of its warlike fierceness, its admirable endurance, and its inborn aptitude for war, all of which has been demonstrated in our long war of independence and in our civil conflicts.

Latin America possesses, besides, immense agricultural fields and millions of arms to cultivate them, and in this war of nations the food question is considered a decisive factor for defense and victory.

While the field of battle remains in Europe and there continues to be a scarcity of transports, it may perhaps seem superfluous to place a value on a contingent of troops which would add no weight to the enormous contingent which the United States is able to furnish, but nevertheless cannot transport to the fields of action.

But aside from the fact that in this universal struggle for the laws of liberty it is but right that all peoples should contribute their share of sacrifice to the winning of success and not allow a few groups to bleed and ruin themselves in order to endow all with the benefit of these laws—who can affirm that the hazards of war will never permit Germany to attack outside of Europe? There is no invincible armada, just as there is no invincible army, and good military judgment will foresee the possibility of a partial defeat in order to assure the final triumph.

To the United States, in whose hosts European democracy bases all hope of giving the Teutonic beast its mortal blow, the Latin-American alliance means that its rear is secure.

While this alliance is not carried out and the Latin-American Governments—especially those which are at bottom autocratic—continue to maintain the currents of public opinion in favor of the Allies in the form of an apparently benevolent neutrality, the menace of German intrigue will continue to threaten. Lack of this foresight and of the necessary measures to combat the evil has been the cause of some great setbacks to the cause of the Allies. And is it hard to foresee the embarrassment, to put it mildly, that a continental conflict would place on the efforts of America at the precise moment when the very maximum of these efforts is needed to overcome Germany?

To state this is to make a healthful forewarning. It would be wrong to view with indifference Germany's very active intrigue propaganda in South American countries simply because these countries, considered separately, may be relatively small. History teaches us that at times it is perhaps the weakest entity which Providence has destined in the hour of battle to wound the heel of Achilles.

In all South American countries there exists a deep and strong feeling of sympathy for the Allies. But it behooves these, and more especially the United States, on account of its closer commercial and political relations, to work so that this feeling be converted without delay into full dynamic activity, in full co-operation with the countries in the war against the German military caste.

Our directing forces in all spheres of action would collaborate willingly in such a purpose. There might not be lacking, perhaps, some despotism, which, through its affinity to the system, might wish to favor the cause of Germany, even though only to the extent of a continued neutrality which our patriotism condemns. But such a despotism would quickly succumb at the hands of the people who suffer it, as it is but just that in this hour of final reckoning between democracy and autocracy all such forces, oppressors of popular sovereignty, should disappear from wherever they may exist.

A Last Word on Palladino.

By HEREWARD CARRINGTON.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The reported death of Eusapia Palladino in Rome brings up once again for public discussion her mediumship, and in fairness to her memory I feel that I cannot let this opportunity pass without a final word regarding her powers. As the man who brought Palladino to this country for investigation, after having had ten séances with her in Naples—for the English Society for Psychical Research—I feel it my duty to lay before the American public once more, and finally, the opposite side of this controversy, so that there may be no misunderstanding as to the position I occupy, and as to the position which I believe she also occupies, in the history of the subject.

The notice in the paper refers to Palladino as a settled case of fraud and trickery—as a medium finally caught in fraud, and now altogether discredited. I do not for a moment doubt that this is the general impression which the American public has of this medium; but in the estimation of all those, both here and in Europe, who have investigated her carefully and conscientiously, it is an altogether false impression. Eusapia did trick; there is no doubt as to that fact. She was caught in trickery here; she was also caught in precisely the same sort of trickery in Europe a quarter of a century ago; practically every group of investigators has acknowledged that she would trick if permitted to do so. However, this point should be noted—that these same investigators are unanimous in asserting that she had genuine, remarkable powers of a supernormal character, and that genuine phenomena were produced at her séances. That fact has been omitted from the statements published in this country.

The central fact is simply this: Eusapia depended, for the production of her phenomena, upon an energy over which she exercised no control. Sometimes this energy was strong, when we had a so-called "good séance"; and at such times nothing could hold the phenomena back. Holding, tying with ropes, &c., had no effect; and manifestations would occur at great distances from the medium. At other times, the energy would be weak. At such times a long period of waiting would result, with no phenomena. Now, if Eusapia had been a wise and sensible woman, she would have said: "I am sorry, ladies and gentlemen, I can get nothing tonight; we will try tomorrow." But she would not do this. An illiterate woman at basis—she could neither read nor write—she had acquired a veneer and polish through moving in scientific and aristocratic circles for some years in Europe, and had become thoroughly spoiled and vain. La Palladino must not fail! So, rather than fail, she would resort to trickery in an endeavor to produce phenomena which failed to appear; and then she would get caught doing so, and the result would be fatal. This is precisely what happened here; what happened in Cambridge in 1895, and elsewhere. But her serious investigators were uninfluenced nevertheless, because they had seen both sets of séances and not one only. And, I may add, the American "investigation," so called, did not influence the European investigators.

Scientific questions are settled eventually by scientific investigation, and not by sneers, falsehoods, or prejudiced and insufficient investigations. The "poem" which Professor Jastrow inserted at the conclusion of his article hardly disposes of a case which had been studied carefully and cautiously by the aid of scientific instruments, by the highest and brainiest men in Europe, for a quarter of a century. Browning wrote the same sort of thing about the medium, D. D. Home, his poem being "Dr. Sludge." Yet Browning had to acknowledge that he had never seen Home, knew nothing of him, and had no justification for his attitude. The extremely prejudiced and partially false report of Professor Münsterberg can, perhaps, better be estimated now than when he wrote it—since his German scheming and plotting on behalf of the Kaiser have come to light. The à priori German materialistic attitude toward this question assumed by a host of "professors of psychology" will not serve to do away with one single fact of a genuine nature which may have been observed; and many such facts are on record for those who care to consult the original records. I may perhaps refer the interested reader to my books, "Eusapia Palladino and Her Phenomena," "Personal Experiences in Spiritualism," and the report in the Proceedings of the Society for Psychical Research for full details.

One or two words should, I think, be said to clear away certain inaccuracies which appeared in the statement connected with the announcement of her death:

1. Eusapia did not refuse to give the séance in the Times tower because conjurers were present. On the contrary, she accepted this condition. She only stipulated that some of her own friends should accompany her to the séance, to see that she had fair play and that no harm befell her when she was in trance. These friends were to remain altogether outside the circle, away from the table, and under guard by members of the circle. This was not agreed to by the investigators, and the séance fell through on that account.

2. It was never proved that Palladino lifted the table with her toe, "by detectives introduced into the room." In many cases the legs of the table were incased in hollow wooden tubes reaching the floor, and completely preventing her from touching the legs of the table. Levitations occurred, nevertheless!

3. Eusapia did not come to America in 1908, but in 1909, and remained until 1910. Further sittings in Naples, after her return, were inconclusive.

I have now finished with Palladino. Requiescat in pace! I think it only right, however, that these final words should be said by me after her death, as I regard her as one of the most interesting cases in the whole history of psychical research; one of the most remarkable physical mediums the world has ever known, (in spite of her petty trickery,) and one of the most interesting and magnetic women it has ever been my lot to encounter.

THE KAISER'S MADNESS

Becoming More Pronounced and Spreading Among His Worshipers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your analysis, in a recent issue, of the Kaiser's speech in which he asks his subjects to congratulate themselves and thank the army that they have been spared the devastation in Germany, which he has witnessed in France along the western front, when they were attacked by their enemies, leads to the logical conclusion that inasmuch as the premises on which his reasoning is founded, namely that Germany was first attacked, are not in accordance with the facts, the Kaiser is laboring under a delusion of persecution, the product of a distorted mind. In one's work as an alienist, it frequently happens that one of a family or group becomes obsessed with a false idea—usually of a false paranoid type—and impresses it upon those about him. So frequently, indeed, is this observed by psychiaters that it has received the name folie à deux ou trés, where two or three or more are obsessed with the same delusive idea and base their conduct and behavior upon it.

There are numerous examples, too, where thousands have been obsessed with such ideas and followed alleged prophets whose claims were purely delusive. As a recent example might be cited the case of a man who proclaimed himself Elijah the Restorer, founded a city of ten thousand followers and then came three thousand strong to convert New York to his belief. I am pleased, however, that thanks to the intelligence of our city his pilgrimage was in vain.

When paranoid ideas dominate the conduct of an ordinary man in lowly position he is promptly shut up in an asylum, as soon as his behavior attracts attention or endangers the community. If, however, the individual be in an exalted position, he may do a vast amount of harm before the real condition becomes apparent. Periodic hypomania very frequently manifests itself in just that way. Very often such individuals appear quite sane to those about them and carry them away to their delusive way of reasoning, even if it appears to be paranoid on closer analysis. It is not to be wondered at that a man of that type would develop megalomania—surrounded by flatterers ever ready to gain favor by praising the most inane efforts, fed on adulation, and nurtured in an atmosphere which believes in the divine right of Emperors and Kings. No one dares to oppose his most capricious wish, and, not subject to the bendings of environment like lesser mortals, these perverted ideas become fixed and intensified.

While, of course, it is not possible to give an opinion without being in possession of all the facts, the past behavior of the Kaiser is most suggestive. At one time it seems to me he is said to have had painted a picture in which he was depicted as a champion of the white race against the "yellow peril." He is said to have had ideas of having been a great composer and wrote an opera, which he had played, some years ago. His idea that he is the representative of God on earth, his idea of world conquest, and his effort of forcing "Kultur" on a benighted world, his saying at the beginning of the world war that Germany was fighting for her existence, and now his persistence in the idea that the war was forced on him—all these are very suggestive of hypomania with paranoid trends. It is indeed unfortunate that those about him, too, have been infected by a sort of folie à deux and support his wild fantasies.

In ordinary life, when the relatives or friends of a person who becomes insane do not care for him and allow him to become a menace, the community takes him in hand and shuts him up so that he can no longer do any harm.

As the Kaiser seems to have mentally infected practically the whole of Germany and even Austria as well and they can only look upon his acts with a distorted view, the whole world must apprehend him and put him where he can in future do no further harm.

It is, indeed, lamentable when one man, through his exalted position and defective reasoning, can upset the whole world. It is a sad commentary on our civilization that the man should be intrusted with so much power.

The problem now is to apprehend an insane man, a deluded nation, so they cannot again become a menace to the world. If the people of Germany and Austria do not appreciate that they are following a deluded man the world must do it for them. The task now is to keep on until the Kaiser is apprehended and put in a position where he can do no further harm. Then, and then only, will the world be made safe for democracy.

Austria's Psychological Moment.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As usual, contradictory reports have reached us as to the happenings at the meeting of the Austrian Emperor with the superdivine Kaiser at German headquarters. The facts remain hidden. Only disjointed, distorted tales for general consumption filter through as best suit the authorities. One version for Germany, a special article for the militarist Junker; another for Austria; a third one for the Magyar; a fourth for the Czech. All equally distant from the truth.

One fact remains: Germany pursues her own and her one purpose—world dominion, by any and all means, regardless of either friend or foe. As ready to fight the latter as to sacrifice the former. As long as Austria submits, she is welcome. Woe to her if she should dare to assert herself.

Will Austria see this? Has she forgotten the humiliation of 1866, followed by Bismarck's mollification to secure neutrality in 1870, and the subsequent Triple Alliance, most stupendous for herself and her hereditary enemy? With the best part of civilized humanity in armed opposition to Teutonic tyranny the Austrians should recognize a means for salvation in preference to obliteration, to utter vassalage. A way is open. Boldly to disavow her actions as forced into by the Hohenzollern. Throw herself into the other camp, into the cause of human right and reason. With full confidence to obtain justice, the settlement with Italy can be intrusted to France, to Great Britain, to the United States. For her, no real cause to fight these exists.

The psychological moment for such momentous action seems approaching.

With misery trying the Dual Monarchy's population; war's burdens, sacrifices, sufferings daily increasing past bearing, and nothing to gain but wounds and death to further her northern neighbor's ambition, will Austria-Hungary seize the one favorable opening offered by Fate?

If their Emperor will not, will the people take the bit in their own teeth, assert themselves as they tried in '48? A prompt ending to this savage struggle would come into sight.

ITALY-AMERICA

To Old Friendship the War Adds a New Appreciation.

By VINCENZO DE SANTO.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

America and Italy, which for a long time have had so much in common and have unconsciously given each other incalculable moral and spiritual assistance, were, before April 1917, only slightly acquainted and knew next to nothing about each other's national ideals and aspirations. We Italians of the present generation had formed a sadly erroneous opinion of the United States of America. The colossal industrial development of this Republic, the fabulous fortunes accumulated by some of its citizens, and the seemingly unlimited size of the pocketbooks of almost every American who visited us each year had given us the impression that the only thing which really counted in America, and the only thing the American people sought after, was the all-powerful dollar. Fiction, plays, and light operas on certain phases of American life, produced by Americans themselves, purely for the sake of amusing the public, or produced by foreigners with the possible intent of spreading anti-American propaganda, had helped us conspicuously to form that impression. The "Dollar Princess," for instance, which was one of the most popular operettas in Italy for several years, is only one of many productions which did injustice and injury to the good name of the Americans.

When President Wilson delivered his epoch-making address on April 2, 1917, asking Congress to recognize a state of war between the United States and Germany, we were struck not by the fact that war was recommended, for that we had anticipated, but by the profound idealism and love of universal justice on which the war program of this nation had been based.

We then suddenly realized that America could not be the materialistic nation we had been led to believe she was. Scholars, editors, and orators looked back upon American history and busied themselves to show the Italian public that this Commonwealth had not only been founded on idealism but had never lost sight of it in the course of its rapid and impressive development. It was pointed out that President Wilson's address was only one of the many golden pages in the annals of mankind written by the people who made this Republic what it is. The pledge made by the Pilgrim Fathers immediately after landing at Plymouth, the Declaration of the American Independence, and Lincoln's Gettysburg address are, in fact, among the most precious documents of humanity and illustrate the true spirit of the American people.

One of the main reasons that made the bulk of the American people, in the recent past, take only a very superficial interest in modern Italy, is to be found, I believe, in the fact that the Americans very seldom showed any enthusiasm for a nation that was not a republic.

The great war has been for many of us a good teacher in several elementary subjects. Even the most accomplished students among us very soon found out that they still had a great deal to learn about geography and history and also concerning the form of government and national doctrines of the various nations that came into the foreground. Think of what all of us had to learn of "progressive" Germany, of "decadent" France, and of "egotistic" England. Think also of what we, the Italians, had to learn about "mercenary" America. It cannot be considered an offense, therefore, to say that the average American was not rightly informed as to the form of our Government. Italy is a monarchy, but it would be impossible to find another nation which is more democratic both in its constitution and in its ideals. Our Government, like the Government of these States, is "of the people, by the people, and for the people."

The Italian people's innate love for liberty may be illustrated by the intense interest they have always shown in the formation and development of the American Republic, which is the cradle of modern democracy. Carlo Botta, who, in the beginning of the nineteenth century, wrote his "History of the War of the American Independence," tells us what the feelings of the Italian people were in regard to the American Revolution. The well-known historian, speaking of the Congress held in Philadelphia in September, 1774, said:

> For a long time no spectacle had been offered to the attention of mankind of so powerful an interest as the present American Congress. It was indeed a novel thing, and it seemed miraculous that a nation, hitherto almost unknown to the people of Europe, * * * should now, all of a sudden, come out of that state of obscurity and, as if awaking from a long slumber, should seize the power to govern itself. * * * The Congress succeeded in uniting in its favor not only the opinions of the American people, but also those of all the European nations and even their Governments, as well as the opinions of no small part of the inhabitants of Great Britain itself, so great was at that time either the spirit of innovation or the love of liberty or the desire to shake off the restraints that the authorities placed upon the people they governed. Meanwhile all minds were suspended with expectation for the issues of so important a contest, and all eyes were attentive to see what measures the American convention would first adopt in a matter of such momentous importance.

Thomas Jefferson, the drafter of the Declaration of Independence, commending this work, gave the following opinion about the author's love for the cause of freedom, an opinion that could have been expressed about every intelligent Italian of that time:

> Botta had the faculty * * * of enlivening the whole of our history with the constant glow of his enthusiasm for the liberty and independence of nations. Neutral as a historian should be in the relation of facts, he is never neutral in his feelings, nor in the warm expression of them, on the triumphs and reverses of the conflicting parties and of his honest sympathy with those engaged in the right cause.

The interest which Italy showed in this nation at the time of the Revolutionary War was excelled only by the sympathy and moral support she gave to the cause of the Federal States during the civil war.

George P. Marsh, American Minister in Italy at the time of Lincoln, affirmed, in one of his letters, that in no other country in Europe the cause of the Union met with so warm sympathy as in Italy.

Pasquale Villari, one of the greatest scholars of modern Italy, summing up, in the beginning of the year 1865, the sentiments of the Italians in reference to the American struggle, expressed himself in the following terms:

> Our sympathy is all with the Federal States, for it is clear that they are fighting for a worthy cause. * * * We feel confident that the war will be won by the North.

While the civil war was ravaging this country a large portion of the Italian population was still suffering under foreign yoke, and the Italian apostle of democracy, Giuseppe Mazzini, addressing the Abolitionists, begged them not to forget, while at work for the emancipation of the black race, "the millions of white slaves suffering, struggling, and dying in Italy." "We are fighting," he told his American friends, "the same sacred battle for the freedom and the emancipation of the oppressed."

Cavour's sympathy for American ideals is recorded by W. R. Thayer ("Times and Life of Cavour,") in a passage in which the great statesman takes up the defense of America in a most whole-hearted fashion.

Garibaldi always spoke very affectionately of America, of which he considered himself an adopted son. In 1865 he wrote to Mr. G. P. Marsh: "I think continually of America, my second motherland."

In their turn the Americans of half a century ago never failed to show a great interest in the welfare of Italy.

Charles Sumner expressed the feelings of most of his fellow citizens when he exclaimed, "When will Austria disappear from that beautiful land, to which my heart turns with a constant glow?"

The most precious testimony, however, on the mutual esteem and friendship between the American and Italian people of half a century ago is furnished by Abraham Lincoln himself. Writing to Bertinatti, Envoy Extraordinary to America, on July 23, 1864, the great and most venerable man said:

> I am free to confess that the United States have in the course of the last three years encountered vicissitudes and been involved in controversies which have tried the friendship and even the forbearance of other nations, but at no stage in this unhappy fraternal war in which we are endeavoring to save and strengthen the foundations of our national unity has the King or the people of Italy faltered in addressing to us the language of respect, confidence, and friendship. * * * I pray God to have your country in his holy keeping and to vouchsafe to crown with success her noble aspirations. * * *

These old and new ties of friendship between America and Italy, the similarity of national ideals, the mutual esteem that has existed for so long between them and the present alliance of arms are certainly sufficient to form a base upon which to build a better understanding and a lasting and fruitful friendship.

BLIND GERMAN PEOPLE.

Force Must Prevail Where All Arguments Fail.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why deceive ourselves longer? Why mislead Germans? We have been saying this war is not against the German people but only their military autocracy. That was our first opinion. It has changed.

We now realize the German people support their masters, approve barbarous methods. We now fight Germany as a whole. Her people have failed to recognize the acts of their army as heathenish. They must be forced to this recognition.

They who have no axiom except might cannot grasp the fact that the Allies war for a holy principle. It is nothing to the German people that all history recounts no rulers who have so lied as theirs, no army which has committed such atrocities—never such attempts to embroil peaceful nations and endeavors to subvert friendly neutrals by deceit and hypocrisy.

Over 2,000 years ago Julius Caesar wrote that the Germans, of all Gaul, were the most brutal and unreliable of the barbarians there. Are they any different today? Is not their civilization merely that of the mind, not of the heart? Frightful devastation, wanton destruction, savagery, means nothing to them. They take pride in the fact that they first used poisonous gas, liquid fire, and other hellish contrivances. They condone bomb dropping on innocent civilians. They make a holiday and strike off a medal to celebrate the sinking of a passenger ship. They acquiesce in any form of brutality of no military advantage, massacres of population, mediaeval imposts of tribute, slavery of men, women, and children. They raise no protest against the most bestial acts of their armies—polluted wells, poisoned meat, letters from prisoners bearing death, crucifixion, maiming, any manner of unheard of devilish savagery.

Can we say we have no cause for war against such a people? No! a thousand times no!

Many times since the beginning of the war the German people could have made an honorable peace. The time for this is past. It is time now to do away with all peace talk. To bullies, savages, and beasts, force and threats only avail. Let us tell them boldly what they may now expect. No peace without punishment and penalties. Let us tell them that the longer they continue their hell-made war the deeper shall they be humiliated.

They cannot be influenced by logic or Christian spirit. They must be subdued by force and fear. Our words have ever given them hope. Let them know now that there is no hope for them except an unconditional peace dictated by the Allies; that the longer this is postponed the more severe the terms. There might yet be time for decent, human Germans to save their race from detestation and destruction, but, alas! they fail to see this. Let them know that we and England and France and Italy and Serbia will fight and continue to fight to the last man, woman, and child; that it rests with them—the German people—whether this is to be a war of extermination.

PELHAM NAVAL BOYS PLAY IN 'BIFF-BANG!'

A Top-Notch Service Show, with Brilliant New Features, at the Century.

SHOW GIRLS, PONY BALLET

Joe Fields, Robt. B. Mantell, Jimmie Fox, Harry Davies, and Other Scions of the Theatre.

The Century Theatre, home of high art and high jinks, has never offered a more dazzling spectacle of feminine attractions than the boys of the Pelham Naval Training Camp disclosed yesterday for the delight of the metropolis. What "You Know Me, Al!" did for the army at the Lexington Opera House, "Biff-Bang!" now does for the navy—and then some.

Really, the regular profession (fifteen a week and twenty on the road) will have to look to its artistic standing, and even more to its artistic understandings. Have the recruits "on board" the Pelham Station already acquired their sea legs? Perhaps not; but when they do the result can scarcely be an improvement. As for the "art cosmetic," (as Lord Bacon called it,) rouge and lipstick have never been applied more alluringly. It is quite impossible that any mere woman could be as gay and abandoned as these jolly tars seem to be.

The chorus of "stevedore" show girls wore evening gowns and corsets—"donated," as the program informs us, by prominent dressmaking establishments. Undoubtedly the patriotic donors obeyed the President's injunction and gave until it hurt—but it is equally certain that the hurt was on the corseted show girls. As for the donors, (barring the matter of muscular biceps and bass voices,) they acquired the services of a troupe of incomparable mannequins—or, rather, of ladykins, if that is the masculine form of this highly technical term. The pony ballet was mainly clad in another ("donation") from a merchant of silk stockings, and if those were indeed their sea legs the result should be a deluge of new orders, even from all the North Atlantic mermaids hitherto unstockinged.

It was indeed a most enjoyable show throughout, and kept the audience in bubbling amusement, with frequent gales of ribshaking laughter. The cast, entirely recruited from Pelham tars, included many former actors, well known to Broadway, among them Jimmie Fox, Harry Davies, William Israel, and Robert D. Cohen. There were also scions of theatric nobility, namely, Joe Fields and Robert B. Mantell, who figured as show girls. The leading lady, and a rapturously charming one, was the magazine illustrator, Alonzo King. The music was by William Schroeder, a navy bandmaster not unknown to Broadway, and the excellent lyrics by Messrs. Israel and Cohen, Frank Mills, and Joseph Fields. One sailor song the audience took to its very bosom:

> There's a corner in my heart that needs attention;
> It's been neglected since the day that I was born!

The stage direction by Philip Dunning, with assistance from Mark Luescher of the Hippodrome, was of a very high order, measured by any standards, and included several novel and very striking effects. The really splendid scenery was contributed from the storehouses of Charles Dillingham and Elliott, Comstock & Gest.

Make no mistake about it, these "service" shows, and especially "Biff-Bang!" are the high spot in the past year of musical entertainment. No one who has not seen them can boast of any adequate knowledge either of the current stage or of the spirit of the young men who are going out to fight for us. Beneath the rollick of dancing, song, and horseplay runs a deeper, more persistent feeling, which touches it all with heroism, even a simple, manly beauty. In the storms and ice of the North Atlantic, face to face with a stealthy, lurking foe, these jolly tars and abandoned tar-baby-dolls will have at least one memory of warmth and light and color, and of the sympathy of those for whom they are to fight.

"Biff-Bang!" is scheduled to last only till next Wednesday, June 5, with matinées Saturday and Monday, and in spite of the warm welcome they have received it is not yet certain that the engagement can be extended.

CAMP CUSTER NINE WINNER.

Defeats Camp Grant, 5 to 3, in Benefit Game at White Sox Park.

CHICAGO, May 30.—Camp Custer won the baseball game with the Camp Grant nine at White Sox Park today by the score of 5 to 3. The attendance was disappointing. The proceeds are to be divided between the athletic funds of the two camps.

Keiser, the winning pitcher, formerly was a member of the Chicago American League Club. Carlson, who opened the game, pitching for Grant, was with the Pittsburgh Nationals before going to camp, and McGuire, who succeeded him on the mound, is a former Chicago Federal League player. Sweeney, Grant's catcher, formerly was with the New York Americans.

The score by innings:

Custer	0 0 0 0 0 4 0 0 1	5	12	2
Grant	0 1 0 0 0 1 0 1 0	3	5	2

Batteries—Grant, Keiser, Chaffee, and Custer; Carlson, McGuire, and Sweeney.

SAILORS DEFEAT SILK SOX.

Federal Rendezvous Twirler Holds Paterson Team to One Hit.

The sailor baseball team of the Federal Rendezvous, Fifty-second Street, Brooklyn, triumphed over the Doherty Silk Sox on the latter's diamond at Paterson, N. J., yesterday by the score of 5 to 3. Olson, the sailor twirler, held the Silk Sox hitless for eight innings, and then one lone bingle was made off him.

The sailors chalked up four tallies in the third frame as a result of a batting bee, and in the eighth Taylor's home run gave the Federal Rendezvous team another marker.

The score:

		R.	H.	E.
Federal Rendez'vs	0 0 4 0 0 0 0 1 0	5	7	1

Batteries—Olson and Speer; Rettig and Pickering.

Clan MacDuff Eleven in Draw.

Clan MacDuff's soccer eleven, the first to defeat Bridgeport in the New York State League last Sunday, earned additional laurels at Lenox Oval yesterday by drawing with the fast team of the Interborough R. T. by the score of 3 to 3 in the final round of the annual cup tie competition for possession of the La Sultana trophy. The destination of the cup will depend upon the replay.

AUTO RACES TOMORROW.

Veteran Injured in Trial Spin for Postponed Contest at Speedway.

Barney Oldfield, one of the drivers in the Harkness Handicap, which will be held at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway tomorrow afternoon, having been postponed from yesterday, had a narrow escape from death at the big wooden track yesterday, when a racing car driven by William Vetera, a Brooklyn driver, slipped on the wet bank of the track and turned turtle.

Oldfield, in his Golden Submarine, was following Vetera, and just managed to whizz past the overturning car without striking it. Oldfield was making 100 miles an hour at the time, and his presence of mind in dodging past prevented disastrous results.

Vetera and his mechanician, Joe De Antoni, were picked up unconscious after the car had rolled down to the foot of the track. Both were taken to the Coney Island Hospital, where it was found that Vetera's back was seriously injured and his arms and body were badly bruised. De Antoni was cut and bruised about the head and body, but it is not believed that he is as seriously hurt as the driver. Vetera was to drive the Duessenberg car, formerly owned by Lieutenant Eddie Rickenbacker, now in France, in the race tomorrow.

The slippery condition of the track necessitated an early postponement of the auto races yesterday, but this did not prevent the drivers from getting out and tuning up their machines. Although it was announced that the race was postponed there were a large number of early comers at the track watching the workouts when the accident occurred.

Besides Oldfield, the other drivers on the track at the time were De Palma, Resta, Chevrolet, Mulford and Hearne.

The first race tomorrow afternoon will begin at 4 o'clock, and with an extra day for getting their machines in shape, the drivers look for even closer competition for the big money prizes than if the race had been run off as scheduled.

All tickets purchased for yesterday's race will be honored tomorrow.

BOYS BREAK FIVE RECORDS.

Fine Performances Mark Brooklyn Park Playgrounds Games.

Five records were made and another existing mark equaled yesterday in the annual track and field championship games of the Brooklyn Park Playgrounds, held at McCarren Park, Greenpoint. Two of the new marks were established by representatives of Betsy Head Playground, and two by athletes from Fort Greene Park.

The Fort Greene athletes who established records were Earle Perelman, in the 220-yard dash, 0:24 1-5, and J. Jaffe, in the high jump. Edw. Goodman Weds Miss Huffaker

The marriage of Miss Lucy Huffaker and Edward Goodman, both of whom have been affiliated with the Washington Square Players since their organization, took place yesterday morning. The ceremony was followed by a wedding breakfast at the home of Mr. Goodman's mother, 106 West Eighty-sixth Street, and the couple will leave tomorrow for Oswego, N. Y., where Mr. Goodman will enter a training camp.

Mr. Goodman has been the Washington Square Players' director and Miss Huffaker the publicity representative.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Stolen Orders," a film version of a Drury Lane melodrama seen here several seasons ago, will begin a run at the Park Theatre on Sunday night. The picture has been made by William A. Brady, and the cast includes Carlyle Blackwell, Kitty Gordon, Montagu Love, and June Elvidge.

The premiere of "Hitchy-Koo, 1918," announced for next Tuesday at the Globe, has been postponed until Thursday.

The next program to be offered at the Fulton by the Actors' and Authors' Theatre will be made up of four one-act plays. It is also announced that the popular price scale will be abandoned, and that future productions will be offered at $2.

"The Liberty Gun," a drama by Robert Mears Mackay and Victor Mapes, was produced for the first time last night at New Haven. In the cast were Robert Edeson, Henry Kolker, Lyster Chambers, Arline Hackett, Millicent Evans, Albert Howson, James Seeley, and Malcolm Duncan.

The auction sale of seats for the first performance of the Lambs' Gambol will take place next Thursday afternoon at the Hudson Theatre. The first performance, which will be followed by four more, will be given at the Hudson on the night of June 14.

Those who will appear at the Astor Theatre Sunday night at the benefit performance under the auspices of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense will include the Dolly Sisters, Clifton Crawford, W. C. Fields, Donald Brian, Ann Wheaton, Harry Kelly, Florence Moore, Dorothy Dickson, and Hipolito Lazaro. Jerome Kern will conduct the orchestra.

WOMEN MAKE GAS MASKS.

Only Wives, Mothers, or Sisters of Soldiers Allowed to Do the Work.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Women who, as wives, mothers, and sisters of soldiers, have a deep realization of the necessity for painstaking care in their work make the gas masks for the American Army.

At a plant the location of which is not made public, thousands of them are engaged in the delicate and intricate operations and in conducting tests on the finished products. They have been organized in military fashion and specially selected for the work.

"It soon became apparent that the type of women needed could not be secured through the ordinary channels of employment," says a statement of the Gas Defense Service, "and men were sent to localities displaying service flags to secure the services of women vitally interested who would be most loyal in their work and extremely anxious to send out perfect gas masks."

Sewing face pieces, assembling sections, and making sure that the finished mask will be impervious to gas requires a whole series of complicated operations. Schools were established, and the women selected were trained in special courses until they became proficient in all the divisions of the task, the statement adds.

After that they were assembled in divisions, companies, platoons, and squads, under women leaders, and the defense service says that the method produced "unusual results both in discipline and control of production. Friendly rivalry as to the quantity and quality of output is carried on between the different companies."

GET SWEDISH TONNAGE.

Allies Defeat German Efforts to Prevent an Agreement.

STOCKHOLM, May 30.—The agreement between Sweden and the Allies for a supply of foodstuffs and other vital necessities in return for Swedish tonnage is completely acceptable to all shades of opinion. Germany did her utmost to delay negotiations, but Sweden succeeded in carrying her point, owing to Germany's pressing need of wood pulp and iron ore.

The negotiations finally took the shape of a contest between the Americans and Germany, as it is learned that they were carried out under the leadership of America and through the American Legation here.

NAG REICHSTAG ON U-BOATS

Socialists Want to Know Why 400,000 Troops Reached France in May.

GENEVA, May 30.—The Socialists have given notice that they intend to interpellate the Reichstag Naval Committee why during last month 400,000 enemy troops embarked for France without the slightest apparent attention from submarines, according to a Munich dispatch.

Names the 81st 'Stonewall Division.'

GREENVILLE, S. C., May 30.—By a general order issued at Camp Sevier by Major Gen. Bailey, the 81st Division will be known hereafter unofficially as the "Stonewall Division," after General "Stonewall" Jackson of the Confederate Army. The motto of the division will be "obedience, courage, loyalty." The unofficial insignia of the division will be a wildcat.

ATHLETES BEGIN TO GATHER

Cornell Favored to Win Intercollegiates at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, May 30.—Athletes here for the track and field championships of the Intercollegiate Amateur Athletic Association of America, to be held on Franklin Field tomorrow and Saturday, are a bit anxious about the weather and track conditions. Rain today thoroughly soaked the field and track, and unless there is a shift in conditions the going will be heavy.

Despite the war, there is a large entry list for the thirteen standard events on the program, with some notable performers among the athletes. Seventeen colleges will be represented, and it is probable that four more will be given permission tomorrow to enter teams.

Based on the season's work, Cornell is looked upon as having a good chance to win the meet.

BOYS' CLUB ATHLETES FIRST

Compile Seventy Points in Inter-settlement A. A. Games.

Athletes of the Boys' Club showed to advantage in the annual track and field meet of the Inter-Settlement Athletic Association, held yesterday at Brooklyn Athletic Field. These sturdy track and field stars corralled 70 points in the sixteen events decided, and won the point trophy easily. Hartley House athletes finished second, with 37 points; Clark House, third, with 33, and Hudson Guild fourth, with 3.

J. Barnes of the Boys' Club won the day's individual laurels, capturing two first places. He competed in the senior events, and won the half-mile run in 2:07 2-5, and the running high jump, handicap, with an effort of 5 feet 9 inches.

MUSIC NOTES.

Lucile Collette, Mme. Marrese, Messrs. Guarnieri, Henrion, and De Stefano, will give a concert tonight in Aeolian Hall for the benefit of Italian refugees and wounded soldiers.

John McCormack, who has just completed his $100,000 tour for the Red Cross, will go on a similar tour for the Knights of Columbus war camp fund, beginning next Sunday night in Boston.

How Would You Like To Go To France?

To stop at a little village; to see the peaceful life—the lovers with their gentle wooing—the twilight minstrels under the faithful moon—the happy homes—the contented villagers—AND THEN:

Hear war's alarms; see the troops go marching off, sweethearts parted; husbands, fathers under arms; hear the tread of tramping legions; the thrust and roar of battle; the gallant charge, the massed combat, AND

In the village the coming of the Hunnish Hordes, the spray of shrapnel and the shock of shell.

To see the magnificent womanhood of France, sublime devotion, eternal faith, undying love and heroic fortitude.

To be one in that terrific drama of the Western Front?

Thousands Have Gone In the Last Week!

Under the magic guidance of David Wark Griffith, supreme dramatic genius, through the realms of "Hearts of the World," and here is what some say of their trip:

Douglas Fairbanks:—"Great! No painting, no word, nothing in the world has ever spoken like that. Kept me up all night thinking how to describe it. Magnificent! The 'Birth of a Nation' broke my ribs, but this one hit me every way three times as hard. I got dizzy with the beauty of it. I didn't wake up until everybody was shouting and I was yelling with them. Great! Wonderful! Tried to knock my hands off, and can't talk to-day. Some punch that picture carries."

Charles Darnton in Evening World:—"'Hearts of the World' is more than a picture play. It is a world drama—it goes straight to the heart. It is this human quality that makes 'Hearts of the World' as big as mankind."

Victor Watson in N. Y. American:—"'Hearts of the World' is another Griffith triumph. A story more vital than 'The Birth of a Nation.' It is a monster success."

R. G. Welsh in N. Y. Telegram:—"'Hearts of the World' is more than a masterpiece. It is an inspiration."

Louis Sherwin in N. Y. Globe:—"More thrill, more action, more fine photography, more beautiful scenes, more magnificent acting, and more reality than you will find in a dozen so-called feature pictures."

Charlie Chaplin:—"I laughed, I sobbed; the tears were in my eyes. It's a beautiful picture, with a magnificent climax. I clapped my hands, I shouted."

EAST SIDE PARADES IN WAR STAMP DRIVE

More Than 20,000, from 14 Countries, March and Sing for Freedom and Victory.

REVIEWED BY GOVERNOR

War Mothers Led by Woman Who Has Given Six Sons—Stamp Festival at Polo Grounds.

More than 20,000 men, women, and children, representing seventy-five organizations and fourteen nationalities, marched yesterday through the east side in a parade which, arranged to boost War Savings Stamps sales, was also the first Memorial Day observance held by the east side. All along the line of march, which started in Rutgers Square and wound in a round-about fashion to the dismissal point in Seward Park, the paraders were received with a volume of cheering and enthusiasm that indicated the present solid and strong Americanism of the quarter's polyglot population.

Governor Whitman and his military staff reviewed the procession from a stand at Second Avenue and Tenth Street, and was heartily cheered when he arrived. Marked disapproval was shown, however, a second later when it was announced that Mayor Hylan, who had promised to review the parade, would not be there and had sent no explanation to the committee.

Following an escort of mounted police the honor of leading the parade through the densely packed streets went to a provisional regiment of coast artillery from Forts Wadsworth and Hamilton, under command of Colonel J. D. Watson. The soldiers, browned and made hard by months of training, stepped smartly along to the music of the Fifteenth Coast Artillery Band, of which Percy Grainger is a member. Back of the regulars came a battalion of Boy Scouts under Colonel Feldenberg, reinforced by a division of Junior Police from the Fifteenth Precinct under command of Captain Sweeney.

Keeping step to the solemn time of their own music came forty Jewish cantors singing the hymns of their faith as they marched in front of the United Hebrew Brothers. Next in line were 200 Greek veterans of the Balkan wars, fierce-looking fighters in their native costumes, but now enthusiastic supporters of the allied cause. Then came 150 men from the Polish Legion and about the same number of nurses from the Polish White Cross.

Inspiring the entire route the greatest demonstration of the parade came when "war mothers" of the east side, led by Mrs. Rosie Rosenberg, who has six sons fighting for the United States, some of them were, but not too old to march for America, and few of those who marched but had more than one star in the flag they carried. Frequently when their own band was silent these war mothers of the east side burst into patriotic songs.

Then in their neutral tinted green uniforms came the Home Defenders of the Fifteenth Precinct, followed by the Loyal Order of Hungarians—an American flag and a blast against the Hapsburgs to every fifth rank—and various organizations of Rumanians, Serbians, and Slovaks. Next place went to some 200 members of local waiters' unions, followed by fifty typical east side pushcart peddlers, trudging back of loads which yesterday consisted of flags, War Savings Stamp literature, and win-the-war posters, instead of the regular freight of trade. Several hundred members of the New Era Club were followed by the Brotherhood B'rith Abraham, 300 in line.

The Union of East Side Actors, with members dressed to represent "The Spirit of '76," and three others impersonating Washington, Lincoln, and Wilson, were received with storms of applause. The last section of the parade was devoted to about 600 school children, dressed in red, white, and blue, who completely put the bands in the shade when their lusty young voices were raised in patriotic airs.

Ex-Congressman Henry M. Goldfogle was Grand Marshal of the parade, and at the conclusion he accompanied Governor Whitman, who received continuous applause, to 77 Delancey Street, where twenty-five Jewish cantors gave the Governor a concert. The program opened with "The Star-Spangled Banner," and then, in observance of the day, the cantors intoned the ancient Hebrew Hymn to the Dead. The hymn was sung from the steps and was deeply impressive.

The Governor also attended a mass meeting held in the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society, 229 East Broadway, at which the Hebrew Orphan Asylum Band gave a concert. Addresses were made by Rabbi B. Sigel, Dr. Max Pinansky, A. Goldberg, J. L. Goldstein, and Jacob R. Fain, respectively. President and General Manager of the society, Dr. Gurdansky, who is Chairman Local Draft Board 83, addressed his remarks particularly to the "war mothers." He explained the duty of good citizens to uphold the Government under which they live and offered words of hope and consolation.

Before the Thrift Stamp parade was in progress, the New York War Savings Stamp Committee completed final arrangements for the Thrift Stamp festival to be held on Sunday afternoon at the Polo Grounds. The chief feature of the festival will be the singing of the oratorio "Elijah," with Metropolitan opera principals, a chorus of 10,000 voices, and the Great Lakes Naval Training Station Band, 200 pieces, under Lieutenant John Philip Sousa.

President Wilson and Mrs. Wilson will head the list of patrons, while boxholders include Colonel and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Schwab, Colonel and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Major and Mrs. August Belmont, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Taft, Mr. and Mrs. Whitman and Mrs. Whitman will represent the State, Mayor Hylan and Mrs. Hylan have promised to appear for the city, Rear Admiral Usher, commandant of the Brooklyn Navy Yard, will represent the navy, while Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell, commander of Camp Upton, will represent the army branch an aid.

Owing to the sudden illness of Mme. Hermann-Hetzk in California, the part of the Angel in the oratorio will be sung by Sophie Braslau, who began rehearsals yesterday. Lieutenant Sousa will meet the principals at the Metropolitan Opera House this afternoon, and a final rehearsal of the entire cast, including the 10,000-voice chorus and the band, will be held tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden.

In addition to the oratorio, Mme. Frances Alda will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" and Leon Rothier "La Marseillaise."

OFFER A WAR HOSPITAL.

Ogden Brothers Place Runkle Estate at Government's Disposal.

Special to The New York Times.

ORANGE, N. J., May 30.—For use as a war hospital the estate of William Runkle, at Centre Street and Highland Avenue, Orange, has been offered to the War Department by the present owners, Sidney M. Colgate, President of the Orange Board of Education, and his brother, Colonel Austen Colgate. The property adjoins Seven Oaks, the Colgate home, at 680 Centre Street. The offer was made by Colonel Colgate on behalf of himself and brother in a letter to Surgeon General William C. Gorgas. The house contains eighteen rooms, with three and a half acres of ground. The building stands well back from the road. The property was purchased by the Colgate brothers a year ago to protect the homestead in which they were born and in which they have always lived.

MONTCLAIR FINALLY DRY.

Counting of Soldier Vote Fails to Change Prohibition Victory.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., May 30.—The counting of the soldier vote in the referendum held on the excise question in Montclair on April 30 has affirmed the "dry" victory. Sixty-four ballots cast by soldiers were canvassed at the meeting of the County Board of Elections in Newark last night. The board threw out thirty-one of the ballots. Of this number twenty-six were rejected because the board ruled that ballots bearing a date later than April 30, or undated, and showing a later postmark than May 1, were inadmissible. Three ballots were declared inadmissible because their signers had been found on investigation not to be American citizens, and two on the report of Chief of Police Harry Gallagher that the signers "had not been found" as residents of Montclair.

At the referendum the vote was 1,661 "drys" and 1,631 "wets." Of the soldier ballots the "wets" obtained 22 and the "drys" 11, reducing the "dry" majority to 10.

ATTENTION CURRENT HISTORY.

Gentlemen:

One of the first things Senator Hitchcock wishes to do upon assuming the Chairmanship of the Foreign Relations Committee, and it is something he says he should have done before this, is to subscribe to Current History Magazine.

The Senator considers this publication the most necessary adjunct to conducting the affairs of the Committee, and it is our intention to keep it on file regularly at the Foreign Relations Committee Room in the Senate.

Permit me to convey to you the Senator's appreciation of Current History, and to say for him that he considers it a publication distinctly in a class by itself.

Enclosed you will find a check to cover the year's subscription.

Yours truly,
Earle B. Faddis
Secretary to Senator Hitchcock.

Senator Hitchcock.

Why?

Because CURRENT HISTORY MAGAZINE is entirely devoted to presenting monthly an accurate, connected, easily understood record of the progress of the war, here and abroad.

Because it is the only publication that presents in full the vital utterances and documents of the statesmen and Generals.

Because it is authoritative. It gathers the official facts from their original sources.

Because it presents the full truth without bias, comment, omission, or evasion.

A few of the 51 articles in the June number:

THE GREATEST BATTLE OF THE WAR
A thrilling account, covering four weeks of epic sacrifice and bravery in Picardy and Flanders, written by Philip Gibbs. Illustrated by maps and diagrams that will help you visualize the course of action.

AMERICAN SOLDIERS IN BATTLE
How our troops are meeting the foe. (Official data.)

THE ISSUES IN IRELAND
First publication in America of the complete report of the Irish Convention. An authentic document of vital importance; also the official report of the Chairman, Count Plunkett.

MORE BOLSHEVIST LEGISLATION
Complete narrative of progress of affairs in Russia.

GERMANY ATTEMPTS TO DIVIDE BELGIUM
Complete official report of the attempt to array the Flemings against the Walloons.

THE TREATMENT OF BRITISH PRISONERS
An official account of German methods almost unbelievable in their brutality.

STRIPPING BELGIAN INDUSTRY
How Germany is seeking to destroy utterly the economic strength of Belgium. Official documents.

THE SEA GUERRILLA'S LOG
The most complete account yet published of the astounding adventures of the German sea raiders Wolf and Seeadler, rivaling in daring and brutality the wildest tales of Captain Kidd.

THE RAIDS ON ZEEBRUGGE AND OSTEND
Exploits vying with Drake's for sheer bravery. Illustrated with maps and charts that show how the raids took place; with official reports.

LICHNOWSKY'S MEMORANDUM
Further developments relating to the now famous revelations. Full reply of Von Jagow.

FINDS TAX RAISING AN INDUSTRIAL TASK

City Bank Says What Confronts Country Is Job of Getting Certain Work Done.

DISCUSSES WILSON'S PLAN

Asserts Policy of Providing Fixed Percentage of Expenses Is Not Easily Carried Out.

The National City Bank of New York, in its June bulletin, to be issued today, discusses plans for additional revenue, and points out that what confronts the Government is not so much a financial task, calling for the raising of money, as an industrial task requiring certain work to be done. "The work must be done," it says, "or the money does not need to be raised, and if the work is done there can be no doubt about the ability of the country to settle with itself."

The bank calls attention to the fact that while Congressional appropriations for the current fiscal year were $19,000,000,000, the Government disbursements, including the advances made to the Allies, are not likely to exceed approximately $12,000,000,000. It says that "outgivings of official estimates at Washington" indicate that appropriations for the coming fiscal year will approximate $30,000,000,000. Whether or not the Government will be able to spend this huge sum of money, it says, will depend upon the capacity of the industries to turn out the materials required for war uses.

"The productive capacity of the country," the bank says, "is probably greater than it was last year, as a good deal of new equipment has been installed, but it is limited by the labor supply, which, in view of the draft calls, cannot be greater than a year ago, except as women have entered the industries. Of course, prices and wages are an important factor in expenditures; both are higher than last year, and to this extent the same amount of work will require larger appropriations."

Referring to President Wilson's address and reports of Congressional plans concerning new tax legislation, the National City Bank says that the policy of providing by taxation for a fixed percentage of the expenditures is not easily carried out when there is so much uncertainty as to what the expenditures will be. "It is said that the plan will be to raise 40 per cent. of the required income by taxation," declares the bank, "and this is surely enough, but if expenditures should turn out to be less than estimated the percentage of revenue raised by taxation may be higher than that.

"There is a question also as to what expenditures shall be included in calculating the 40 per cent. No good reason can be offered for covering the loans to allies by taxation, at least at this time, or the great expenditures upon freight ships, or the $200,000,000 which the Secretary of the Treasury has been authorized to expend upon the purchase of Farm Loan bonds, or numerous other outlays which will produce permanent assets, and if these are excluded more than 50 per cent. of the remaining expenditures this year is being met by taxation. Nothing like this record was ever made before.

"It is misleading in a degree to speak of meeting only a portion of the expenditures by taxation, for in the long run all expenditures, save such as produce income, must be met in that way. The debt which is not represented by productive or convertible assets must be carried and eventually discharged by taxation."

The question of how much shall be temporarily taken care of by loans is, the bank says, a question of expediency, having regard to the effects of the two methods of raising funds upon the business activities of the community. The war, it says, is to be won by stimulating the energies of the people, and it is wise statesmanship to know how to do this.

"The psychological factor is one of importance," the bank asserts. "If it is characteristic of human nature to work with greater energy and efficiency when there is a chance for personal gain than for the sole purpose of paying taxes that fact is worthy of the legislator's attention. At a time when it is desirable to stimulate everybody to the greatest efforts, it doesn't pay to neglect the personal inducements and rewards to which the average man naturally responds.

"The Treasury is said to have decided that winnings at poker are subject to taxation. Now, poker, however popular in some circles, is not a pastime which excites national solicitude; but it may serve to illustrate the point. If the poker player must stand his losses alone and turn over most of his winnings to the Treasury, there must be a point as taxes advance where he can no longer afford to play the game, at any rate if he is playing for gain. More or less risk attaches to all business, and this is particularly true of business now, with all the uncertainties which surround it and lurk in the future. Profits are largely on paper, unrealizable, and when men find it necessary to borrow money to pay taxes upon profits which they cannot withdraw from their business they may naturally and perhaps necessarily conclude that it is the part of prudence to reduce their operations.

"The taxation of profits applies rigidly and uniformly to every business, but all are not affected alike by the enforced withdrawal of funds, and as taxes are increased in unusual degree there is more danger that they may interfere with industries which need support and development at this time. Loans are a more flexible means of raising money, and if they enable the business community to adjust the burden so as to carry it more easily the interest charge is a minor consideration. The essential thing is that the energies and capacities of the people shall be completely enlisted in the work upon which they are engaged, and that the result of their labors, in the fullest possible degree, shall be placed one way or another at the disposal of the Government.

"The proposal to lay more taxes upon luxurious spending will excite no controversy. It is very desirable to recognize the fundamental difference between the withdrawal of profits for unnecessary expenditures which require the employment of labor and consumption of goods and the retention of profits for the expansion of a business which is rendering vital public services."

Reserve City Bankers to Meet Here.

The sixth annual convention of Reserve City Bankers will be held next Thursday and Friday at the Hotel Astor. Among the speakers scheduled to deliver addresses are: Fred I. Kent, Director General of Foreign Exchange for the Federal Reserve Board; Albert Breton, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company; C. R. McKay, Vice Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago; Frank K. Houston, Vice President of the Third National Bank of St. Louis; Charles W. Dupuis, Vice President of the Citizens' National Bank of Cincinnati, and Morton H. Fry of Bernhard, Scholle & Co. of this city. James W. Gerard will speak at the dinner on Thursday evening.

To Deal with Coffee Shipments.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The War Trade Board announced today that a committee of four, consisting of nominees of the War Trade Board, the Chartering Committee of the United States Shipping Board, and the Food Administration, and an advisory member from the coffee trade will meet at the New York Coffee Exchange at 11 o'clock Monday, June 3, to consider special cases of vessels which sailed with coffee from Brazil prior to May 27, 1918, which are affected by War Trade Board Ruling 129. Importers who have space engaged on such vessels will report in writing the rate of freight paid or contracted for on these ships to the Chartering Committee, Room 424, Custom House, New York.

RED CROSS CALLS NURSES.

Opens Campaign to Enlist at Least 10,000 Before Jan. 1 Next.

It was announced at the headquarters of the Atlantic Division of the Red Cross, 44 East Twenty-third Street, last night that the local officials had begun the formation of special committees in all cities in its territory, which includes New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, to take charge of the campaign for thousands of additional nurses for war service. The campaign begins next Monday and will last ten days.

The immediate object of the campaign is to get 5,000 nurses needed by the army. Ten thousand additional nurses must be available before Jan. 1, 1919. This is a minimum number. With the American Army expanding abroad the situation may require the enrollment of 25,000 additional nurses before the close of the year.

To obtain these nurses the Red Cross must get young women into training schools and get the nurse-employing public to engage the services of nurses in private cases only when life is at stake.

To fill gaps in the ranks of civilian nurses the Red Cross will mobilize Home Defense Nurses. Every married nurse or nurse not eligible for army service will be asked to enroll as a Home Defense Nurse. These nurses will be assigned for a few hours daily or weekly to nursing neighbors in emergencies and nursing in hospitals and dispensaries, baby-saving stations, and similar activities.

As in the War Fund drive, the Red Cross will utilize speakers and motion pitcures, and will attempt to get into direct touch with nurses who have not enrolled for service. Hospitals and nurses' training schools will be asked to co-operate. A special poster appealing to nurses to offer themselves for war service has been produced for the campaign.

The fact that the Red Cross is instituting a campaign to enroll nurses was not to be interpreted as indicating that the nurses of the country were "slackers," it was asserted at the headquarters, but that the sudden and extraordinarily heavy demand for nurses has not been thoroughly realized by the women available for the service.

All Red Cross nurses assigned to duty in military hospitals automatically become members of the Army and Navy Nurses' Corps. These nurses are entitled to the same Government war risk insurance as army and navy men.

TORE DOWN BRITISH FLAG.

Westerner Fined $25 for Disorderly Conduct in a Washington Hotel.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Because a British flag was making more of a display than the American flag was the reason given by a man who said he is Alfred Pearson of Seattle, Wash., for tearing down the former flag in the Shoreham Hotel last night. He gave this reason to Judge Mullowny in the police court today when charged with having been disorderly. He was fined $25, which he paid.

The Westerner, who is about seven feet in height and well proportioned, towered over Assistant Corporation Counsel Ringgold Hart as he stood at attention while the clerk read the charge that he had been disorderly in the Shoreham Hotel, in that he had torn from a circle of flags of the allied nations the flag of the British nation.

The only witness for the Government was Lieutenant George R. Elder, U. S. R. Lieutenant Elder told Judge Mullowny he was in the large living room of the hotel last night and saw Pearson enter. "He walked over to a circle of allied flags which was in the centre of the room," the witness testified, "and tore down the British flag."

The witness said, in answer to a question of Mr. Hart, that the defendant had made no remark, but dropped the flag upon the floor and walked out.

Judge Mullowny questioned Pearson. When the defendant said he tore the flag down because it was making more of a display than the American flag, Judge Mullowny asked him what right he had to do so. "Just as much as any one else," was the reply.

"Twenty-five dollars," said the court.

Pearson had more than $400 with him when arrested last night at the hotel, but refused to give collateral, and, therefore, spent the night in the police station.

CREATES 3 NEW RESERVES.

President Gives Status to Large Areas in New England and Virginia.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—President Wilson has issued a proclamation establishing three new national forests in the East, the "White Mountain" in Maine and New Hampshire, the "Shenandoah" in Virginia and West Virginia, and the "Natural Bridge" in Virginia. Since 1911 the Government has been engaged in acquiring lands about the headwaters of the principal rivers, both in New England and in the Southern Appalachians. As the lands are bought they are put under administration as "purchase areas," pending the time when their accumulation has reached a point justifying the proclamation which gives the lands their final status.

The White Mountain National Forest is located in Grafton, Carroll, and Coos Counties, N. H., and Oxford County, Me. The Government has actually taken title to about 267,000 acres, and in addition about 124,000 acres more have been approved for purchase, making a total of about 391,000 acres under Federal protection. This forest protects in part the watersheds of the Androscoggin, Saco, Connecticut, and Ammonoosuc Rivers.

The Shenandoah National Forest is in Rockingham, Augusta, Bath, and Highland Counties, Va., and Pendleton County, W. Va., and covers approximately 165,000 acres. It is for the most part on the watershed of the Shenandoah River, and also protects a part of the watersheds of the Potomac and the James.

The Natural Bridge National Forest is situated in Rockingham, Nelson, Amherst, Botetourt, Bedford Counties, Va. The Federal Government has actually acquired title to a little over 73,000 acres, and an additional area of approximately 29,000 acres has been approved for purchase.

NEW PARCEL POST ORDERS.

Burleson Aims to Make Farm Products Reach Larger Area.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Postmaster General Burleson issued orders today designed to simplify and facilitate shipments of farm products by parcel post over a greater area.

Present restrictions in packing perishable articles, such as butter, eggs, dressed fowls, vegetable, and fruits, have been changed so those products may be sent to any post office that can be reached within a reasonable time without spoiling, packed in crates, boxes, baskets, or other suitable containers which will protect the contents and prevent leakage.

More liberal packing regulations covering liquids also are contained in the order.

17 Fewer Deaths at Army Camps.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Health conditions at home camps continue to be very good, the Surgeon General of the Army stated today in his health report for the week ending May 24. Pneumonia prevails at Camps Travis, Texas; Dodge, Iowa, and Gordon, Georgia, with measles generally prevalent at all cantonments. Deaths decreased from 178 last week to 161 this week.

More Wood Pulp Consumed.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Pulp wood consumption was estimated by the forest service today at 5,536,902 cords for 1917, an increase of approximately 6 per cent. over 1916. Wood pulp production is estimated at 3,464,511 tons, compared with 3,271,310 tons in 1916.

WITHDRAW BOOK FROM SALE

Publishers Take Action Because of Criticism of Belligerents.

At the request of the National Security League G. P. Putnam's Sons have withdrawn from sale a book by Ellen Key entitled "War, Peace, and the Future," because of alleged unpatriotic sentiments expressed in the book, and have authorized the National Security League to request the public libraries of the country to withdraw the book from circulation, Sidney H. Putnam, Secretary of the publishers, said yesterday at his home, 324 West Eighty-fourth Street.

The book, which came out before the entrance of the United States into the war, condemned all the warring nations alike for their participation in the war, it was said at the National Security League, and protested against conscription as detrimental to race hygiene. Mr. Putnam said that the book was one of eight which G. P. Putnam's Sons had published by the same author, and that as it was published before the United States was at war, the sentiments of the writer in regard to the justice of the allied cause were not closely examined.

SAILOR SAVES MAN IN BAY.

Leaps from Ferry After Printer Who Had Jumped Overboard.

John Bewers, a sailor in the United States Navy, leaped from a ferryboat bound for Staten Island last night and rescued a drowning man who had jumped from the ferryboat. The ferryboat, which was going at full speed, had gone more than a mile from the spot where Bewers leaped before it could be stopped, and as the night was dark it was more than fifteen minutes before Bowers and William Bolling, the drowning man, could be located by a rescue party in a lifeboat lowered from the ferryboat.

Bolling, who said he was a printer, living at 333 West Twenty-second Street in this city, was taken to the Staten Island Hospital as a prisoner, where he would give no reason for his leap from the boat. Bewers said that he was 22 years old and stationed on a ship anchored near Tompkinsville, S. I. Neither man was seriously injured, and Bewers was able to return to his ship.

NEW BAN ON IMPORTS.

War Board Restricts Shipments of Substitutes for Rubber.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The War Trade Board announced today the adoption of restrictions against the importation of certain substitutes for natural rubber, the object being to conserve the cargo space on ships. This action has become necessary because the recent restriction on the importation of crude rubber has brought in its train restrictions upon the importation of four commodities—gutta joolatong, gutta siak, gutta percha, and balata, possessing some of the characteristics of rubber and capable under certain circumstances of being used as substitutes for natural rubber.

It was feared that, with importations of crude rubber restricted, attention might be directed to these other substances, and that, unless checked, an importation of these would set in, which would take up all, or more than all, of the cargo space saved by the rubber restriction order, and more than defeat the purpose of this restriction, viz., to render tonnage available for war purposes.

Some of these commodities contain a very high percentage of water, running as high as 65 to 70 per cent. in the case of gutta joolatong, and are very heavy and bulky, so that an extensive import would be highly injudicious. Imports of gutta percha and of balata will be restricted for the coming year from June 1, 1918, until March 31, 1919, to the quantities imported last year—630 tons of gutta percha and 1,400 tons of balata.

Importations of gutta joolatong and gutta siak from overseas will be restricted entirely in the future. Those shipments on which export bills of lading from the foreign port of origin are issued before June 1, 1918, will be permitted entry when they arrive.

The War Trade Board has extended to importations of gutta percha and balata, and to those imports of gutta joolatong and gutta siak now en route, the principle of option control of price which has already been successfully applied in the case of crude rubber. Importers will be required to deliver to the American Government an option, giving it the right to purchase at the standard prices fixed by the War Trade Board the imports at any time until they have been sold and actually delivered to the manufacturer.

The intent of this provision is to prevent a speculative increase in the prices of these commodities on account of the restricted quantities available for consumption in this country, and to limit quotations to the normal figures prevailing before the introduction of the restrictions.

MAY EXPORT BISCUITS.

War Trade Board Will Consider Shipments of "Wheatless" Crackers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—The regulations of the War Trade Board previously in force have prohibited the exportation of crackers and biscuits manufactured wholly from wheat flour. The board now announces that it is prepared to consider applications for the exportation of so-called "wheatless" crackers and biscuits to the West Indies, Central America, and West Africa.

Applicants should attach to their applications a statement giving the percentage of wheat or rye contained in the crackers or biscuits, and also the other component parts, in order that they may receive prompt consideration.

TO STOP TIME SERVICE.

Telephone Company Eliminates Such Calls as Among Nonessentials.

The New York Telephone Company announced yesterday that, beginning on June 3, it would discontinue answering requests for the time of day. It was becoming more and more necessary, the company said, to reduce nonessential services of every kind in this country. The telephone service was necessarily affected by this general condition, and its less essential uses must be restricted.

"Answering telephone requests for the correct times comes within the list of services that are nonessential," the announcement said. "In New York City alone the central office operators answer 250,000 of these requests every day, and the labor and equipment devoted to this work are needed for handling wartime messages."

Costumers There Seek Pay for Goods Sold in 1907.

As the result of a decision by the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court ordering a new trial on the ground of insufficient evidence, testimony has been taken before the United States Consul in Paris in a suit of Martial, Armand & Co., Parisian costumers, against Hugh McM. Creighton, a New York broker, to recover $293 as the balance due for wearing apparel delivered by the plaintiff to Mrs. J. B. Rawlinson on the guaranty by Creighton to pay for goods purchased by Mrs. Rawlinson up to $1,000. The guaranty was made by Creighton in 1907 and confirmed by him in 1909 on a letter head of the Aztec Club at Phoenix, Ariz., in which he stated the credit would continue until countermanded by him.

When the case was tried in the First District Municipal Court Creighton admitted that he guaranteed the account of Mrs. Rawlinson, but contended that the statute of limitations of New York relieved him of payment. He also contended that the wearing apparel had been paid for. Maurice Leon, for the plaintiff, will offer in evidence at the second trial the written guarantees made by Creighton and contends that, since the guaranty was not canceled, the statute of limitations does not apply to the suit.

The papers in the case show that the statute of limitations under the French laws allows thirty years in which to sue for debt, and that French merchants often lose accounts against American customers because they wait too long to bring their actions here, as a result of which the plea of the statute of limitations is frequently effective. The present suit is a test of whether a guaranty of payment continues regardless of the statute of limitations. The first judgment for the plaintiff, which was reversed by the Appellate Division, was for $450.89, which included interest.

SEES AID TO VICTORY IN SOUNDER BUSINESS

Lewis T. Pierson Tells Maryland Bankers the Merit of Trade Acceptance.

MUST USE RESERVE SYSTEM

Chairman of Council Declares Open Account Is Unscientific, Unsafe and Wasteful.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 30.—"To the nation and to all interested in protecting its interests, in the present gravest emergency in its history, the American Trade Acceptance Council would say that the development of the trade acceptance method in American business not only is important and urgent, but indispensable."

This message was brought here today to the Maryland Bankers' Association in convention by Lewis E. Pierson, Chairman of the council and Chairman of the Irving National Bank of New York. "If we are to win this war and protect the national interest in the world commercial contest which will follow, we must put the business of the nation upon a sounder basis, a basis which the founders of the Federal Reserve system provided and of which to the present time we have not availed ourselves," Mr. Pierson asserted.

"While the national trade acceptance movement is being discussed through a number of organizations in different parts of the country, the greatest activity centres around the American Trade Council, New York City. It was formed some six months ago to show that the acceptance is superior to the open account and disclaims any intention to dictate or prescribe rules, regulations or limitation.

"We believe that the trade acceptance method when developed will improve American banking and business conditions generally, and we hope that its development can proceed, without creating any harmful disturbances in the business of the country. Therefore we wish to avoid rush and hurry.

"It is not a fad or novelty which we propose but a tested and tried business method bearing, in full harmony with the Federal Reserve system, directly upon the present and future prosperity of the entire nation.

"For the purpose of giving practical expression to the seriousness which characterized the whole national trade acceptance educational movement, it might be stated that it has grown out of a national emergency and in response to a definitely expressed national necessity. Our task is to get into usable shape the non-cash resources with which our great nation is so bountifully provided, and which, if properly treated, will serve so many of the purposes ordinarily served by cash, and which, if not so treated, will bear upon our purposes in this war or upon any other business purpose with only a small part of their full power.

"The open account method is unscientific, unsafe, wasteful, does not operate in the interest of proper efficiency, tends to disturb rather than to keep in proper adjustment the equities which grow out of merchandise transactions, and, most of all, tends to disable, tie-up and render unavailable commercial credit and business resource, which, according to every reasonable theory, should be strong, active, and fully available.

"The trade acceptance method is strong at every point. It is simple, easy of comprehension and of application, operates in the interest of harmony and business understanding, disturbs no proper business relationship, and it is so logical in its processes that its introduction into American business need be accompanied by no element of disturbance which should be taken seriously."

United States Senator J. Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, who was to have been the principal speaker at the dinner tonight, wired his regrets. President W. S. Gordy of Salisbury was elected President.

An appeal in which J. H. Tregoe of New York, Secretary of the National Association of Credit Men, declared the husbanding of credit resources to be a matter of pressing patriotic necessity, caused the Southern Hardware Jobbers' Association, in convention at the Traymore, to indorse today trade acceptances and to appoint a committee to conduct a campaign for their adoption throughout the whole of the South.

War Trade Board Announces New Rule for Cotton Shipments to Italy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—To facilitate shipments of raw cotton to Italy and to advance the control by the Italian Government of such shipments, the War Trade Board announced today that an individual export license will be required for the exportation of raw cotton to destinations in Italy on and after June 10, 1918. These licenses should be applied for, in accordance with the regulations issued on May 13, 1918.

Applications should be filed in triplicate and forwarded to the Italian High Commission, 1,712 New Hampshire Avenue, Washington. The original of the approved application will be sent by the mission directly to the War Trade Board, Bureau of Exports; one copy will be retained by the mission and one returned to the applicant for convenience in keeping a record.

This action of the War Trade Board, as it affects shipments of raw cotton to Italy, advances twenty days the action of May 15, 1918, whereby this special license was to be withdrawn on June 30, 1918.

FARM BONDS SELL WELL.

Nearly $45,000,000 Worth Disposed Of in the Last Nine Days.

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Nearly $45,000,000 farm loan bonds of the new issue, bearing 5 per cent., have been sold during the last nine days in the intensive campaign conducted by the Farm Loan Board through a group of bond dealers. It was announced today that the campaign would be continued until about Sept. 15, or shortly before the Fourth Liberty Loan drive is started, and the board hopes to dispose of $75,000,000 bonds by that time to provide funds for farm loans up to Jan. 1, 1919.

The bonds are sold at an interest of 1 per cent., the interest going to bond houses as selling commissions. They are exempt from Federal, State, and local taxes. A special division, directed by F. J. H. Von Engelken, has been created by the Farm Loan Board to organize machinery for distributing bonds in the future.

HYLAN DENIES LEAVE TO OFFICER IN ARMY

Forces Dr. Curtin to Resign Place, Though He Waived All Pay from the City.

SERVED FOR 18 YEARS

Bronx Medical Examiner Files a Protest on Behalf of Those Making Sacrifices to Serve Their Country.

It became known yesterday that Dr. Thomas H. Curtin, Assistant Medical Examiner in the Bronx and for eighteen years Coroner's Physician, has resigned under protest because Mayor Hylan refused to approve of his request for leave of absence without pay so that he might engage in war work. Dr. Curtin is a Captain in the Medical Reserve Corps and has been for many years Professor of Pathology at Fordham University, assistant eye surgeon of the Manhattan Eye and Ear Hospital, surgeon of the Bronx Eye and Ear Hospital, and visiting physician at St. Joseph's Institute for the Blind and other institutions.

In his letter of resignation to his chief, Dr. Charles Norris, Bronx County Medical Examiner, Dr. Curtin said he was at a loss to understand why, after eighteen years of service, he was refused a leave of absence without pay.

"To say the least," he said, "I feel that it is shabby treatment on the part of the city, and I enter this protest not particularly for myself, but in behalf of the hundreds of others who have made greater sacrifices to serve their country in this crisis."

Dr. Curtin yesterday received an acknowledgment of his resignation from Dr. Norris, and at the same time the correspondence between him and Dr. Norris was made public.

On April 16 Dr. Curtin applied to Dr. Norris for a leave of absence without pay for the duration of the war. The following day Dr. Norris acknowledged receipt of the application and informed Dr. Curtin that the application had been referred to Mayor Hylan, "to whom all such requests must be made." On May 7 Dr. Norris wrote the following letter to Dr. Curtin:

My Dear Dr. Curtin.

I have just received a letter from his Honor, the Mayor, which reads: "The Mayor today disapproved, pursuant to the provision of Chapter 435, Laws of 1917, the application of Dr. Thomas Hayes Curtin, Assistant Medical Examiner, for permission to enter the national service."

This is a policy of the Mayor in regard to leaves of absence for duty in the national service, and it affects all departments. It practically means that entrance into the national service is an act of resignation. I am sorry, but I believe in your case it will make no difference to you. It will, however, make a very considerable difference to a large number of city employes who have entered the national service.

Dr. Curtin did nothing on receipt of the letter, and when the matter was again brought to his attention by Dr. Norris's secretary, he said, he informed the office of the Medical Examiner that he did not intend to resign. On May 20 he received the following letter from Dr. Norris:

The Mayor has full power to refuse you a leave of absence on war service. The reason I am writing is that there is only one course for me to follow, however much I may regret. I must either ask for your resignation, or you must come back to duty, which means resigning from the army.

To this Dr. Curtin, on May 24, made the following reply:

My dear Dr. Norris:

I am in receipt of your letter of the 20th, in which you state that the Mayor had disapproved my application for a leave of absence on war service and that I must either resign as Assistant Medical Examiner of the City of New York or resign my commission in the Medical Reserve Corps of the U. S. A. I must say that I feel that this action on the part of the Mayor is unjust. I have not asked for any financial remuneration from the City of New York during the period of my war service, although there would be $600 difference in my pay. I am simply asking for a leave of absence without pay during the period of the war, with the privilege of returning to duty at the cessation of hostilities. Why this should be denied in my case, taking into consideration my eighteen years of service with an unblemished record, I am at a loss to understand, when even in times of peace it has been customary to grant it, and sometimes with pay. To say the least, I feel that it is shabby treatment on the part of the city and I enter this protest not particularly for myself but in behalf of the hundreds of others who have made greater sacrifices to serve their country in this crisis.

Under the conditions you have imposed on me there is no alternative but to resign my position as Assistant Medical Examiner, for I feel that it is my duty in these critical times, when the Government is asking for my services, to give them freely without any stint, no matter what the cost may be financially or otherwise.

Wishing you and the Medical Examiner's office success, believe me to be, very truly yours,

THOMAS HAYES CURTIN, M. D., Captain, M. R. C., U. S. A.

Dr. Curtin is a graduate of Plattsburg and recently received his commission. He has been on an indefinite leave of absence for several months from the office of the Medical Examiner. This leave was necessary because of his activities as an eye specialist in institutions where he examined applicants for the aviation service and others as to their fitness. He declined yesterday to make any further comment on the action of the Mayor other than to refer to the correspondence, which, he said, explained his attitude in full. Dr. Curtin lives at 2,493 Valentine Avenue, the Bronx.

DREICER HOUSE ROBBED.

Police Say Boys Had Taken Goods Valued at $500.

When Walter Lasser went to call on his uncle, Jacob Dreicer, the Fifth Avenue jeweler, last evening, he found the door of the Dreicer home, 4 East Seventy-fourth Street, open and the rooms on the lower floor ransacked. Lasser found Patrolman Healy and told him what had happened, and the policeman accompanied Lasser to the house.

It is charged by the police that Healy came across two boys on the second floor who were engaged in carrying valises containing silverware, toilet articles, and six small boxes containing small uncut precious stones. The police estimated the value of the goods to be $500.

The prisoners said they were William Kelley, 13 years old, of 213 East Eightieth Street, and Thomas Cody, 10 years old, of 1,544 Second Avenue. At the East Sixty-seventh Street Station the boys said they had found a screwdriver. They were released in the custody of their parents and will be arraigned today in the Children's Court on charges of juvenile delinquency. Mrs. Dreicer telephone the police that she would be in court to testify as to the complaint which was made by her nephew.

Army Hospital Needs Stenographers

Competent stenographers and typists are needed at the United States Army General Hospital No. 1, Gun Hill Road and Bainbridge Avenue, the Bronx. The men are wanted for record work in the medical department. This is an opportunity for men not of draft age to enter the regular army. Men who have reached the age of 21 since June 5, 1917, but who have not yet registered, will be accepted only up to June 5. Applicants should see the recruiting officer at the hospital any weekday between 9 A. M. and 5 P. M.

BEWARE BLIGHT AND BUGS.

War Gardeners Warned to Forestall Fungus That Gives No Warning.

One day's delay cost a Jersey war gardener almost the whole crop from three dozen promising tomato plants last Summer, and another lost practically all his potatoes because he waited till after the bugs appeared before he began to spray the vines. These are isolated cases, but they are typical of thousands, and they are likely to be repeated this Summer, for the average war gardener gives his plants and preparations little thought out of season, hence a few words of warning and advice from a Columbia professor of agriculture to his class may not come amiss:

"Soil preparation, good seed, fertilizer, and proper planting will start a crop, but they give no assurance of a harvest," said he. "Cultivation and the destruction of insects and pests are what really make the crop. Cultivation suggests itself and is not likely to be overlooked. Weeds seem to come all too quickly, but their approach is snail-like compared with blights and bugs. A gardener may go to bed at night with a clean garden and awaken in the morning with myriads of insects ravaging his plants. He may not notice an insidious blight creeping upon his potatoes and cucumbers and the rose bug may swarm upon his bushes in an hour.

"Hence the importance of being prepared beforehand. For the small gardener three remedies and the means for applying them are needed, and these three, at a small outlay, will make him safe against the common enemies of plant life that are to be expected every season. Plant destroyers fall into three classes: insects that eat foliage and stems, insects that suck the juices from the plant, and blights that are caused by the action of fungus growths. Usually the eating insects, such as potato bugs, cabbage worms, cucumber beetles, and tomato worms, are classed as most destructive, with the sucking lice next and the blights last. To my mind the order should be reversed. Chewing and sucking bugs and worms are bound to give some hint of their presence before they can do much harm, and even after their depredations are under way there is time to run over to the drug store for some paris green or to the tobacco store for a plug of navy, for Paris green will poison the chewers and the tobacco, quickly boiled and cooled, will produce a deadly effusion for the suckers. But the blights come like a thief in the night and give us no hint till the damage is done—then it is too late for repair. Most of the authorities agree that a blighted plant cannot be restored, and many say that there is nothing that will stop its deadly progress, once it is started.

"Every gardener, no matter how small his plot, should provide himself early in the Spring with a spray pump and a powder gun. The size and elaborateness of these devices should, of course, depend upon the size of the garden, but it pays to get the best that can be afforded. Spray pumps for ordinary gardens range from 75 cents to $12, and one is as effective as another, for all that is required is to turn liquid into mist that will cover all the leaves and stems of a plant; but there is a great difference in the time and labor required to spray a given area. The powder gun may be a tin can with holes punched in the bottom or a factory-made air pump that throws powder in a cloud that envelops the plant. But the material applied is far more important than the method of application. Many a bug-ridden potato patch has been saved with paris green and whisk broom.

"Potatoes, cabbage, cucumbers, melons, beans, peas, and many other common crops are subject to blights as well as to the ravages of insects. If bordo-lead is applied very soon after the plant is out of the ground, blight is likely to be prevented and attacks by insects before the plant becomes established are made harmless. Potatoes should be sprayed with bordo-lead when from four to six inches high. There may be no sign of blight or bugs, but remember blight gives no warning. Cucumbers and melons should also be treated early.

FINDS ALLIED LABOR FIRM FOR THE WAR

Mission Returns from England and France, Sure Workers Do Not Favor Inconclusive Peace.

PACIFISTS ALL POLITICIANS

Union Labor Misrepresented, Say Members, by Nonworkers in Labor Parties.

Members of the American labor mission arrived in New York last night after spending two months in Great Britain and France, where they studied the labor movements of those countries and took occasion to advise workingmen there of what American labor was doing to win the war. In the opinion of the members of the mission the success of the war is in the hands of labor, and their observations have convinced them that the mass of laboring men in both Great Britain and France are intent upon prosecuting the war to the finish and are not at all inclined to talk about peace, although in both countries there are politicians who are endeavoring to swing the labor organizations to the adoption of their policies of peace parleys with German workingmen.

James A. Wilson of Cincinnati, who is President of the Pattern Makers' Union, is Chairman of the mission. He said last night that he felt certain that a convention to be held in London in September the British Trade Union Congress would repudiate the resolution adopted at last year's gathering when the organization went on record as favoring "conversation" with representatives of labor of enemy countries.

"Organized labor in Great Britain," said Mr. Wilson; "is doing everything it can to bring about success. There are, however, in England, certain classes of people who term themselves 'leaders of labor' who are in reality not working men, but members of a labor political party. Some of these leaders are the ones who are advocating peace talks with German working men."

Mr. Wilson said he referred to Ramsay Macdonald, Arthur Henderson, Arthur Snowden, and Philip Snowden.

"We had opportunities to speak to thousands of working men in shipyards, munition plants, and railroad shops," continued Mr. Wilson. "We found that in all cases the policy of the American Federation of Labor that no representative of American labor should meet in conference with representative workers of enemy countries so long as the war lasts was received with cheers and practically unanimous approval."

Mr. Wilson said the laborers of Great Britain were organizing a new political party. A convention is scheduled for some time in June, and under the terms of the call none but workers will be permitted to be affiliated with this new body.

The French workingmen, said Mr. Wilson, are bothered, as are the British, by politicians connected with the Socialist Party. The majority of the French Socialists, he said, were in accord with the policy of the American Federation of Labor, while some members of the minority were in favor of an international conference which contemplated meeting German workingmen with the view of discussing peace terms. Mr. Wilson said he believed that many of the French agitators who bothered labor were tools of German propagandists, and that some had been discovered to be in the pay of the Germans.

The American Labor Mission held four conferences with labor leaders in London and three conferences with labor men in Paris. At each it was found that some of those present favored parleys with representatives of German labor, although it was evident that the real leaders of labor in each instance were not in sympathy with that proposal.

The Labor Mission consisted of nine members appointed by President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor. They are George Berry of Tennessee, William H. Johnston of Washington, D. C.; Martin F. Ryan of Kansas City, Joan P. Frey of Cincinnati, William Short of Seattle, Chester M. Wright of New York, Miss M. Scott of New York, Miss Agnes Nestor of Chicago, and James A. Wilson of Cincinnati.

In addition to the representatives of the American Federation of Labor were the following men and women representing various other interests: Professor A. O. Lovejoy of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore; E. O. McCormick, Vice President of the Southern Pacific Railroad; E. T. Meredith of Des Moines, Charles Belmont Davis of New York, Le Roy C. Dunn of Des Moines, Alson Secor of Des Moines, Mrs. R. L. Grenfell of Denver, Mrs. S. B. Spraggon of St. Louis, and Miss J. M. Higgins of Omaha.

Several members of the mission were in London at the time of the air raids a week ago last Sunday when German shells killed 37 persons and injured 135. One of the delegates said the raid started at about a quarter after 11 and lasted until about 2 o'clock in the morning.

The Commissioners told of seeing American troops and spoke enthusiastically of the showing made by the American boys. Mr. Wilson said that reports of drinking and disease sent to this country were absolutely untrue. He said he had opportunities of conversing with doctors and others who told him that the health and morals of the American troops were exemplary.

The members of the mission drew up a formal statement last night in which, after describing in detail their travels in Great Britain and France and their exceptional opportunities for discovering the war sentiment of all classes in those countries, they declared that they found no feeling in favor of abandoning the war before victory is won, though a few persons were willing to try negotiation.

"War-weary the British people are; but they are very far from being ready to quit," the statement says. "The American public ought, however, to understand very clearly that if the war continues into another year, it is just, and it is necessary, that a still greater part of the burden should be assumed by the United States.

"Through the courtesy of the French Government we were also enabled to visit France, and we regretted only that, in consequence of arrangements previously made, we were able to spend only a week there. It was, however, a very crowded and memorable week. A luncheon with the exiled Belgian Government at Havre; receptions at Paris by the President of the Republic, by Marshal Joffre, by the Military Governor of the city, and the Governor of the Invalides, by the Municipal officials at the Hotel de Ville, and by the American Ambassador, Mr. Sharpe, and a special adjournment with 'demonstration' by the Chamber of Deputies, the first occasion of the kind in the history of the republic, were some of the events arranged for us.

"Both in Paris and London important conferences were held by the entire members of the mission—who bore credentials from the American Federation of Labor—with the official representatives of the trade unions and the labor parties of both countries. These conferences dealt largely with the attitude of organized labor toward war aims and policies. Our American Labor Mission took an unqualified stand in support of the program of war aims and peace terms enunciated by President Wilson, and declared that under no circumstances would organized labor in America send delegates to any conference at which German or Austrian representatives were present, so long as German armies remain on French or Belgian soil, or the Prussian power continues to be a menace to the liberties and the peace of the allied nations."

APPEALS TO ALLIED LABOR.

Roberts Rebukes Pacifists—Envoys Tell of War Spirit Here.

LONDON, May 30.—George H. Roberts, Minister of Labor, presided last night at a dinner given by the Industrial League to the trade-union delegation which has returned from the United States. Mr. Roberts dwelt on the success of the mission, whose members, he said, were among the most trusted representatives of the labor movement.

During the war, he added, most of the representatives of British labor had proved themselves to be patriots. He went on to say that he intended to make his position perfectly clear, and that if what he had to say was not compatible with membership in the Labor Party he was prepared to come out and take his stand with those of the labor movement who were to be trusted to continue the policy of assuring the future of the country and the empire.

"The old cries and shibboleths can never be resuscitated," he continued. "Those people who are anxious to show their affection for Germany had better go to Germany to carry out their desire."

The differences which had been revealed during the war, Mr. Roberts added, were not evanescent; they were fundamental. Labor's attitude in the future must be defined irrespective of old associations and attachments.

Charles Duncan, a member of the delegation to the United States, said that the American people had never been beaten and were determined not to be beaten in this war.

W. A. Appleton, Secretary of the General Federation of Trades Unions and also a member of the British delegation, said that America was animated by a magnificent spirit. He had seen the drafting of American troops, and never before had witnessed such a splendid demonstration.

WOULD SWEAR ALL TO FLAG.

Dr. Woelfkin Says Sons of Teutons Should Declare Loyalty.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP UPTON, L. I., May 30.—"Every Teuton born or raised in this country, including myself, should be called into court and made to declare undivided allegiance to this country," said the Rev. Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church, in an address at the memorial day service here.

"Such procedure would include me, for my father was born in Germany, but I should be glad to make a statement of my loyalty. We must have no peace until it is right. The world situation cannot permit of compromise. There is a cancer in the world body and if cutting it out means to go deep and cut out the entire German people, it must be done. Better to die on the operating table than to have the cancer sewn up inside of you."

Dr. Woelfkin declared that every newspaper in the language of our enemies should be suppressed.

General Bell presided at the services which were also attended by all the chapains in camp and 3,500 newly drafted men. An outdoor entertainment planned for the new men was held in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium, because of bad weather.

GIFT SWORD FOR MARCH.

Easton, General's Home Town, Presents Jeweled Weapon to Him.

EASTON, Penn., May 30.—The City of Easton, birthplace of General Peyton C. March, Chief of Staff of the army, presented a jeweled sword to him tonight. The presentation was made by Mayor David W. Nevin.

After expressing his appreciation for the gift, General March told of some of the accomplishments of the War Department during the past few weeks. In May, he said, more American troops were taken to Europe than were there when he left in February. It was not only the man power of America that was now mobilized, the General said, but other resources, including the emotional forces of the country. By a great wave of patriotism, he declared, those who have sought to accumulate profit from the war have been swept aside.

Army Officers Hurt in Auto Crash.

SUMMIT, N. J., May 30.—An Army Captain and two Lieutenants were injured this afternoon when an automobile, after skidding on the wet pavement, overturned near the arch bridge at Millburn. Captain Vogt, a surgeon in 42d Infantry, was driving the car at the time. His companions were Lieutenants Guething of the Ordnance Reserve Department, and McElroy of the National Army. Captain Vogt sustained two broken legs and was otherwise badly injured. He was brought to the Overlook Hospital. The others were also brought here, but after receiving medical treatment left.

SWANN FINDS LESS CRIME HERE IN 1917

Reports 309 Convictions, the Smallest Number Since 1900 —2,378 Pleaded Guilty.

GRAND JURY INDICTED 4,742

Staff Larger, but District Attorney Says War Has Brought Many New Duties.

A decrease in the work of the District Attorney's Office and of the Grand Juries, and an apparent diminution of crime in Manhattan in 1917, are shown in the number of convictions and pleas received for all sorts of offenses according to the annual report of the District Attorney made public yesterday. There were 309 convictions, the lowest number since 1900. The highest number of convictions within the period of seventeen years was in 1908, during the last year of the administration of William Travers Jerome, who had 649 convictions. Pleas of guilty were made by 2,378 persons in 1917, 939 less than in 1915, the record year.

To what extent the New York County prosecutor's work may be affected by a decrease in crime cannot be determined. It could be ascertained approximately only by a comparison with the work of the police and of the courts and the District Attorney for the period covered. But the decrease in criminal prosecutions may be accounted for partly by the division of the Manhattan and Bronx Boroughs in 1915, the effects of which were not felt until the following year, when Mr. Swann's report showed a marked reduction in pleas and a slight decrease in convictions. The war, too, has had some effect in this feature of criminal work.

During the last year the Grand Juries found 4,742 indictments and dismissed 3,611, a total of 8,353. In 1914 and 1915 there were more than 7,000 each year, and during Jerome's time there were 7,877, the record for the seventeen years.

Although this official record indicates there had been less work of this nature for the staff of the District Attorney, that staff is some 20 per cent. larger than in the days of Jerome. However, District Attorney Swann points out that other features of the work of his office have been largely increased by war conditions. These include investigation of war charities, raids, and prosecutions in co-operation with the Government officials for the protection of soldiers and sailors, and the apprehension of slackers.

Other added work that has been completed since the preparation of the annual report are bogus war stocks, the prosecution in the so-called fraud sales of land to the city, conviction of some sixty Republican primary Election Inspectors, and the investigation and indictments obtained in the Fusion campaign fund.

Claims Improvement in Prison.

District Attorney Swann claims credit for improving conditions in the City Prison—the Tombs—where conditions were formerly bad because of the great number of prisoners held there for long periods waiting trials. Concerning this his report says:

"The detention of prisoners in the City Prison from the time of indictment to the time of trial, which was about six weeks when the present District Attorney took office, was reduced to three weeks during the first year of his administration, and during the last year reached the record interval of two weeks and four days. During this year Mrs. Emily Walker, a visitor in the Tombs for the Prison Association, found not a single case of delay to report."

The Bail Bond Bureau of the District Attorney's office collected in 1917, on forfeited bonds, $148,244.88, which was paid into the City Treasury. This is an increase of more than $62,000 over the collections of the previous year, and, according to the appended statement of the Chief Clerk, John W. Keller, these collections represent the largest amount obtained in the history of the District Attorney's office, and including all periods when the Bronx was a part of it.

Mr. Keller wrote of this:

"These large collections indicate that more than ordinary zeal and care has been taken in the scrutiny of securities and property offered for bail. The total bail uncollectable amounts to $100, and all but two defendants who fled were later apprehended.

Mr. Swann says his new method of handling domestic relations cases, such as deserted wives and abandoned children, which he started in 1916, has proved most successful. Instead of the old form of extradition of fathers and husbands for trial here co-operation has been had with District Attorneys in the counties where the defendants may be found, with the general result that these defendants have been able to earn money for the support of their families and to keep out of prison.

In breaking up gangs of operators in automobile frauds, who had long collected large amounts from insurance companies for incendiary auto fires, the District Attorney says restitution of $64,334 was made to the victimized companies, or more than 50 per cent. of what they had been defrauded.

Deputy District Attorneys and other employes of the office to the number of twenty-five have joined the army and navy, and the places of several of them may not be filled during the war.

SOLDIER GUILTY OF THEFT.

Jury Convicts Man Arrested After Fight with Police.

Private Roy S. Smithson, 20 years old, of Mount Hope, W. Va., one of the four soldiers of Company C, 49th Infantry, who were arrested early on the morning of April 13 after a fight in the street with the Jamaica police, following the holdup and robbery in the saloon of Herman Beinbrink, on Fulton Street, Hollis, was convicted of robbery, grand larceny, and assault, all in the first degree, by a jury in the Queens County Court before Judge Humphrey yesterday morning at 6 o'clock. The jury had been out thirteen hours.

Private Harry Cohen, 20 years old, of 534 Graham Avenue, Brooklyn, recently pleaded guilty in the same case and will be sentenced with Smithson next week. The other two soldiers are still in jail awaiting trial. They are Sergeant Otis Walker of Millburn, Okla., and Private William B. Harrison of Centreville, Tenn.

The defendants were arrested after the soldiers had opened fire on the police and a fight between the two forces had continued for half an hour and ended only when the ammunition of the soldiers was gone. Then they fled. Half a dozen people were shot. A few minutes later the four soldiers now under arrest were found hiding in some bushes.

FREE INOCULATION FOR ALL.

Public Health Offices Will Give Anti-Typhoid Serum to Those Who Apply

WASHINGTON, May 30.—Free anti-typhoid inoculation is to be given by the Government to protect the health of the nation at this time when the labor of every man possible is needed in winning the war. Secretary McAdoo announced tonight that he had directed the Public Health Service to give the inoculation without charge to all who apply at any of its hospitals or field offices.

Many of these offices are located in zones surrounding military cantonments and prevention of typhoid fever in these zones is a step toward reducing the risk of interchange of disease between the military and civil populations.

"The season of typhoid fever is now at hand," said the Treasury Department announcement, "and this fact makes inoculation at this time of great importance. The effectiveness of this measure is recognized by the army and navy authorities and all soldiers and sailors of the United States are inoculated when they enter the service."

CHARTER ST. HILDA'S GUILD.

Corporation Organized with $50,000 Capital Stock.

At a meeting at the home of Mrs. Florence Wood, Seventh Avenue and Fifty-fifth Street yesterday, arrangements were made to incorporate St. Hilda's Guild, so that its activities may be extended and its revenues increased. The guild began originally in the Episcopal Church as an altar or chancel guild.

Bishop Charles Sumner Burch made an address, and Dr. Ralph Adams Cram, designer of St. Thomas's Church, delivered an address on art and pleaded for a cultivation of its finer ideals in this war for the sake of the reconstruction that must come when the conflict is over.

Among those present who subscribed for stock were Mrs. Henrietta E. Talcott, Wilfred E. Anthony, Thomas L. Raymond, the Rev. Joseph A. Foster of Westchester, the Rev. J. R. Heffernan, the Rev. Dr. J. P. McComas of Trinity Parish, Haley Fiske, Clifford M. Swan, the Rev. Lester C. Lewis of Chicago, the Rev. Dr. Arthur W. Jenks of the General Theological Seminary, the Rev. Edward H. Schuleter of Trinity Parish, and others.

The capital stock was placed at $50,000 in 2,000 shares. Inventoried merchandise, good-will, accounts receivable, &c., of the old guild were placed at $22,700.

The members of the Advisory Board elected for one year were Bishop Burch, the Rev. Dr. J. G. H. Barry, John T. Comes, the Rev. Charles W. Douglas, the Rev. Dr. Milo H. Gates, Charles D. Maginnis, Bertram Goodhue, the Rev. Frederic E. Mortimer, Thomas Nash, the Rev. Hervey Officer, Frederic D. Philips, and Dr. James J. Walsh.

OPEN NEW RED CROSS HOME

Chapter House at Mineola Is Gift of Mrs. H. P. Davison.

Four hundred workers in Nassau County celebrated yesterday the opening of a roomy new chapter house presented to the Nassau Chapter of the Red Cross by Mrs. Henry P. Davison. Most of them were in the Memorial Day parade in Hempstead and marched the three miles to Mineola, where the new house stands.

One of the speakers at the celebration was Henry P. Davison. He said the result of the splendid work of the Red Cross during last week's drive was "a shot that will startle Germany." "If there are in the Red Cross service those that can carry a gun we want them to withdraw from it and shoulder the gun," he said. "But as for the rest, every man and woman in the ranks of the Red Cross is doing as important work, and as necessary, as the man carrying a gun."

PLEA FOR CLEAN STREETS.

Health Department Today Seeks Co-operation of All Citizens.

This is "Street Cleaning Day" in Health Drive week and the Department of Health offers the following suggestions to citizens with a request to co-operate:

Do not permit violations that will impair the healthfulness and safety of the streets. Never permit your children or others to build bonfires in the streets at any time. See that dead animals are removed promptly from the streets. Warn people who litter the streets, and if compliance is not obtained, make a citizen's arrest. Any policeman will aid you.

Know the rules regarding clean streets and know the results of clean streets. Clean streets cost money, because the uninformed and ignorant do not observe what is best for the public health.

Take pride in your home town. You may think that one in seven millions does not count for much, but if all did even a part of their duty we would have clean streets, and thus there would be better health for all.

Large litter cans are placed at convenient sections and are plainly marked. Citizens can aid in keeping the streets clean and free from danger by co-operating with the department in making use of these receptacles.

Park Gives Up German Name.

The war has caused another German name to pass into oblivion. Astoria Schuetzen Park, at Steinway Avenue and Broadway, Long Island City, is hereafter to be known as Astoria Casino. The park is one of the best known picnic parks in the city and contains the largest public hall in Queens.

FLUSHING CITIZENS BURN HEARST PAPERS

Poughkeepsie Guardsmen, Joined by G. A. R., Also Make Bonfire of Them.

A demonstration took place in Flushing, L. I., yesterday against newspapers owned by W. R. Hearst, and, after a large pile of them had been burned, placards condemning them were erected about the town. One of the signs read:

Why allow disloyal, unpatriotic, anti-British papers to be read in Flushing, when Flushing boys are dying in France to make the world a decent place to live in?

Another was:

Burn 'em, New York Journal and New York American. (How misplaced a name!) We want neither the Kaiser nor his agents.

A committee led by Harold Bennett, secretary of the Flushing Branch of the National Security League, scoured the district for copies of these newspapers and collecting them in automobiles conveyed them to Madison and Wilson Avenues, near the Murray Hill station, where a match was applied to the pile by Morris L. Beard of Barclay Street, Manhattan, a prominent Flushing resident. He scored the Hearst newspapers for alleged pro-German sentiments and eulogized the patriotism in sending its sons to the war.

As the papers flamed up a large bottle with a skull and crossbones and a label worded "poison" was conspicuous upon the top of the pile. The demonstration then turned into a parade around town in which newsdealers were asked not to handle Hearst papers. Charles Lee Andrews, president of the National Security League; E. V. D. Cox, Miss Mary Cox, Harvey D. Rockwell, and James Gillespie were others taking part.

All but one of the posters in Flushing on Wednesday advertising a patriotic G. A. R. memorial meeting had been torn down during the night by persons presumed to be pro-German.

POUGHKEEPSIE, May 30.—A demonstration against the Hearst newspapers was carried out this morning by members of Company F, First Infantry, New York Guard. Headed by a bugler, drummer, and fifer, fifty members of that organization paraded the streets, visited every news stand that sold copies of The New York American, purchased every available copy of today's issue, and, carting the papers to the corner of Market and Church Streets, in front of the State Armory, applied a match to the pile.

Nearly six hundred persons witnessed the bonfire and cheered as the papers went up in smoke.

While the demonstration was on, members of Hamilton-Sleight Post, G. A. R., arrived on their way from the Poughkeepsie Rural Cemetery, where they had been holding memorial exercises. The veterans joined in the gathering, and a great cheer was given as Major Lewis G. Deitz and Captain Plummer, members of the G. A. R. Committee which took part in the public destruction of Hearst papers in this city a short time ago, stepped from their cars and aided the militiamen in their task.

Both men responded to calls for a speech. Major Deitz said:

"I am glad that Young America has joined in this move to keep out of the city a paper that has dared to 'delete' the President's Memorial Day proclamation."

MONTCLAIR, N. J., May 30.—Resolutions calling on President Wilson to "suppress the further publication and circulation of the Hearst newspapers throughout the United States" were passed unanimously today at a meeting of the Montclair Battalion, held in the gymnasium of the Montclair High School. About 400 members were present.

The resolution called upon the Mayor and the Commissioners of the town to enact such ordinances as may be necessary to prohibit the sale and distribution of the Hearst papers in Montclair. The resolution follows:

Whereas, we, the members of the five companies of the Montclair Battalion, believing that the so-called Hearst newspapers are, and have been for years past, exercising a seditious and dangerous influence throughout the United States, which it is the duty of the Government and every true citizen to combat by all lawful means; and

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that we respectfully call upon the President of the United States, through the ample powers reposed in him, to suppress the further publication and circulation by means of the mails and otherwise of the so-called Hearst newspapers throughout the United States.

Mayor Louis F. Dodd, at the last meeting of the Board of Commissioners, said that he had conferred with three of the local newsdealers on the subject of the Hearst papers and that they had promised that they would endeavor to make an arrangement with the other dealers of the town whereby the sale and distribution of the Hearst papers in Montclair would no longer be carried on by them.

RAHWAY, N. J., May 30.—Mayor David H. Trembly, in a proclamation today, requested all citizens to refrain from purchasing or reading The New York American and The New York Evening Journal until such time as these papers shall be in favor of this Government. The Mayor also asked newsdealers not to handle those papers.

The Conference of Death

The Germans had captured Liege, Namur and other Belgian towns. They were sweeping into France, triumphantly marching to Paris.

Wangenheim, German Ambassador to Turkey, drunk with the success of German plans, disclosed Imperial secrets to the American Ambassador in Turkey.

He told about the conference at Potsdam, July 5, 1914, where the decision for war was made.

There, with the Kaiser presiding, was Wangenheim, Moltke, then Chief of Staff, Admiral Von Tirpitz, as well as the great bankers, railroad directors and the captains of German industry. All were ready for war except the financiers, who demanded two weeks' time

What happened during those two weeks is only one of the many intimate inside stories of German treachery and German plans for world domination. Now, for the first time, you are taken behind the scenes and shown the real Germany. Every red blooded American must read
